SAN DIEGO'S TOP 10

TOP 10 San Diego Highlights

Blessed by a sunny climate that never varies ten degrees from moderate and a splendid setting along the Pacific Ocean, San Diegans can well boast they live the California Dream. Although non-stop outdoor recreation, a vibrant downtown, and world-class attractions keep the city's spirit young, its heart lies in its Spanish beginnings as the birthplace of California.

1 Gaslamp Quarter

Old-fashioned wrought-iron gas lamps lead the way to the hottest scene in town. Rocking nightspots and a dazzling selection of restaurants give life to San Diego's original Victorian downtown (see pp8-9).

2 Embarcadero

With its nautical museums, vintage ships, and superb views across a harbor busy with sailboats, ferries, and battleships, the Embarcadero links the city to its ocean heritage (see pp10-13).

3 Balboa Park & San Diego Zoo

San Diegans take pride in having one of the finest urban parks in the world. Its famous zoo, fascinating museums, and exquisite gardens offer endless activities (see pp14-19).

4 Old Town State Historic Park

The original location and social center of San Diego until 1872, adobe houses, old wood-frame buildings, and artifacts belonging to its pioneer families have been faithfully restored (see pp22-3).

5 Coronado

This idyllic community is recognizable throughout the world by the fabulous Hotel del Coronado. Coronado's white sandy beaches, sidewalk cafés, and oceanfront mansions have enticed visitors for over a century (see pp24-5).

6 Point Loma

In 1542, Juan Cabrillo arrived at Ballast Point, claiming California for Spain. Once a whaling, fishing, and leather processing center, stunning homes and marinas now grace Point Loma's waterfront (see pp26–7).

7 Mission San Diego de Alcalá

Father Junípero Serra established this mission in 1769. The first of 21, the mission aimed to Christianize the Native Americans and affirm Spain's presence in California (see pp28–9).

8 SeaWorld

At one of the premiere attractions of Southern California, leaping killer whales, cavorting dolphins, and promenading sea lion divas entertain over four million visitors a year (see pp30–31).

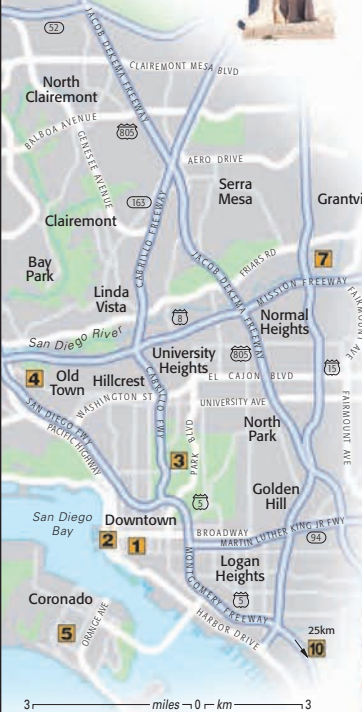

9 La Jolla

Multi-million-dollar seaside villas, boutiques, and elegant restaurants line the streets of this exclusive community, which is also noted for its prestigious biotech and oceanographic research institute (see pp32–3).

10 Tijuana

Only 20 minutes south of San Diego but a whole world away, this famous border town offers great shopping and top-rated restaurants. And yes, striped burros and black velvet Elvis paintings still exist (see pp34–5).

TOP 10 Gaslamp Quarter

A hip nightlife, trendy restaurants, and unique boutiques compete for attention in San Diego's most vibrant neighborhood. Alonzo Horton's 1867 New Town (see p38) seemed doomed to the wrecking ball in the 1970s, but a civic revitalization program transformed the dilapidated area into a showcase destination. By 1980, the Gaslamp Quarter was decreed a National Historic District with its quaint Victorian, Italianate, and Renaissance structures.

Stop at the Cheese Shop (627 4th Ave) for sandwiches, or at the Ghirardelli Chocolate Shop (643 5th Ave) for a hot fudge sundae.

Parking is difficult at weekends, especially if there's a ballgame over at Petco Park. Take the San Diego Trolley; it stops right at Gaslamp.

1 William Heath Davis House

Named after the man who tried but failed to develop San Diego in 1850, the museum is home to the Gaslamp Quarter Historical Foundation. It is the oldest wooden structure in downtown San Diego (above).

2 Louis Bank of Commerce

A bank until 1893, this Victorian structure (right) became Wyatt Earp's (see p39) favorite bar. It once contained the Golden Poppy Hotel, a notorious brothel. Present-day offices are much tamer.

3 San Diego Hardware

Once a dance hall, then a five-and-dime store, this building housed one of San Diego's oldest businesses, founded in 1892. Though the store relocated in 2006, the original storefront remains.

4 Old City Hall

Dating from 1874, this Italianate building features 16-ft (5-m) ceilings, brick arches, classical columns, and a wrought-iron cage elevator. In 1900, the entire city government would fit inside. Today, the building houses shops and a restaurant.

5 Balboa Theatre

This landmark 1,500-seat theater (right) started out as a grand cinema with waterfalls flanking the stage. Notice the beautiful tiled dome on the roof. A restoration project converted the building into a venue for live performances.

9 Lincoln Hotel

Built in 1913, the four-story tiled structure features Chinese elements, the original beveled glass in its upper stories, and its original green-and-white ceramic tile facade. Japanese prisoners were housed here before departing for internment camps during World War II.

10 Wrought-iron Gas Lamps

Although San Diego's historic district is named after the quaint green wrought-iron gas lamps that line the streets, they run on electricity.

6 Yuma Building

Captain Wilcox of the US Invincible owned downtown's first brick structure in 1888. The building (below) was named for his business dealings in Yuma, Arizona. Residential lofts with bay windows now occupy its upper levels.

7 Keating Building

Fannie Keating built this Romanesque-style building (above) in 1890 in honor of her husband George. It once housed the town's most prestigious offices.

8 Ingle Building

The Hard Rock Café was once known as the Golden Lion Tavern. Note the lion sculptures, the stained-glass windows, and the 1906 stained-glass dome over the bar.

Stingaree District

After its legitimate businesses relocated in the late 19th century, New Town was home to 120 brothels, opium dens, 71 saloons, and gambling halls, some operated by famous lawman Wyatt Earp. It became known as "Stingaree" because one could be stung on its streets as easily as by the stingaree fish in the bay. After police unsuccessfully tried cleaning up Stingaree in 1912, it slowly disintegrated into a slum until rescued by the Gaslamp Quarter Foundation some 50 years later.

If you want to enjoy the architecture, come during the day when the district is less crowded.

TOP 10 Embarcadero

Ever since Juan Cabrillo sailed into San Diego Bay in 1542 (see p38), much of the city's life has revolved around its waterfront. Pioneers stepped ashore on its banks; immigrants worked as whalers and fishermen; the US Navy left an indelible mark with its shipyards and warships. Tourism has added another layer to the harbor's lively atmosphere. The Embarcadero welcomes visitors with its art displays, walkways, nautical museums, harbor cruises, and benches on which to sit and enjoy the uninterrupted harbor activity.

1 San Diego County Administration Center

Dedicated by President F. Roosevelt, the 1936 civic structure (above) looks especially magisterial when flood-lit at night. Enter through the west door and feel free to wander about (see p44).

2 San Diego Harbor

One of the greatest attractions of the Embarcadero is watching the bustling harbor, as Navy destroyers, aircraft carriers, ferries, cruise ships, and sailboats glide past. Be a part of the action by taking a harbor cruise.

3 Maritime Museum

Nautical lovers can marvel at Medea, Star of India (below), and Berkeley. All three vintage ships have been restored to their former glory (see p42).

4 Piers

Glistening cruise ships bound for Mexico and the Panama Canal tie up at B Street Pier. Harbor cruises and ferries to Coronado can be caught nearby.

5 Santa Fe Depot
The train cars may be modern, but the atmosphere recalls the stylish days of rail travel. The interiors of the Spanish-Colonial style building are resplendent with burnished oak benches, original tiles (left), bronze-and-glass chandeliers, and wonderful friezes depicting Native American themes.

9 Embarcadero Marina Park

Relax on one of the grassy expanses to enjoy the excellent views of the harbor and Coronado Bridge. Joggers and bicyclists use the paths around the park (see p47), and on weekends, entertainers and artists demonstrate their work.

10 San Diego Convention Center

The center was designed along nautical lines to complement the waterfront location, with its flying buttresses, skylight tubes, and rooftop sails.

6 San Diego Aircraft Carrier Museum

The 1,000-ft (305-m) USS Midway (see pp12-13), commissioned in 1945, was once the world's largest warship. Many docents on board are veterans who served on the carrier.

8 Seaport Village

New England and Spanish design blend eclectically in this waterfront area with brilliant harbor views (above & p49).

7 Tuna Harbor

San Diego was once home to the world's largest tuna fleet, with 200 commercial boats. Portuguese immigrants dominated the trade until the canneries moved to Mexico and Samoa. Even today, some tuna boats remain and the US Tuna Foundation still keeps its offices here (right).

San Diego & the Military

San Diego has had strong military ties ever since the Spanish built the presidio (fortress) in 1769. Hosting the largest military complex in the world, the military contributes handsomely to the local economy. Their presence is everywhere: Navy SEALs train at Coronado, three aircraft carriers and warships berth in the harbor, and Marines land amphibious tanks along Camp Pendleton. Ship parades and tours are popular events during San Diego's September/October Fleet Week.

USS Midway

TOP 10 Aircraft Carrier Museum: USS Midway

1 Hangar Deck
The hangar deck stored the carrier's aircraft, with large elevators raising planes up to the flight deck as needed. Now the carrier's entry level, it has audio-tour headsets, aircraft displays, a gift shop, café, and restrooms. Don't miss the 24-ft (7-m) Plexiglas model of the Midway used by shipbuilders in World War II to construct the carrier.

2 Island
Sometimes called the Superstructure, ladders take you up to the navigation room and bridge, from where the ship's movements were commanded. The flight control deck oversaw aircraft operations.

3 Flight Deck
The area of the Midway's flight deck is roughly 4 acres (1.6 ha) in size. Additional aircraft are on display here, as well as the entry to the Island. The flight deck was where dramatic take-offs and landings took place – take-offs

Flight deck talk on the USS Midway

were from the bow while the angled deck was used for landings.

4 Aircraft
Nearly two dozen planes and helicopters are on display on the flight and hangar decks. Among the displays are the F-14 Tomcat, which flies at speeds exceeding Mach 2, a F-4 Phantom, and A-6 Intruder. The Midway once held up to 80 aircraft of various types.

5 Galley
The Midway could store up to 1.5-million lbs (680,388 kg) of dry provisions and a quarter-million lbs (113,398 kg) of meat and vegetables to feed a crew who ate 13,000 meals daily.

6 Post Office
The Midway's crew often had to wait several weeks at a time for a Carrier Onboard Delivery flight to receive letters from home. The post office was also in charge of the disbursement of money orders.

7 Berthing Spaces
Sleeping berths for 400 of the 4,500 crew members are displayed on the hangar deck. Beds were too short to be comfortable for anyone over 6 ft (1.8 m), and the accompanying metal lockers could hold barely more than a uniform. Enlisted men were often just out of high school.

