Acknowledgments

INTRODUCTION

This book provides all the key words and phrases you are likely to need in everyday situations. It is grouped into themes, and key phrases are broken down into short sections, to help you build a wide variety of sentences. A lot of the vocabulary is illustrated to make it easy to remember, and “You may hear” boxes feature questions that you are likely to hear. At the back of the book there is a menu guide, listing about 300 food terms, and a 2,000-word dictionary. Numbers and the most useful phrases are listed on the inside covers for quick reference.

Nouns

In Chinese, the plural of nouns is normally the same as the singular. There is also no direct equivalent of the English “a/an” or “the.”

Adjectives

Chinese adjectives may have different endings depending on how they are used, and are also very often preceded by hen (“very”).

Verbs

Verbs have no tenses and do not generally change according to who or what is the subject, but there are some characters that can be added in order to indicate a particular mood or time:

to come	lai
is coming	lai le
isn't coming	bu lai le
came	lai guo
didn't come	mei lai guo
please come!	lai ba!

Pronunciation guide

The Chinese phrases in this book are given in Mandarin Chinese, the main language of the People's Republic of China (PRC). Below each Chinese word or phrase, you will find a pronunciation guide in italics. The pronunciation is written in pinyin, the official romanization system used in the PRC. Most pinyin spellings reflect the nearest equivalent sound in English, but some are different, so take note of how the letters below are pronounced.

- c like ts in sits
- e like ay in pay
- i like ee in see
- q like ch in chin
- v u pronounced with rounded lips, like few in English or über in German
- x like sh in ship
- z like ds in kids
- zh like j in just

Take care to pronounce vowels individually: xie (shoe), for example, is pronounced "shee-ay"

Mandarin Chinese has four tones that affect how a word is pronounced. Each syllable is pronounced with one of four tones: high, rising, falling-rising, or falling. These tones can be written as accents on the pinyin, but are not really helpful to a beginner. Use the audio CD that accompanies this phrase book or find a native speaker to help you with pronunciation, then you can use the pinyin as a memory aid. You will gradually develop an ear for the tones of the most common words and phrases. Also, even if you don't pronounce a word absolutely correctly, the context in which you use it will mean that you are often still understood.

ESSENTIALS

In this section, you will find the essential words and useful phrases that you will need for basic everyday talk and situations in China. Traditionally, when Chinese people greet each other, they cup one hand inside the other, in front of the chest, and they may nod or bow slightly. However, due to increasing Western influence, they may shake hands with you now instead, especially if you are traveling to China on business.

GETTING AROUND

China has an excellent rail network, which links all the major cities and smaller towns, as well as an extensive bus system for long-distance travel. Most of the big cities have their own underground subway systems as well as taxis and public buses. Although you can rent a car in many cities, you can usually only drive within the city limits, and may have to hire a driver if you wish to travel farther afield around this vast country.

EATING OUT

It is easy to eat well and inexpensively in China. Not only can you choose from a wide range of Western-style cafés and traditional Chinese teahouses and restaurants, but you can also try many different regional cuisines, from the fiery dishes of Sichuan to traditional Peking duck and the dim sum of Cantonese cooking. Chinese people usually eat early, so lunch is served from 11 a.m. onward and dinner from 5 p.m.

PLACES TO STAY

China offers the visitor a wide range of places to stay, with something to suit everyone's personal preferences and budget. These range from luxurious four- and five-star hotels, managed by international chains, to traditional Chinese spas, budget hotels, and even youth hostels. Although you cannot go camping in China, you can rent an apartment for longer stays.

SHOPPING

As well as small shops, street bazaars, and bustling markets, there are now department stores and shopping malls in many cities, where you can buy a wide range of goods. Most stores open between 8:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. in summer but may stay open longer in winter. Many do not accept credit cards.

SIGHTSEEING

For the traveler, there is so much to see in a vast country like China, ranging from city museums and temples to the famous tourist sights, such as the Great Wall of China. Most museums are open all day from 8 a.m. onward, although some close for lunch. Virtually no sights are free and you will have to pay an admission fee to enter most temples, museums, parks, and wildlife reserves.

SPORTS AND LEISURE

China can offer the traveler a wide range of cultural events, entertainments, leisure activities, and sports. Although theater and opera appeal only to a minority, most people enjoy going to the movie theater and karaoke bars, and watching or playing sports. In addition to traditional pursuits, such as martial arts, wrestling, and kite flying, games such as table tennis, badminton, basketball, and soccer are increasingly popular, and you can even go skiing in the northeast of the country.

HEALTH

Unlike in the United States, most Chinese doctors are based in hospitals; you will need to make an appointment to see one. Many pharmacies stock Western medicines as well as traditional Chinese remedies and can treat you for most minor health problems. It is a good idea to familiarize yourself with a few basic phrases for use in an emergency or in case you need to visit a pharmacy or doctor.

EMERGENCIES

In the event of an emergency, you should dial one of the following emergency numbers: 110 for the police, 119 for the fire department, and 120 for an ambulance. If you are the victim of a crime or you lose your passport and money, you should report the incident to the police, although it may be best to seek advice first from your local embassy or consulate staff, who will be able to help you.