8 Arresting Wire & Catapults

Notice the arresting wire on the flight deck. This enabled a pilot to land a 20-ton jet cruising at 150 miles (241 km) an hour on an area the size of a tennis court. A hook attached to the tail of a plane grabbed the wire during landing. Two steam catapults helped propel the plane for take-off.

9 Virtual Reality Flight Simulations

For an additional price, which also includes a briefing, a flight suit, and 30 minutes of flight, you can experience flying a plane by taking the controls of a flight simulator. Also on hand are several standard flight stations, where, for another ticket, you can practice taking off from a carrier.

- Hangar Deck and Forecastle

10 Metal Shop

Located on the mess deck, the metal shop produced metal structures and replicated metal parts for the ship or its aircraft. Self-sufficiency and versatility were the keywords for tours of duty when the ship would be away for months at a time.

History of the Midway

Commissioned on September 10, 1945, the Midway was named after the Battle of Midway, which was the turning point for the Allies in the War of the Pacific. She remained the largest ship in the world for ten years, and was the first ship too large to transit the Panama Canal. After the fall of Saigon on April 30, 1975, she saw further action during Operation Desert Storm in 1991, and finished her years of service by evacuating military personnel threatened by the 1991 eruption of Mount Pinatubo in the Philippines. The Midway was decommissioned in 1992.

TOP 10 Balboa Park

Butterfly

For over 100 years, Balboa Park has awed San Diegans with its romantic hillside setting, lush landscaping, and splendid architecture. The park's magnificent Spanish architecture dates from the 1915–16 Panama-California Exposition. On weekends, thousands of visitors come to indulge their interests, whether it's for recreation, Shakespeare or art. However, the park is probably best known as the home of the world-famous San Diego Zoo, where almost 4,000 animals and 800 species reside.

Learn about electricity, digital recording, tornados, and explore sense and touch in the Gallery of Illusions and Perceptions. Catch an IMAX movie or learn some astronomy at a planetarium show (see p52).

2 Casa del Prado

Rebuilt from a 1915 exposition hall, this Spanish-Colonial building (above) is an outstanding structure. Wall reliefs commemorate Father Junípero Serra and Juan Cabrillo. It is now used for community events.

3 Old Globe Theatres

The Tony-winning Old Globe Theatre (below), Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre, and Lowell Davies Festival Theatre form a cultural resource (see p50).

4 El Cid Statue

Rodrigo Diaz de Vivar, Campeador, better known as the Spanish hero El Cid, overlooks the Plaza de Panama. This 23-ft (7-m) tall bronze sculpture (right) was dedicated in 1930 as a symbolic guardian of Balboa Park.

6 House of Hospitality

Modeled on a hospital in Spain, this building was erected in 1915 for the Panama-California Exposition and reconstructed in the 1990s. It is now a visitor's center with helpful staff.

7 Spanish Village Art Center

Richard Requa (see p39), architect of the 1935–36 Exposition, wanted visitors to experience the simple life of a Spanish village. This complex now houses 37 studios where craftspeople and artists display their creations (below & p43).

8 San Diego Zoo

In this zoo (see pp16–17), thousands of animals thrive in recreated natural habitats. Thanks to successful breeding programs and webcams, endangered baby pandas (below) are now animal superstars.

5 California Building

Built for the 1915–16 Exposition, this building (above) with its 200-ft (61-m) tower has come to represent San Diego's identity. Famous figures of the city's past are represented on the exquisite façade. Inside is the Museum of Man (see p18).

9 Spreckels Organ Pavilion

One of the largest outdoor organs in the world contains 4,530 pipes (below). The metal curtain protecting the organ weighs close to 12 tons. Organ recitals are held every Sunday.

10 House of Pacific Relations

Founded in 1935, these cottages feature cultural ambassadors from 30 countries, who showcase their local traditions and histories.

Balboa Park & World War II

More than 2,000 beds were lined up in Balboa Park's museums to accommodate those wounded in the 1941 Pearl Harbor attack. All buildings were requisitioned for barracks. The park became one of the largest hospital training centers in the world: 600 Navy nurses were stationed at the House of Hospitality, the Globe Theatre became a scullery and the lily pond served as a rehab pool. In 1947, the military returned the park to the city.

Performers at the House of Pacific Relations present ethnic songs and dances every Sunday from March to October.

The giant panda superstars spend most of their day eating bamboo, oblivious to millions of adoring fans that line up for a glimpse or to watch them via a 24-hour panda cam. Five panda births have occurred at the zoo in the last nine years, most recently male Yun Zi in August 2009. He can be seen along with his mother Bai Yum and father Gao Gao. The San Diego Zoo has the largest population of endangered giant pandas in the United States.

2 Polar Bear Plunge

In this recreated Arctic tundra habitat, polar bears lounge about and frolic in the chilly water of a 130,000-gallon plunge pool. Sometimes, for a special enrichment treat, zookeepers fill the enclosure with 18 tons of shaved snow for the bears to play in. Don't

3 Scripps Aviary

Inside a massive mesh cage, experience an exotic rainforest with sounds of cascading water and more than 130 chirping, cawing, and screeching African birds. Sit on a bench amid lush vegetation and try to spot a silvery-checked hornbill or gold-breasted starling.

4 Gorilla Tropics

These Western lowland gorillas romp and climb over wide areas of jungle and grassland. Parent gorillas lovingly tend to their children, while others sit quietly with chins in hand, contemplating the strange creatures on the other side of the glass.

5 Tiger River

A misty, orchid-filled rainforest is home to the endangered Indo-Chinese tiger. Marvel at these wondrous animals as they sit majestically on the rocks, waterfalls flowing behind them. This natural habitat was created to resemble their native jungle environment, with steep slopes, logs to climb on, and a warm cave near the viewing window.

Tarantula

9 Reptile House

If it slithers, hisses, or rattles, it's here.

Be glad these animals, especially the king cobra, Albino python, and Gila monsters, are behind glass. Cages marked with a red dot indicate the venomous ones.

6 Ituri Forest

Meet Otis, several thousand pounds of male hippo, who lives in this re-creation of the Congo River Basin with female Funani. The hippos share their jungle home with forest buffaloes, swamp monkeys, and okapis, whose prehensile, long black tongues enable them to grab nearby leaves to eat.

7 Elephant Odyssey

The endangered African and Asian elephants consume up to 125 lbs (57 kgs) of hay and 30 gallons of water a day. Keep your camera ready, as the elephants often toss barrels or scratch their back under a special roller. Asian elephants have dome-shaped backs, while the ears of an African elephant are shaped like the African continent.

Children's Zoo

10 Children's Zoo

Little ones love petting the goats and sheep in the paddock (wash-up sinks are nearby), while older kids squeal with mischievous glee at the tarantulas, black-widow spiders, and hissing cockroaches. The nursery takes care of baby animals whose mothers can't look after them.

8 Koalas

With names like Koorine and Gidgee, who can resist these cuddly guys? With the largest koala colony outside Australia, the zoo's successful breeding program enables loans to zoos worldwide, and makes financial contributions to habitat conservation programs in Australia.

Take the double-deck bus tour first (drivers are fun and informative), and then return to what interests you.

The Mother of Balboa Park

Horticulturalist Kate Sessions needed room to establish a nursery in 1892. She struck a deal with the city of San Diego in which she promised to plant 100 trees a year in the then-called City Park and 300 trees elsewhere in exchange for 36 acres. A 35-year planting frenzy resulted in 10,000 glorious trees and shrubs, shady arbors draped with bougainvillea, and flower gardens that burst with color throughout the year.

TOP 10 Old Town State Historic Park

After Mexico won its independence from Spain in 1821, many retired soldiers created what is now Old Town, laying their homes and businesses around the plaza in typical Spanish style. Through trade with Boston, the town began to prosper. After a fire in 1872 destroyed much of the commercial center, San Diego moved to a "New Town" closer to the bay. Today, you can explore the preserved and restored structures of San Diego's pioneer families.

One-hour walking tours led by park staff leave daily at 11am and 2pm from the Robinson-Rose House.

Many of the park concessionaires sell a lot of kitsch; you'll do better outside the park, or try the lovely shops at Bazaar del Mundo.

1 Plaza
Spanish communities used the town plaza for bullfights, political events, executions, and fiestas. Ever since the American flag was raised in 1846, tradition maintains that the Old Town flagpole must be made from a ship's mast.

2 La Casa de Estudillo
Built by José Estudillo, the Presidio's commander, this 1827 adobe home (below) is Old Town's showpiece. Workmen shaped the curved red tiles of the roof by spreading clay over their legs. Thick walls helped support the roof.

Buildings in the park

3 La Casa de Bandini
Peruvian Juan Bandini arrived in San Diego in 1819 and became one of its wealthiest citizens. Following business losses, his home was turned into a hotel, which still operates as the Cosmopolitan Hotel.

4 Seeley Stable
Until railroads proved more efficient, Albert Seeley ran a stagecoach business between San Diego and LA. Today, this reconstructed barn houses original carriages and wagons from the Wild West.

5 San Diego Union Historical Museum

This wood-frame house (above) was built in New England and shipped down in 1851. Home to the early years of The San Diego Union, a faithful restoration depicts the newsroom of the city's oldest newspaper.

10 Bazaar del Mundo

Vibrant colors and unique shops present the best of Latin America. Andean bands and folk dancers perform amidst Guatemalan weavings and Mexican folk art (see p82).

6 Mason Street School

This one-room school opened in 1865. Its first teacher, Mary Chase Walker, resigned her $65-a-month position when townspeople complained that she had invited a black woman to lunch.

8 The Machado-Stewart House

Jack Stewart married Rosa Machado in 1845 and moved to this adobe home, where the family line continued until 1966. The structure's inevitable deterioration finally compelled them to move.

7 Colorado House

The name Wells Fargo came to symbolize the opening of the American West. At this little museum housed in a former hotel, a restored stagecoach (right) is the main exhibit.

First Impressions

In his epic story of early San Diego, Two Years Before the Mast, published in 1840, Richard Henry Dana described the town as "a small settlement directly before the fort, composed of about 40 dark-brown-looking huts or houses, and two larger ones plastered." Bostonian Mary Chase Walker, San Diego's first schoolhouse teacher, was more blunt: "Of all the dilapidated, miserable looking places I had ever seen this was the worst."

TOP 10 Coronado

Sometimes described as an island because its village-like atmosphere is far removed from the big city, picturesque Coronado lies on a sliver of land between the Pacific Ocean and San Diego Bay. More retired Navy officers live here than any other place in the US, and although the military presence is high, it's unobtrusive. For over 100 years, visitors have flocked to Coronado to be part of this charmed life. For even with its thriving resorts, restaurants, sidewalk cafés, and unique shops, the village never seems overwhelmed.

A San Diego symbol, this 1887-88 Queen Anne wooden masterpiece (right) is a National Historic Landmark. This was the first hotel west of the Mississippi to be equipped with electric lights. Don't miss the photo gallery.

2 Coronado Bridge
Connecting San Diego to Coronado since 1969, this 2.2-mile (3.5-km) span (below) has won architectural awards for its unique design. Struts and braces hidden in a box girder give it a sleek look, and its blue color imitates the sky.

3 Mansions along Ocean Boulevard
Designed by prominent early 20th-century architects Hebbard and Gill, mansions (above) dominate Coronado's oceanfront.

4 Meade House
L. Frank Baum made Coronado his home in 1904 and produced much of his work while living at this charming house, now a private residence.

L. Frank Baum was the author of The Wonderful Wizard of Oz. Published in 1900, it was the first book in his Oz series.

5 Silver Strand State Beach

In 1890, John D. Spreckels (see p39) built bungalows and tents along the beach (above). "Tent City" allowed all families to enjoy the once-exclusive beach. Today, anyone can come to dig for clams, beachcomb, and enjoy roasted hot dogs.

9 San Diego Ferry

Before the Coronado Bridge, access was only possible by a long drive around Southern San Diego or via the ferry. The ferry (below) is now only for passengers.

10 Naval Air Station North Island & the US Naval Amphibious Base

You might see navy planes flying overhead or Navy SEALs training on Silver Strand Beach. Lindbergh (see p39) began his flight across the Atlantic from here.

6 Orange Avenue

Coronado's main shopping street (right) is filled with elegant restaurants and sidewalk cafés, as well as a theater and a historical museum. Independence Day and Christmas parades bring residents out to celebrate in true hometown style.

7 Coronado Museum of History and Art

Housed in a distinctive 1910 Neo-Classical bank building, galleries exhibit Coronado's early history. Fascinating photos reveal the initial years of the Hotel del Coronado, Tent City, and the military.

8 Ferry Landing Market Place

Next to the ferry dock is a shopping area surrounded by walkways and benches offering harbor views. The shops sell beachwear, jewelry, souvenirs, and art. This is a handy spot to rent a bike or grab a snack.

The Duke & Duchess of Windsor

When the British King Edward VIII gave up his throne to marry American Wallis Simpson, romantics insisted they originally met at the Hotel del Coronado. In 1920, Wallis Spencer, then married to a naval officer of that name, lived at the hotel. That April, Edward visited Coronado as Prince of Wales. It is unclear whether the future couple actually met; it wasn't until 15 years later that they were formally introduced.

TOP 10 Point Loma

Point Loma was once one of the city's most rough-and-tumble areas. San Diego's first boats were tied up here, followed by the largest whaling operation on the West Coast and leather tanning and tallow production. Today, sailboats and yachts grace the marinas, and the waterfront homes make up some of the most expensive real estate in the city. The Cabrillo National Monument, the third most-visited monument in the US, boasts the most breathtaking views of the entire city.

Inscription at the base of Cabrillo Statue

At the Cabrillo Monument Visitor Center, some vending machines offer snack food. But if you want to spend the day hiking the trails and exploring the tide pools, bring food and water with you.

If it's a cloudy day, wait until the sun comes out to visit. Bring binoculars if you can, to enjoy the incredible views.

2 Old Point Loma Lighthouse

This Cape Cod-style building (right) was completed in 1855. Unfortunately, coastal fog so often obscured the beacon light that another lighthouse, the New Point Loma Lighthouse, had to be built below the cliff.

4 Bayside Trail

A two-mile (3.2-km) round-trip hiking path winds along an old military defense road. Signs along the way help you identify indigenous plants such as sage scrub, lemonade berry, and Indian paintbrush.

5 Military Exhibit

After the 1941 Pearl Harbor attack, many felt that San Diego would be the next target. The exhibit explores how the military created a coastal defense system and the largest gun in the US.

7 Sunset Cliffs

A path runs along the edge of these spectacular 400-ft (122-m) high cliffs (above), but signs emphatically warn against their instability. Access the beach from Sunset Cliffs Park.

9 Tide Pools

Now protected by law, starfish, anemones, warty sea cucumbers and wooly sculpins thrive in their own little world.

10 Point Loma Nazarene University

Once a yoga commune, much of the original architecture of this Christian university (above) is still intact.

8 Fort Rosecrans National Cemetery

The southern end of Point Loma belongs to the military installations of Rosecrans Fort. Innumerable crosses mark the graves (below) of 88,000 US veterans, some of whom died at the Battle of San Pasqual in the Mexican-American War.

6 Whale Overlook

Pacific gray whales migrate yearly to give birth in the warm, sheltered waters of Baja California before heading back to Alaska for a summer of good eating. January and February are the best times to spot whales (above).

Juan Cabrillo

After participating in the conquest of Mexico and Guatemala, Juan Cabrillo was instructed to explore the northern limits of the West Coast of New Spain in search of gold, and to discover a route to Asia. He arrived at Ballast Point on September 28, 1542, claimed the land for the crown of Spain and named it San Miguel. Unfortunately, Cabrillo died only a few months later from complications of a broken bone. Spain considered the expedition a failure and left its new territory untouched for the next 225 years.

TOP 10 Mission San Diego de Alcalá

When Russian fur traders neared California in the 18th century, Spain knew it had to establish a presence in its half-forgotten territory. Founded by Father Junípero Serra in 1769, this was California's first mission. Serra encouraged Native Americans to live here, exchanging work in the fields for religious instruction. Harassment by soldiers and lack of water supplies caused the mission to be moved from its original location in Old Town to this site. In 1976, Pope Paul VI bestowed the mission with the status of minor basilica.

1 La Casa del Padre Serra

The original 1774 adobe walls and beams survived an Indian attack, a military occupation, earthquakes, and years of neglect. Padres lived simply and with few comforts.

2 Church

The width of a mission church was determined by the size of available beams. Restored to specifications of a former 1813 church on this site, the church (above) features adobe bricks, the original floor tiles, and wooden door beams.

3 Campanario

This 46-ft (14-m) bell-tower defines California mission architecture. Two of the bells are considered originals, and the crown atop one bell signifies it was cast in a royal foundry.

4 Cemetery

Although it no longer contains real graves, this is considered the oldest cemetery (below) in California. The crosses are made of original mission tiles. A memorial honors Native Americans who died during the mission era.

5 Garden Statues

Four statues of St. Anthony of Padua (right), patron saint of the Indians, Father Serra, St. Joseph, saint of Serra's expedition, and St. Francis oversee the inner garden.

6 Padre Luis Jayme Museum

Artifacts here include records of births and deaths in Father Serra's handwriting, the last crucifix he held, and old photos showing the extent of the mission's dereliction prior to restoration efforts.

9 Padre Luis Jayme Memorial

On November 5, 1775, Indians attacked the mission. A cross (below) marks the approximate spot where Kumeyaay Indians killed Jayme, California's first martyr.

10 El Camino Real

Also called the Royal Road or the King's Highway, this road linked the 21 California missions, each a day's distance apart by horseback.

Father Junípero Serra

Franciscan Father Junípero Serra spent 20 years in Mexico before arriving to establish a Spanish presence in California. Crossing the desert in what came to be called the "Sacred Expedition," the appalling conditions of the march left few survivors. But Serra, undeterred, established California's first mission in 1769. He founded nine missions by 1784.

7 Chapel

Taken from a Carmelite monastery in Plasencia, Spain, this small chapel (below) features choir stalls, a throne, and an altar dating from the 1300s. The choir stalls are held together by grooves, not nails. The raised seats allowed the monks to stand while singing.

8 Gardens

Exotic plants add to the lush landscaping surrounding the mission (above). With few indigenous Californian plants available, missionaries and settlers introduced plants from all parts of the world, including cacti from Mexico and aloes and bird of paradise from South Africa.

TOP 10 SeaWorld

Starfish

SeaWorld's great black-and-white whale superstar Shamu is an identifiable San Diego icon, with 12,000 marine and aquatic animals serving as his extras. Opened in 1964, SeaWorld has grown into an internationally acclaimed attraction welcoming four million visitors a year. It also operates a center for oceanography and marine mammal research, and rehabilitates stranded and injured animals. Tropically landscaped grounds and educational exhibits provide respite from the constant action.

6 Pets Rule!

Adorable dogs, cats, and other domestic animals take the stage in a backyard paradise where trees, a fence, and a pool are used as props for animals performing amusing stunts. A great show for all the family.

8 Shipwreck Rapids

If you aren't already wet enough, try a ride on Shipwreck Rapids, a 9-person raft-like inner tube that plunges down rapids and passes under bridges where, for a small fee, others can squirt water at you.

7 Wild Arctic

Pretend you're on an expedition to the Arctic on a ride that simulates a jet copter landing. Walk past an above-and-below-water tank to view white beluga whales and walrus, and don't miss the polar bear (right).

Animal Rescue Programs

Every year hundreds of stranded marine animals are rescued, treated, and released back into the wild by SeaWorld specialists. In 1997 a three-day-old whale weighing 1,500 lb (680 kg) was found off the California coast. Named J.J., the whale spent 15 months in rehabilitation at SeaWorld before she was successfully returned to the ocean. The knowledge gained by staff during the recovery period was shared worldwide.

You might want to carry an extra shirt in case you get wet from the rides and shows.

Part 10 La Jolla

Only barren pueblo land in 1886, developer Frank Botsford bought a substantial area in La Jolla which he subdivided. Other real estate developers soon caught on to La Jolla's potential and built stylish resorts. But it wasn't until Ellen Browning Scripps arrived in 1896 with her generous civic endowments that the town developed as a research, education, and art center. Now, La Jolla sits on some of the most expensive real estate in the US. It's no wonder that residents refer to their slice of heaven as the "Jewel."

Ellen Browning Scripps

Born in England in 1836, Scripps moved to the US in 1844. She became a teacher, investing her savings in her brother's newspaper ventures, the Detroit Evening News and the Cleveland Press. Already wealthy, she inherited a vast fortune upon her brother's death in 1900. Scripps spent her last 35 years in La Jolla, giving away millions of dollars for the good of humanity. Her name now adorns countless schools, hospitals, research institutions, and parks.

8 Parque Morelos
This State Park is an ecological reserve with gardens, pedestrian walkways, and a small lake. The train ride and play areas make the park popular with families, especially on weekends, when there are clowns and puppet shows.

Tijuana's Maquiladoras

Tijuana's population is one of the fastest-growing in Mexico due in part to employment offered by scores of maquiladora factories that have sprung up. Taking advantage of low wages and close proximity to the US, workers at these foreign-owned plants assemble electronics, appliances, and TV sets. Wages are higher than elsewhere in Mexico, but so is the cost of living.

TOP 10 Moments in History

1 In the Beginning

A skull discovered in 1929 established human presence in San Diego about 12,000 years ago. The Kumeyaay Indians, present at the time of Cabrillo's landing, lived in small, organized villages. Hunters and gatherers, they subsisted on acorns, berries, and small prey.

land to the politically faithful. The resulting rancho system of land management lasted into the 20th century. Without Spanish trade restrictions, ports were open to all and San Diego became a center for the hide trade.

2 Discovery by Juan Cabrillo (1542)

Cabrillo (see p27) was the first European to arrive at San Diego Bay. The Spanish believed that Baja and Alta California were part of a larger island, "Isla California," named after a legendary land in a popular Spanish 15th-century romance. California became part of the Spanish Empire for the next 279 years.

3 The Spanish Settlement (1769)

Fearing the loss of California, Spain sent an expedition, led by Gaspar de Portolá and Franciscan friar Junípero Serra (see p29), to establish military posts and missions to Christianize the Indians. Disastrous for the Indians, the settlement survived and a city slowly took hold.

4 Mexico Gains Independence (1821)

After gaining independence, Mexico secularized the California missions and distributed their

5 California Becomes a State (1850)

The Mexican era only lasted until 1848. One bloody battle between the Americans and Californios (see p40) was fought at San Pasqual (see p41). With a payment of $15 million and the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, California became part of the US and then later its 31st state.

6 Alonzo Horton Establishes a New City (1867)

Horton realized an investment opportunity to develop a city closer to the water than Old Town. He bought 960 acres for $265, then sold and gave lots to anyone who could build a brick house. Property values soared, especially after a fire in 1872 in Old Town. "New Town" became today's San Diego.

7 Transcontinental Railroad Arrives (1885)

Interest was renewed in San Diego when the Transcontinental Railroad finally reached town. Real estate speculators poured in, infrastructure was built, and the future looked bright. However, Los Angeles appeared even more promising, and San Diego's population, which had risen from 5,000 to 40,000 in two years, shrank to 16,000.

8 Panama-California Exposition (1915–16)

To celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal and draw economic attention to the first US port of call on the West Coast, Balboa Park (see pp14–15) was transformed into a brilliant attraction. Fair animals found homes at the zoo (see pp16–17) and Spanish-Colonial buildings became park landmarks.

9 California-Pacific Exposition (1935–36)

A new Balboa Park exposition was launched to help alleviate effects of the Great Depression. The architect Richard Requa designed buildings inspired by Aztec, Mayan, and Pueblo Indian themes.

10 World War II

The founding of the aircraft industry, spurred by the presence of Ryan Aviation and Convair, gave San Diego an enduring industrial base. After Pearl Harbor, the headquarters of the Pacific Fleet moved here. The harbor was enlarged, and hospitals, camps, and housing transformed the city's landscape.

Top 10 Famous San Diego Figures

1 Father Luis Jayme (1740–75)

California's first martyr died in an Indian attack (see p29).

2 Richard Henry Dana (1815–82)

Author of the 19th-century classic Two Years Before the Mast, a historical record of early San Diego (see p23).

3 William Heath Davis (1822–1909)

This financier (see p8) established a new settlement known as "Davis' Folly".

4 Alonzo Horton (1813–1909)

The "Father" of San Diego successfully established the city's present location in 1867.

5 Wyatt Earp (1848–1929)

The gunman (see p8) owned saloons and gambling halls in the Gaslamp Quarter.

6 John D. Spreckels (1853–1926)

A generous philanthropist, businessman (see p25), and owner of Hotel del Coronado.

7 L. Frank Baum (1856–1919)

This author (see p24) lived in and considered Coronado an "earthly paradise."

8 Charles Lindbergh (1902–74)

The first to fly solo across the Atlantic in 1927 (see p25).

9 Theodore Geisel (1904–91)

Best known as Dr. Seuss, he lived and worked in La Jolla.

10 The San Diego Chicken (b. 1953)

The chicken-suited antics of Ted Giannoulas have brought international attention to San Diego sports and events.

Dr. Seuss was the author of the children's classics The Cat in the Hat and Green Eggs and Ham.

TOP 10 Historic Sites

1 Ballast Point
 In 1542, while Kumeyaay Indians waited on a beach at Ballast Point, Juan Cabrillo (see p27) stepped ashore and claimed the land for Spain. In 1803, the "Battle of San Diego Bay" took place here, after Spanish Fort Guijarros fired on an American brig in a smuggling incident.
 ☉ Map B6 • Point Loma

2 Old Town
 After Mexico won its independence from Spain in 1821, retired soldiers and their families moved downhill from the presidio, built homes, and opened businesses. An open trade policy attracted others to settle, and by the end of the decade, 600 people lived in Old Town – San Diego's commercial and residential center until 1872.

3 Presidio Hill
 Spain established its presence in California atop this hill, and Father Serra founded the first mission (see pp28–9) here. During the Mexican-American War in 1846, possession of an earthwork fortress on the hill changed hands three times between the Americans and Californios. ☉ Map P5

4 Mission San Diego de Alcalá
 Originally built on Presidio Hill in 1769, this mission moved up the valley a few years later. The first of 21 missions, it was the birthplace of Christianity in California. It was the only mission to be attacked by Indians. In 1847, the US Cavalry occupied the grounds (see pp28–9).

Gaslamp Quarter

5 Gaslamp Quarter
 Filled with late-19th century Victorian architecture, this premiere historic site was once the commercial heart of Alonzo Horton's (see pp38–9) New Town. When development moved north to Broadway, the neighborhood succumbed to gambling halls and brothels. It was revitalized in the 1970s (see pp8–9).

6 Lindbergh Field
 San Diego International Airport (see p85) is popularly called Lindbergh Field after Charles Lindbergh (see p39), who began the first leg of his trans-Atlantic crossing from here in 1927. The US Army Air Corps drained the surrounding marshland, took over the small airport, and enlarged the runways to accommodate the heavy bomber aircraft manufactured in San Diego during World War II. ☉ Map C5

7 Border Field State Park

The Mexican-American War concluded with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (see p38) on February 2, 1848. A US and Mexican Boundary Commission then determined the new international border between the two countries, with California divided into Alta and Baja. A marker placed in 1851 on a bluff in this park (see p87) marks the farthest western point of the new border. Map E3 • (619) 575-3613 • Call for opening hours

8 San Pasqual Battlefield State Historic Park

On December 6, 1846, an army of volunteer Mexican-Californian ranchers, known as Californios, defeated the invading American army of dragoons in one of the bloodiest battles of the Mexican-American War. Though the Californios won the battle, they subsequently lost the war, and California became part of the US. Map E2 • 15808 San Pasqual Valley Rd, Escondido • Open 8am–5pm Sat & Sun

9 Mission San Luis Rey de Francia

Nicknamed the “King of Missions” for its size, wealth, and vast agricultural estates, this mission is the largest adobe structure in California. The Franciscan padres Christianized 3,000 Indians here. After secularization, the mission fell into disrepair and was used for a time as military barracks. Now restored to its former glory, the Franciscan Order administers the mission (see p95).

10 Julian

The discovery of gold in the hills northeast of San Diego in 1870 was the largest strike in Southern California. For five years miners poured into the town of Julian (see p96), which would have become the new county seat if San Diego supporters had not plied the voters of Julian with liquor on election day. The gold eventually ran out, but not until millions of dollars were pumped into San Diego's economy. Map F2

TOP 10 Museums & Art Galleries

1 Museums of Balboa Park
Housed in stunning structures of Spanish-Colonial, Mayan, and Aztec designs that are architectural treasures in their own right, exhibits at these acclaimed museums constantly change, making Balboa Park (see pp14–15) a year-round attraction. Enjoy the exhibits of fine art, photography, aerospace, anthropology, model trains, and much more (see pp18–19).

2 Museum of Contemporary Art
The most important contemporary art trends are presented at this museum. Docent-led tours, lectures, and special family nights make art accessible to all. The museum's flagship facility (see p32) is at the former oceanfront home of Ellen Browning Scripps (see p33), with a satellite location downtown (see pp72–3).

3 San Diego Maritime Museum
This museum pays tribute to the men and ships that so influenced the history and life of San Diego. Fascinating permanent and temporary exhibitions educate and entertain, while several anchored ships can be boarded and explored.  Map G3

TOP 10 Architectural Highlights1 San Diego County Administration Center

Four architects responsible for San Diego's look collaborated on this civic landmark. What began as a Spanish-Colonial design evolved into a more "Moderne" 1930s style with intricate Spanish tile work and plaster moldings on the tower. Map H3 • 1600 Pacific Hwy • Open 8am–5pm Mon–Fri

2 California Building & Tower

Bertram Goodhue designed this San Diego landmark for the California-Panama Exposition of 1915–16, using Spanish Plateresque, Baroque, and Rococo details. The geometric tile dome imitates Spanish Moorish ceramic work. An iron weather vane in the shape of a Spanish ship tops the 200-ft (61-m) tower (see p15). Map L1

The temple of the Church of the Latter Day Saints is an ornate, futuristic structure. The golden trumpet-playing angel, Moroni, crowns one of towers and points the way to Salt Lake City. Interiors are closed to the public. Map B1 • 7474 Charmant Dr, La Jolla

4 El Cortez

This landmark was once the tallest building and most famous hotel in downtown San Diego. A glass elevator once led to the romantic Sky Room. Ornate Spanish details decorate the reinforced concrete structure, which is now a private condo building.

Map K3 • 702 Ash St

5 Hotel del Coronado

Designed by James and Merritt Reid in 1887, this hotel was once the largest in the US to be built entirely of wood. Advanced for its time, the hotel had running bathroom water, telephones, and a birdcage elevator (see p24). Map C6

TOP 10 Children's Attractions

1 San Diego Zoo

At the renowned San Diego Zoo, kids shriek in delight over the latest creepy-crawly in Bugtown, and build crafts at the animal-themed events. During seasonal holidays and summer, Dr. Zoolittle presents his entertaining science shows. The zoo also offers summer camps and art classes (see pp16–17).

Costumed characters at the zoo

2 SeaWorld

Kids love to press their faces against glass tanks, inches away from whales, sharks, and manatees. And there's nothing more fun than to be drenched by a performing dolphin (see pp30–31).

3 Reuben H. Fleet Science Center

Science can be fun for all. At Kid City, children aged 2–5 can play with conveyor belts, air chutes, and colorful foam blocks. Older kids go wild building complex structures at Block Busters! and enjoy other hands-on areas. In the Virtual Zone, kids can explore symmetry in time as a video camera records movement. 📍 Map M1 • (619) 238-1233 • Open 10am–7pm daily (to 8pm Fri) • Adm • www.rhfleet.org

4 Legoland

Children are fascinated by the 30 million plastic bricks fashioned into famous landmarks, life-sized African animals, and landscapes. In Fun Town, kids can drive real electric cars or pilot a helicopter; at the Imagination Zone, they can build race cars and robots. Magicians, ventriloquists, and puppeteers add to the fun. 📍 Map D1 • 1 Legoland Dr, Carlsbad • (760) 918-5346 • Adm

5 Children's Discovery Center at the San Diego Museum of Man

Located on the museum's second floor, kids dress up as pharaohs and learn about ancient Egypt by building a pyramid, deciphering hieroglyphics, and listening to the god Anubis explain the mummification process. At a re-creation of an archeological dig, children dig through sand for treasure and also learn about dating artifacts (see p18).

6 Belmont Park

This old-fashioned fun zone keeps the kids entertained for hours. They can take a ride on the Giant Dipper roller coaster, Tilt-a-Whirl, and an antique carousel; enjoy the Bumper Cars; or climb high above the ground on the challenging Sky

Ropes Adventure. If you want to get wet, try The Plunge, a 175-ft (53-m) indoor pool (see p60).

📍 Map A4 • 3190 Mission Blvd • (858) 488-1549 • Adm for rides

7 Harbor Seal-Watching at Children's Pool

Children used to swim at this sheltered cove, but harbor seals had much the same idea. The seals are protected by federal law so the beach is now closed, and children must view the entertaining crowds of marine animals swimming and sleeping from behind a rope. 📍 Map N2 • Coast Blvd & Jenner St, La Jolla

8 Marie Hitchcock Puppet Theatre in Balboa Park

Named after the park's beloved "puppet lady" who delighted audiences with her magical skills, the Balboa Park Puppet Guild entertains kids and adults alike with a wonderful collection of marionettes and hand, rod, and shadow puppets. The Magic of Ventriloquism, Pinocchio, and Grimm's fairytale classics are some of the shows presented. 📍 Map L2 • Balboa Park • (619) 544-9203 • Adm • www.balboaparkpuppets.com

9 San Diego Zoo Safari Park
This park has a large number of wild and endangered animals from Africa, Europe, Asia, North and South America, and Australia. Herds of animals roam freely in enclosures that replicate their natural habitats. Compatible animals are mixed, allowing visitors to observe their interactions. Children can enjoy the Petting Kraal and seeing the newborns at the Animal Care Center. Those over 8 can accompany their parents on a photo caravan for an encounter with giraffes and rhinos (see p95).

10 Birch Aquarium at Scripps

Coral reefs, seahorses, octopi, and undulating jellyfish have a high ooh-and-ah factor for kids. The aquarium (see p33) presents special hands-on activities, scavenger hunts, craft workshops, and slumber parties throughout the year, among more than 30 tanks filled with brilliantly colored fish. Guided tide-pool adventures for tots, seasonal whale-watching and grunion runs take place off site. 📍 Map Q1 • 2300 Expedition Way • (858) 534-3474 • Open 9am-5pm daily • Adm • www.aquarium.ucsd.edu

Silver Strand State Beach

TOP 10 Beaches1 Silver Strand State Beach

Between Coronado and Imperial Beach, miles of the "Strand" attracts families with its wide expanses, gentle waves, fire rings, surf fishing, grunion runs (see p53) and, unique to San Diego beaches, clamming. The name Silver Strand comes from the tiny silver shells that dot the sand on the oceanside. Pedestrian tunnels lead to the beach on the bayside, where the water is warmer and calmer. ☉ Map E3

2 Ocean Beach

The laid-back atmosphere of Ocean Beach (see p85) attracts locals and some out-of-towners. Surfers usually go out around the pier, and swimmers farther down the beach. There tends to be a strong rip current at the beach, so don't swim out of sight from a lifeguard station. There are plenty of facilities, including showers, picnic tables, and volleyball courts. ☉ Map A4

Playing volleyball at Ocean Beach

3 Dog Beach

Leashes optional! Your dog can run loose to chase after balls, Frisbees, and other dogs with joyous abandon. The beach is open 24 hours, so you can even come here for a midnight swim. Posts with handy plastic bags help you pick up the aftermath. ☉ Map A4 • North end of Ocean Beach at San Diego River

Sailing at Mission Bay

4 Mission Beach

At this popular beach (see p97), sunburned, sandy bodies vie for space upon the sand, volleyballs and Frisbees fly overhead, and skateboarders and cyclists try to balance drinks and portable MP3 players as they careen down the boardwalk. If the beach scene gets overwhelming, Belmont Park (see p52) is just a block away. ☉ Map A4

5 Mission Bay Beaches

Protected from the waves of the Pacific Ocean, 27 miles (43 km) of shoreline, including 19 miles (30 km) of sandy beaches, coves, and inlets, offer idyllic picnic locations. On sunny days, the water is filled with sailboats, kayaks, waterskiers, windsurfers, and rowers. Bike paths wind for miles along the shoreline, and wide grassy areas and ocean breezes make flying kites ideal. ☉ Map B4

6 Pacific Beach

A great beach-going spirit fills the air as skateboarders, joggers, and cyclists cruise the promenade that runs parallel to the beach. People-watching opportunities are endless, since Pacific Beach has a reputation of being the place to hang out. Take a walk out to the Crystal Pier Hotel (see p118), past the bungalows to watch surfers shooting the curl. Map A3

Crystal Pier Hotel at Pacific Beach

7 Windansea Beach

Legendary among surfers for its shorebreaks, this beach found literary fame as the setting for Tom Wolfe's The Pumphouse Gang. The beach gets a little wider south of the "Shack," a local landmark, but those with small children should still take care. Map N3

10 Torrey Pines State Beach

Miles of sandy beaches and secret coves nestle beneath towering sandstone cliffs. During low tide, tide pools offer a glimpse into life under the sea. Torrey Pines is a San Diego favorite because of its lack of crowds, intimacy, and natural beauty. Parking is available at the Torrey Pines State Reserve (see pp46–7) or by the gliderport on top of the cliff. Map A1

8 La Jolla Shores

A great family beach, but summertime gets crowded as sunbathers, Frisbee-throwers, and boogie-boarders spread out along a broad, sandy white strip lapped by gentle surf. Kellogg Park, which runs alongside part of the beach, is a good picnic area for those who forgot their towels. The La Jolla Underwater Ecological Reserve (see p61) is just offshore, so divers are usually out in the water. Map Q1

9 Black's Beach

This beach is notorious for its nude sunbathers. Access to the beach, which lies between Torrey Pines State Beach and La Jolla Shores, is either down an unstable 300-ft (91-m) cliff or via a 1-mile (1.6-km) walk along the beach from either the north or south during low tide. Surfers find the southern end of the beach ideal, as well as the

"Shorebreaks" are rough waves that break right on the shore.

Downtown San Diego

SCARCELY A GENERATION AGO, one drove through downtown San Diego with the windows rolled up, past derelict tattoo parlors, seedy tenements, and sleazy porn palaces. With vision and dedication, downtown has been transformed into a first-class destination for visitors and a trendy address for residents. Neighborhoods have blossomed with excellent restaurants, art galleries, and festivals; performing arts centers, museums, and a sports stadium attract visitors by the thousands. The atmosphere is strictly Southern Californian: a blend of urban energy and laid-back priorities. Nowadays, drivers fight for cherished parking spaces and casual strolling is the preferred means of transport. From the edge of the Embarcadero, graced with 19th-century sailing ships, to the beautifully restored Victorian and Italianate buildings of the Gaslamp Quarter, a district straight out of the Wild West and home to trattorias, Irish pubs, and a pulsating nightlife, downtown is a great place to have fun in.

1 Gaslamp Quarter

In the mid-19th century, the Gaslamp Quarter was the heart of a new city, but within 50 years it had fallen prey to gambling halls, opium dens, and houses of prostitution, and within another 50 years, had become a broken-down slum. Now the Gaslamp Quarter sparkles as it looks to a brilliant future. During the day, the gloriously restored historic buildings, each an architectural highlight, attract history buffs and shoppers. By night, crowds line up to dine in fashionable restaurants, listen to music, or sip the latest martini concoction (see pp8–9).

Buildings in the Gaslamp Quarter

2 Embarcadero

For those arriving by ship or train, the Embarcadero is San Diego's front door. Passengers disembark from gleaming white cruise ships tied up at B Street Pier or pass through a 1915 train depot, eager to enjoy the city's attractions. But unlike most cities, the Embarcadero is an attraction in itself. Pedestrian-friendly walkways pass by historic sailing ships, museums, shopping centers, and parks. Serious and quirky public art works and a splendid harbor filled with maritime life define this lively district (see pp10–11).

Cyclists along the Embarcadero

3 Balboa Park & San Diego Zoo

Home to the world-famous San Diego Zoo, 15 unique museums, theaters, countless recreational opportunities, and exquisite landscaping, Balboa Park creates an indelible impression. No matter the time of year, vibrant flowers bloom in profusion and pepper tree groves and grassy expanses provide idyllic spots for picnicking. Allow a minimum of a few days to soak in the park's attractions (see pp14–19).

4 Horton Plaza

When it opened in 1985, developers kept their fingers crossed that this unique shopping center would draw visitors to a declining area and help spearhead a downtown revival. It was an immediate hit – people loved the Plaza's inward-facing design, tiered shopping levels, and the 43 unusual colors of paint on its walls. Covering several city blocks, the plaza features more than 130 shops, movie theaters, and stage productions at the Lyceum Theatre (see p50). Adjacent to Horton Plaza is the Balboa Theatre (see p9). Built as a cinema in 1924, it now offers live performances.

5 East Village

Formerly a Victorian village that fell into neglect but survived as a warehouse district and artist colony, this redeveloped area is now very fashionable. Petco Park, the 2004 state-of-the-art baseball stadium and home to the San Diego Padres (see p61), is the neighborhood's major focal point. Check out the 1909 Western Metal Supply building: architects incorporated the vintage building into the stadium's structure. A Children's Museum of San Diego, shops, restaurants, and residential high-rises have opened here, with a new library due to open in 2013.  Map L5

6 Little Italy

This revitalized downtown neighborhood is one of San Diego's oldest. Genoese fishing families were the first Italians to settle along the waterfront in the 1860s. Along with Portuguese immigrants, they founded San Diego's prosperous tuna industry. Little Italy, sometimes also known as Middletown, has now become a fashionable address. While retaining its Bohemian character, Italian restaurants, art galleries, antique and design stores, and hip cafés distinguish its streets.  Map J3

The Founding of Modern San Diego

When entrepreneur Alonzo Horton arrived in a burgeoning San Diego in 1867, he believed that a new city could prosper in this location. He bought 960 acres and sold and even gave away lots to people. When you walk the Gaslamp Quarter, note the short blocks and lack of alleys, created due to the opinion that corner lots were worth more and alleys only accumulated trash.

Little Italy

7 Asian Pacific Historic District

An eight-block area that overlaps part of the Gaslamp Quarter designates the former center of San Diego's Asian community. The Chinese came to San Diego following the California Gold Rush and took up fishing and construction work; others ran opium dens and gambling halls. Filipinos and Japanese soon followed. This is the home of Chinese New Year celebrations, a farmers' market, and an Asian bazaar. Join a walking-tour at the Chinese Historical Museum (see p42), and look out for the Asian architectural flourishes on the buildings you pass by.  Map J5

8 Museum of Contemporary Art

This two-building downtown location of the museum in La Jolla (see p32), presents rotating exhibits from emerging and established contemporary artists, as well as selected pieces from the museum's permanent collection. Marking the entrance is the 18-ft (5.4-m) Hammering Man at 3,110,527, a steel and aluminum sculpture by Jonathan Borofsky. The museum also hosts lectures, workshops, and family activities, including the popular free opening on the third Thursday evening of each month, when there is a themed gallery tour.

9 Martin Luther King Promenade

Planner Max Schmidt used the idea of functional public art to create this 1/4-mile (0.4-km) promenade along Harbor Drive. Described as a “serape” of colors, textures, and waterworks, the grassy promenade celebrates San Diego’s multi-cultural heritage. Granite stones in the sidewalk bear quotes by civil-rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King. Map H5

10 Marston House

This fine Arts and Crafts house built in 1905 is now open to the public as a museum. The exterior combines elements of Victorian and English Tudor styles, while, the interior offers expansive hallways and intimate living spaces. Adorned with Mission-style furnishings, there are fine pottery, paintings, and textiles by craftsman artisans. The museum is operated by the San Diego Historical Society. Left & Center Belltower & interior of Mission San Diego de Alcalá Right Gay poster in Hillcrest

Old Town, Uptown, & Mission Valley

THIS LONG STRETCH follows the San Diego River from the Mission San Diego de Alcalá to Old Town. Over 200 years ago, Kumeyaay Indians lived in tribal groups within small settlements in the valley. Unknown to them, strangers from the other side of the earth would change their lives forever.

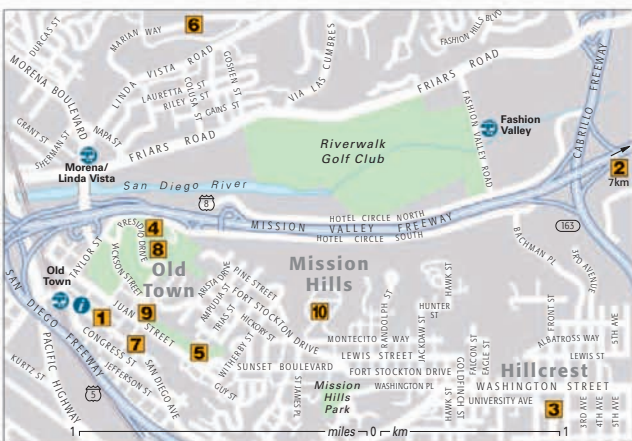

Spanish soldiers and Franciscan padres would have their time of glory here, as well as San Diego's pioneer families. Today, the valley itself holds little interest beyond masses of chain motels and shopping centers intersected by a freeway; however, on the bluffs above, you'll find eclectic neighborhoods overflowing with charm, brilliant architecture, and chic restaurants. Tolerance and diversity creates a progressive, Bohemian air, while rising real estate prices have turned simple bungalow homes into showpieces. And San Diego's birthplace is always close by.

Old Town Plaza, State Historic Park

1 Old Town State Historic Park

San Diego's first commercial settlement has been either preserved or re-created in this pedestrian-only park. Although much of the town was destroyed in a fire in 1872, prompting the development of a new town center closer to the water, several of the original structures still remain. You can wander into any of Old Town's houses and find museums or concession shops inside, or enjoy one of the park's many Mexican restaurants (see pp22–3).

2 Mission San Diego de Alcalá

A peaceful enclave among the non-descript strip malls of Mission Valley, the mission's original spirit still lingers in the church and its lovely gardens. The first of California's 21 missions was moved to this permanent site a few years after its founding. Over the years, the structure was rebuilt to suit the needs of the time, transforming it from a simple mission to a fortress with 5- to 7-ft (1.5- to 2-m) thick adobe brick walls. Its famous façade and bell tower have inspired architects to copy the "Mission Style" throughout San Diego (see pp28–9).

3 Hillcrest

Considered San Diego's first suburb in the 1920s, Hillcrest slowly developed into a residential area, offering a quiet alternative to the bustle of downtown. A trolley stop opened the neighborhood up to thriving businesses, restaurants, and theaters; in the 1940s merchants proudly erected a sign that spanned University Boulevard, proclaiming "Hillcrest" to the world. But fortunes changed, neglect followed, and the sign came down. In the 1970s, the gay and lesbian community took up the revitalization challenge and transformed the community into a hip destination with great restaurants, nightlife, and avant-garde shops. And the sign is back – in neon.  Map C4

4 Junípero Serra Museum

Constructed in 1929 to a design by architect William Templeton Johnson, the museum building is in keeping with the city's Spanish-Colonial heritage. Its white stucco arches, narrow passages, red-tile roof, and stately tower pay tribute to the first mission, which stood near this site. The San Diego Historical Society oversees the museum, which is dedicated to the city's earliest days. Artifacts from ongoing archeological excavations at the presidio, ceramics made by Kumeyaay Indians, clothing, furniture, and a cannon help illustrate the meager life people led. Climb the tower to compare today's view with that of 1929.

5 Heritage Park
Downtown's rapid expansion after World War II almost destroyed several Victorian heritage houses and San Diego's first synagogue. The Save Our Heritage Organization rescued and moved these architectural treasures to this specially created park. Of notable interest is the Sherman Gilbert House, once home to art and music patrons Bess and Gertrude Gilbert, who hosted luminaries such as Artur Rubinstein, Anna Pavlova, and the Trapp Family Singers. Bronze plaques describe the houses' former lives.

6 University of San Diego
Grand Spanish Renaissance buildings distinguish this independent Catholic university, its design inspired by the university in the Spanish town of Alcalá de Henares. Of exceptional note is the Founders Chapel with its white marble altar, gold-leaf decoration, 14 stained-glass nave windows, and marble floor. The campus is known for the Joan B. Kroc School of Peace Studies and its programs in law, education, nursing, and engineering. 📍 Map C4 • 5998 Alcalá Park • (619) 260-4600

Apolinaria Lorenzana

In 1800, Apolinaria Lorenzana and 20 orphans arrived from Mexico to be distributed to respectable presidio families. She taught herself to write by copying every written thing she found. She spent her life caring for the mission padres, teaching children and women church doctrine, and tending the sick. Nicknamed La Beata, she was one of the few women to receive a land grant.

7 Whaley House
California's first two-story brick structure also served as San Diego's first courthouse, county seat, and home to Thomas Whaley, who built this house in 1856 over a graveyard and site of a former gallows.

Considered one of the most haunted in America, the US Commerce Department declared the house officially haunted in the 1960s. 📍 Map P5 • 2482 San Diego Ave • (619) 297-7511 • Open 10am–5pm Sun–Tue, 10am–9:30pm Thu–Sat; late May–early Sep: 10am–9:30pm daily • Adm

8 Presidio Park
Kumeyaay Indians once used this hillside for sacred ceremonies. Site of the original Spanish presidio and mission settlement, a lovely park is all that's left of San Diego's beginnings. The park contains the Serra Museum (see p79) and the remaining earthen walls of Fort Stockton, a fortress that changed hands several times during the Mexican-American War, commemorated by bronze monuments, a flagpole, and a cannon. The 28-ft (8.5-m) Serra Cross, constructed from mission tiles, honors Father Junípero Serra (see p29). 📍 Map P5

Mormon Battalion Memorial Visitor's Center

9 Mormon Battalion Memorial Visitor's Center

In July 1846, 500 men, 32 women, and 51 children set out from Council Bluffs, Iowa, on what would be considered one of the longest military marches in history. Six months and 2,000 miles (3,218 km) later, they arrived in San Diego to offer support to the American military garrison during the Mexican-American War. At the Visitor's Center, a volunteer from the Church of Latter-Day Saints will discuss the historic march and Mormon contributions to San Diego and California.  Map P5

10 Mission Hills One of San Diego's most charming and romantic neighborhoods is tucked in the hills overlooking Old Town and San Diego Bay. Tree-lined streets run past architectural jewels built in Craftsman, Mission Revival, Italian Renaissance, and Victorian style. Dating from the early 20th century, homes had to cost at least $3,500, and could not keep any male farm animals. Commercial development was restricted, and only those of Caucasian descent could hold property. Still here is Kate Sessions' 1910 nursery (see p19). A Walk Around Old Town, Heritage Park, & Presidio Park

Morning

 Begin at the Old Town Transit Center. Cross the street and follow the path into Old Town State Historic Park. Just to the left is the Interpretive Center, where you can pick up a map. Walk along the right side of the Plaza and peek into the Bailey & McGuire Pottery Shop. Follow the signs to the Casa de Machado-Stewart and the Mason Street School (see p23). Back at the Plaza, visit the La Casa de Estudillo (see p22) for the best insight into an upper-class home of early California. From the Plaza's southwest corner, continue out of the State Park. Walk along San Diego Avenue, where you'll find souvenir shops, galleries, and restaurants.  Try the Old Town Mexican Café (see p83) for lunch.

Afternoon

Cross the street at Conde and backtrack up San Diego Avenue to visit the haunted Whaley House. Turn right on Harney Street and walk uphill to Heritage Park. Backtrack one block to the Mormon Battalion Visitor's Center. Turn right on Juan Street and walk to Mason. You'll see a sign indicating "The Old Presidio Historic Trail." Turn right on Mason, follow the golf course to Jackson, and look for the footpath across the street. You'll parallel Jackson to the left and wind uphill to Presidio Park. Across the grass are the ruins of the original presidio, the Serra Cross, and the Serra Museum.

Southern San Diego

SOUTH OF SAN DIEGO to the Mexican border, cultures blend irrevocably. Many Mexican citizens live, work in, and send their children to school in communities such as Chula Vista and National City. Likewise, many Americans live in the beach towns south of Tijuana, taking advantage of cheaper housing and medical care. And people flood both ways across the border to shop, to be entertained, and to pursue a livelihood. Vast stretches of empty beaches are protected nature preserves where one can hike and discover abundant wildlife. Beach towns devote themselves to the surf culture, while exclusive Coronado boasts one of the most prized zip codes in the country.

1 Coronado

In the 1880s, two wealthy businessmen, Elisha Babcock, Jr. and Hampton Story, purchased Coronado and set out to build a town. They sold lots, laid streets, and constructed the landmark Hotel del Coronado (see p115). John D. Spreckels (see p39) soon bought them out and turned Coronado into a haven for old-money gentry. The military permanently took over much of the peninsula during World War I. The old mansions, resorts, and military base exist harmoniously and give Coronado its unique identity (see pp24–5).

2 Point Loma

Over one million people a year visit the Cabrillo National Monument at Point Loma. The views are simply mesmerizing, and the peninsula ends at the meeting point of the Pacific Ocean and San Diego Bay. Half the peninsula is occupied by the military, which has prevented over-development. Spend time at Sunset Cliffs Park to experience the wind and sea and perhaps spot a whale (see pp26–7).

3 Tijuana

During the days of Prohibition, Tijuana used to be the destination of choice for the Hollywood elite and their followers, and for alcohol and gambling. The palatial, Moorish-designed Agua Caliente Casino & Spa (see p35) was so popular that it boasted its own landing airstrip for the private planes of the wealthy. Fortunes fell when Mexico declared casino gambling illegal in 1935. US Navy servicemen soon added to Tijuana's reputation at the bars on Avenida Revolución, but nowadays, the city has cleaned up its image considerably. Take the time and you'll find culture and great food in Mexico's fourth largest city (see pp34–5).

4 Ocean Beach

Unconventional and laid back, OB, as it's locally known, still has a somewhat hippie-like feel from the 1970s. On Newport Avenue, its main thoroughfare, you can still find a few original head shops. But OB is mainly about the beach: on any day of the year, surfers are next to the pier waiting for the next swell; volleyball players are spiking balls over the net; and dogs and their owners are running freely on Dog Beach (see p64).

5 San Diego International Airport

No matter where you are in San Diego, look up and you'll see a jet soaring dramatically past the downtown high-rises on its final approach to Lindbergh Field (see p40) as locals call the airport. A 100 years ago, this area was a muddy wasteland that proved to be an ideal spot for budding inventors and pilots to try out their latest machines. In 1927, Ryan Aviation (see p39) designed, produced, and tested on the beach the Spirit of St. Louis, the historic plane that Charles Lindbergh piloted solo across the Atlantic. ☞ Map C5

Shelter Island Yacht Harbor in San Diego Bay

6 Shelter Island Not really an island but a peninsula that juts out into San Diego Bay from Point Loma, the “island” is home to thousands of pleasure boats and a park that stretches along its length. In the 1950s, the city dredged millions of tons of sand and mud from the bay onto a sandbar to create land for marinas and hotels. A number of hotels still have hints of Polynesian themes, a popular style at the time. At the entrance to Shelter Island is the San Diego Yacht Club, the three-time host of the prestigious America’s Cup sailing race. Map B5

7 Harbor Island Created from 3.5 million tons of mud scooped from the bottom of San Diego Bay, this recreational island is another peninsula that extends into the bay south from the airport. Hotels, restaurants, and marinas take advantage of the gorgeous views across the bay of downtown, Point Loma, and Coronado. Facing the island along the waterfront is Spanish Landing Park, which commemorates the 1769 meeting of the sea and land expeditions of Gaspar de Portolá and Junípero Serra (see p29) which permanently brought the Spanish to California. Map B5

8 Marine Corps Recruit Depot Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the quaint Spanish-Colonial buildings were designed by Bertram Goodhue, architect of several buildings for the Panama-California Exposition in Balboa Park (see pp14–15). The Command Museum displays the history of the Marine Corps in Southern California and the wars in which they fought. Exhibits include photos, paintings, training films, weapons, and a World War II ambulance. Map B4 • 1600 Henderson Ave • (619) 524-6719 • Open 8am–4pm Mon–Sat (photo ID for Depot; proof of insurance if driving)

Tent City

When John D. Spreckels acquired ownership of the Hotel del Coronado in 1890, he felt the beauty of the area should be available to everyone. He built “Tent City,” a makeshift town that catered to the less-well-to-do. Arriving by rail and car, families paid $4.50 a week to live in tents equipped with beds, dressers, and flush toilets. Amenities included carnival booths, Japanese gardens, a library, and children’s bull fights. At its peak, the town held 10,000 visitors. The tents came down by 1939, when they could no longer compete with the rising popularity of the roadside motel.

9 Border Field State Park

As the endangered Western snowy plover seeks a place in which to lay her fragile eggs, the green-and-white vehicles of the US Border Patrol swoop down hillsides, lights blazing, in search of the illegal immigrant. An enormous, rusty, corrugated metal fence, which separates the US and Mexico, slices through the park before plunging into the sea. This southern part of the Tijuana River National Estuarine Research Reserve (see p47) attracts nature lovers who come to hike, ride horses, picnic on the beach, and birdwatch. On the Mexican side of the fence is a lively Mexican community and bullring (see p41).

10 Chula Vista Nature Center

The center is located in the Sweetwater Marsh National Wildlife Refuge, one of the few accessible salt marshes left on the Pacific Coast. Rent some binoculars and climb to an observation deck to see how many of the 200 bird species that inhabit the refuge you can spot. Or you can also take a self-guided tour along interpretative trails. Children will enjoy petting bat rays and leopard sharks. The parking lot is located near the Baysite/E Street Trolley Station; a free shuttle will take you to the center. 🗺️ Map E3 • 1000 Gunpowder Point, Chula Vista • (619) 409-5900

A Bike Ride Around Coronado

Morning

Begin at Bikes & Beyond (see p60) at the Ferry Landing Market Place. Walk to the sidewalk facing the harbor and enjoy the city view. Pedestrians and joggers also use this sidewalk, so proceed cautiously. Around the corner, you'll face the Coronado Bridge (see p24); the bougainvillea-covered walls on the right mark the Marriott Resort (see p114). Information boards on the way depict harbor wildlife and a map indicates the various navy yards. Under the bridge, the path turns away from the water. At the street, bear left and cross over. There is no protected bike path, but traffic is light on Glorietta Blvd.

At the marina, the road will fork; take the lower road to the left. Turn right at the stop-light and get off your bike; bike riding is forbidden on Orange Avenue.

At 1025 Orange Avenue,

Northern San Diego

SAN DIEGO'S EXPLOSIVE GROWTH in the last decade has been concentrated in North County. With plenty of available land, prosperous hi-tech, biotech, commercial, and financial businesses have relocated here and now play a major role in the development of San Diego. Over one million people live in communities with distinct identities and attractions. Neighborhoods vary from the high-end rural estates of Rancho Santa Fe to the more modest housing of Marine Corps families in Oceanside. North County has wide-open spaces, rural charm, and geographical diversity to spare. From Camp Pendleton, travel past vast flower farms, avocado groves, and agricultural fields into mountain wilderness, and finish up in a spectacular desert.

1 SeaWorld

Since 1964, SeaWorld has introduced over 100 million guests to marine life, with more than 35 attractions, exhibits, and shows. The park offers family-oriented thrill rides that compete with the numerous Southern California adventure parks. You can don a wetsuit and enter the dolphin pool in the Dolphin Interaction Program, or participate in Trainer For A Day, where you learn what it takes to be a killer whale and dolphin trainer. SeaWorld also hosts sleepovers, resident, and day camps (see pp30–31).

2 La Jolla

Spectacular and rich, with a gorgeous location and elegant restaurants and shops, this is an ideal destination. However, La Jollans do not sit around basking in their good fortune. Just north of the village along Torrey Pines Drive, some of the most prestigious research institutions in the world, many underwritten by La Jolla's residents, contribute to the good of humanity. Across the freeway, an area known as the Golden Triangle is a prosperous business and residential district with shops and restaurants (see pp32–3).

3 San Diego Zoo Safari Park

Many people prefer the Zoo Safari Park to its sister zoo in Balboa Park (see pp16–17). By monorail or a circuitous hiking trail, experience African and Asian animals roaming freely in enormous enclosures that replicate their natural environment. For the ultimate close-up encounter, reserve a spot on the photo caravan where an open-air truck takes you into the animal habitats. 4 Mission San Luis Rey de Francia

Named after canonized French king Louis IX, this mission was the last to be established in Southern California.

Franciscan padres oversaw enormous tracts of land devoted to cattle, sheep, and horses, and a Native American population of 2,800. Relations between the missionaries and the indigenous population were so successful that when Father Peyri was ordered by the Mexican government to return to Spain in 1832, the Native Americans followed him to San Diego Harbor. Today's restored mission offers displays on life and artifacts of the mission era. Still administered by Franciscan friars, the mission offers popular retreats. 📍 Map D1 • 4050 Mission Ave, Oceanside • (760) 757-3651 (ext. 117) • Open 10am–4pm daily • Adm • www.sanluisrey.org

5 Temecula Wine Country

During the mission days, Franciscan friars recognized that San Diego's soil and climate were ideal for planting grape vines. However, it wasn't until the 1960s that wine was first produced commercially. Now over two dozen wineries stretch across rolling hills studded with oak trees, most of them along Rancho California Road. Wineries offer tastings for a small fee, and many of them operate restaurants and delis. Two of the most popular wineries in the area are Thornton Winery and Callaway Vineyard & Winery.

📍 Map E1 • Thornton Winery: 32575 Rancho California Rd • (951) 699-0099 • Callaway Vineyard & Winery: 32720 Rancho California Rd • (951) 676-4001

6 Julian

When Fred Coleman discovered gold here in 1869, scores of prospectors poured into the region. The boom was over in less than five years, but some stayed on in this charming little community surrounded by oak and pine forests high in the Cuyamaca Mountains. Now this designated Historical District is filled with B&Bs, and it is a popular weekend getaway. Julian is also well known for its apple orchards (see p41).

7 Anza-Borrego Desert State Park

Fantastic geological formations, archeological sites, and sweeping desert vistas are only a backdrop for the wildlife found in the largest state park in California. Golden eagles soar above, road-runners dart across the paths, and bighorn sheep dot the mountainsides.

Palomar Observatory at sunset

In springtime, a dazzling array of wildflowers create a magic show of colors across the desert. Stop by the visitor center to pick up a map that marks hiking trails, sites of Native American pictographs, and the park's best viewpoints. 📍 Map F2

8 Palomar Observatory

High atop one of North County's highest mountains, the dome of the observatory has an otherworldly look. Part of the California Institute of Technology, Palomar is home to the 200-in (508-cm) Hale Telescope, the largest optical instrument of its kind when installed in 1947. Its moving parts weigh 530 tons, the mirror 14.5 tons. Thanks to computer technology, no one

San Diego has one of the highest PhDs per capita in the nation, 30 percent hold college degrees, and 20 percent of the county's adults are involved in higher education. 9 Pacific Beach

Residents here enjoy an endless summer climate and an easy-going lifestyle. Life revolves around Garnet Avenue, lined with nightclubs, cafés, late-night restaurants, and shops. The street ends at the 1927 Crystal Pier, a great location to watch surfers, catch a fish, or spend the night in a tiny cottage. Come early to claim a fire ring on the beach and cook up some marshmallows, or bicycle along the boardwalk to Mission Beach (see p65).

10 Mission Beach

The California beach scene struts in full glory along a narrow strip of land filled with vacation rentals and beachwear shops. Skaters, cyclists, and joggers whiz along the Strand, while surfers, volleyball devotees, and sun worshippers pack the sand. Sometimes the streets become so crowded on the Fourth of July weekend that the police have to shut the area down. A block away, Belmont Park (see p52) is an old-fashioned fun zone with a vintage roller coaster (see p64).

A Walk in La Jolla

Morning

🕒 Begin by looking out the front door of the landmark Hotel La Valencia (see p115). Turn left onto Prospect Street and walk past restaurants and art galleries. Before you reach Coast Boulevard, a stairway to the left leads to the Sunny Jim Cave. Steps lead through a tunnel into a fascinating, ocean-carved cave, named by L. Frank Baum (see p39). To the left of the entrance a platform overlooks the caves. Continue along Coast Boulevard, admiring views of Torrey Pines and Scripps Pier. Pass through Ellen Browning Scripps Park (see p46). Beyond the end of the park is Children’s Pool (see p53). Check out the seals and sea lions. Turn left on Cuvier Street and left onto Prospect Street. You’ll now be at the Museum of Contemporary Art (see p32). Check out the exhibits or have a snack in the café. Louis Gill designed the original museum and the older architecture in this area. Walk back toward the village and peek inside 780 Prospect St; the cottage dates back to 1904. Cross Prospect at Fay but keep on Prospect. Pass through the Arcade Building to Girard Avenue. Turn right and window-shop along La Jolla’s main street. 📖 Of note is Warwick’s at 7812, a stationer and bookstore, and R. B. Stevenson Gallery (see p99). Cross the street at Torrey Pines Road and double back on Girard. Time to enjoy delicious seafood sandwiches and light French entrees at My Place (see p100).

TOP 10 Planning Your Trip

1 Tourist Offices

Multilingual staff at the International Visitors Information Center can answer queries on activities and accommodation, and also sell tickets to attractions. Ask for a copy of the San Diego Visitors Planning Guide. The Mission Bay Visitor Information Center is handy if you're driving on the I-5 and need help with accommodation. The Coronado Visitors Center can give you a map of Coronado and suggest activities in the area.

2 Media

The San Diego Reader is the best source of the latest happenings in town. You'll find restaurant reviews, movies and theater timings, and music events. Free copies can be found throughout the city.

3 Internet

Websites offer useful information about package vacations, current events, new attractions, city services, transportation, sports, parks, and restaurants in San Diego.

4 Maps

Maps from the tourist information offices are good for basic sightseeing. To explore San Diego further, Auto Club maps give a good overview, or buy comprehensive street maps of the county published by Thomas Bros.

5 Visas

International travelers should check with their US embassy for visa information as this is subject to change. Travelers visiting under the Visa Waiver Program must register at <https://esta.cbp.dhs.gov> before departure. There is an administration fee. US and Canadian citizens, as well as other travelers visiting Tijuana for the day, need a passport.

6 Insurance

Be sure to get comprehensive travel insurance before arriving in the US, or expect large bills even if you aren't denied medical care. If renting a car, establish what your auto insurer and credit card company covers in case of accident or theft. An auto insurance policy is not valid in Mexico; buy Mexican insurance at the border.

7 When to Go

San Diego enjoys the most temperate climate in the nation. The rainy season usually begins in December, with a few large storms rolling in by spring. Winter days can be warm and sunny, but ocean temperatures are cold. Summer showers are mild, and evenings are pleasant.

8 What to Take

Casual dress is the rule. Evenings can be cool, so tuck in a sweater or lightweight jacket.

9 How Long to Stay

Depending on your stamina, San Diego's sights can be covered in a week or less. SeaWorld and the Zoo tend to be exhausting all-day affairs, so plan a light day after your visits. Allow a few days to travel up the coast or around the backcountry.

10 Traveling with Children

San Diego is a non-stop kids' playground. Hotels welcome families, although some B&Bs are not set up for children. Many of the larger resorts feature kids programs and can supply names of licensed babysitters.

Left San Diego International Airport, Lindbergh Field Right Greyhound Bus

TOP 10 Getting to San Diego

1 San Diego International Airport – Lindbergh Field

Most flights land at Terminals 1 and 2, with Southwest Airlines located in Terminal 1. Short flights within Southern California operate from the Commuter Terminal. The only non-stop international flights fly to and from Mexico and Canada.

2 Getting into Town

Exiting Terminals 1 and 2, the skybridge links to the Transportation Plaza. Flyer Route 992 is a public bus that departs every 10 minutes from 5am to 12:50am and connects with the trolley and Amtrak before continuing up Broadway. Many hotels are only 10 minutes away.

3 Private Shuttles, Taxis, & Limo Services

Door-to-door shuttles are available at the airport's Transportation Plaza. Fares are based on distance and per person. Limo services can meet you in baggage claim. Call ahead to book a pickup to the airport.

4 Aeropuerto Internacional General Abelardo L. Rodríguez – Tijuana

Located 5 miles (8 km) east of downtown, frequent flights link Tijuana to the rest of Mexico. Domestic flights within Mexico are often cheaper than flying internationally from California.

5 Customs

Each person above 21 is allowed one liter of liquor and 200 cigarettes duty free. Citizens may bring in $400 worth of gifts, non-citizens $100. Cash exceeding $10,000 must be declared. Fresh produce, meats, and plants are prohibited.

6 Cruise Ships

All cruise ships moor at B Street Terminal along the Embarcadero on N. Harbor Drive. Ships sail to the Mexican Riviera or do mini-cruises to Ensenada and Catalina.

7 Amtrak Trains

Amtrak's Pacific Surfliners arrive at the historic Santa Fe Depot. About eleven trains travel daily to and from Orange County and Los Angeles, and several continue on to Santa Barbara.

8 Greyhound Buses

Greyhound buses operate 24 hours, are air conditioned, cheap, and cover the entire US and most of Canada. There are direct connections to LA, Las Vegas, and Phoenix, and buses from downtown to Tijuana's central bus terminal.

9 Car

From Los Angeles, I-5 passes along coastal towns, heads into downtown, and continues to the international border. Shortly before La Jolla, I-5 splits with I-805, re-connecting at the border. If coming from the east, I-8 passes through Mission Valley and ends just past SeaWorld. I-15 from Las Vegas serves inland San Diego County.

10 McClellan-Palomar Airport

This airport is useful if visiting North County. Some 30-miles (48-km) north of downtown, United Express flies shuttles to and from Los Angeles. Parking costs $3 per day and is limited to 30 days.

TOP 10 Getting Around San Diego

1 Trolley

Inexpensive and fun, this light-rail system has three lines. The Blue line travels between Old Town, downtown, and San Ysidro. The Orange line is handy for the Gaslamp Quarter, the Convention Center, and Seaport Village. The Green line travels between Old Town and Santee. Tickets are available at station vending machines, and are good for buses too.

2 Buses

Buses connect with the North County Transit District, which serves coastal and inland San Diego County. Fares are payable in exact change as you board. The Transit Store offers maps and the Fun Places to Go! brochure, which details how to reach sights by bus.

3 The Coaster

A regional rail service runs between downtown and Oceanside, stopping in Old Town, Sorrento Valley, Solana Beach, Encinitas, Carlsbad, and Oceanside. Trains run Monday to Saturday. Buy tickets at a vending machine and validate them before boarding.

4 Ferry

A fun way to travel to Coronado is on the San Diego–Coronado Ferry. It takes passengers and bicycles only. Buy your ticket at the San Diego Harbor Excursion Dock or the Ferry Landing Market Place in Coronado. Ferries leave San Diego at 9am and run hourly until 9pm, Sun–Thu, and an hour later Fri–Sat.

5 Cars

You won't need a car if you're only visiting downtown, but it's essential to get quickly around the rest of the city. A few car rental agencies have cars you can drive into Mexico. Don't forget to buy additional insurance at the border.

6 Taxis

Taxis don't cruise for fares. You can usually find one in front of large hotels, the airport, or some shopping centers. Rates are clearly posted on the taxi door; distances in San Diego can make some trips an expensive proposition.

7 Harbor Cruises

San Diego Harbor Excursion offers several ways to tour the harbor. One- and two-hour narrated trips cover the harbor, Shelter Island, Point Loma, Coronado Bridge, and more. Sunday brunch, dinner, nature and whale-watching cruises are also available.

8 Limousines

For a touch of luxury, limousines can be hired for one-way and round-trip transfers, or for the day. Drivers can provide good insider information.

9 Excursions

Old Town Trolley Tours circle Old Town, Seaport Village, Horton Plaza, Balboa Park, the Zoo, and Coronado. You can get on or off all day; the full circuit takes two hours. Gray Line San Diego offers narrated tours of the city, as well as day trips to Southern California theme parks and Mexico.

10 San Diego Water Taxi

On-call water taxis will transport you to locations around the harbor. They run from 9am to 9pm Sunday to Thursday, and 9am to 11pm on Friday and Saturday.

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Driving Frustrations

Morning and afternoon rush hour on Interstates is an appalling exercise in futility. A 30-minute drive on the I-5 can take hours. Ask someone at your hotel how to time things, and know your directions well. Parking in Mission Beach or La Jolla can be next to impossible in the summer.

2 Car Theft

San Diego's proximity to the Mexican border makes car theft a concern. Even if your car is found across the border, the paperwork to bring it back is a nightmare. Neighborhoods prone to theft include Pacific Beach, San Ysidro, and Mission Valley.

3 Driving Without Insurance in Mexico

If your car is stolen while over the border, your US car insurance won't cover it. If you are in any way associated with an accident, your vehicle will be impounded and you will be arrested until liability is sorted out. Protect yourself by buying a policy before driving over the border.

4 Narcotraficantes

Narcotraficantes, or drug smugglers, thrive along the border with the local drug cartel. In 2008, a clamp-down in Tijuana resulted in open conflict between drug dealers and law enforcement, which still continues today. Visit the US State Department website (<http://tijuana.usconsulate.gov>) for current travel conditions. Visitors to Mexico should use common sense and limit explorations to popular tourist areas when travel advisories are in place.

5 Sun

Slather on the sunscreen during the day and be sure to take a hat whenever you're outdoors, especially at SeaWorld and the Zoo. California has one of the country's highest incidences of skin cancer; no surprise since people pursue outdoor activities year round.

6 High Surf

Dangerous riptides can occur along the coastal beaches; ask the lifeguards about swimming conditions at an unfamiliar beach. Posted green flags indicate safe swimming, yellow mean caution, and red flags denote hazardous surf. If you are caught in a riptide, let the current carry you down the coast until it dies out, and then swim in to the shore.

7 Water Contamination

Ocean waters are generally clean, except after a heavy storm. Accumulated and untreated runoff from miles away washes down storm drains and empties into the ocean, and sewer leaks are common. Especially hard-hit beaches are Imperial Beach and Border Field State Park. There are signs indicating safety levels of the water.

8 Smoking

Smoking is forbidden inside any public enclosed area, including restaurants and bars, although a few establishments have designated smoking patios. The city of San Diego has banned smoking on beaches, in parks, and in open spaces; some communities are trying to forbid smoking on streets. It's possible to spend your entire vacation in San Diego without smelling a single cigarette.

9 Panhandlers

Like any major city, San Diego has its share of panhandlers, most of whom are not aggressive. Downtown has the largest concentration, followed by the beach towns, including La Jolla.

10 Crime

San Diego is a safe city; most petty crime is limited to theft and car break-ins. Common sense prevails: don't walk around late at night; don't leave valuables inside your car; and don't give an angry salute to a driver who's cutting you off.

TOP 10 Budget Tips

1 Airline Deals

When flying into Southern California, consider an open-jaw ticket, with which you can fly into Los Angeles and depart from San Diego. Two good budget airlines are Southwest Airlines and JetBlue.

2 Hotel Discounts

Discounts are offered to Auto Club members, military personnel, corporate employees, and retirees. The best on-line prices and rooms are usually on the hotel's own website. Contacting the hotel directly might find you a lower rate.

3 Free Museum Days

Every museum in Balboa Park offers free entry on one Tuesday each month to their permanent exhibits; special traveling exhibits or programs still charge admission. The Museum of Contemporary Art in La Jolla and in downtown San Diego is free 5-7pm on the third Thursday every month.

4 Coupons

Stop by the tourist brochure racks at hotels, restaurants, and visitor centers to pick up discount coupons for museums, SeaWorld, the Zoo, car rentals, hotels, and restaurants. Promotional coupons can often be found in Sunday papers and the San Diego Reader (see p104).

5 Entertainment & Attractions For Free

Unwind in Balboa Park, daydream in the lobby of Hotel del Coronado, or hang out on the Mission Beach boardwalk. Hear a free Sunday concert at the Spreckels Organ Pavilion. Check out the local talent in cafés and bars. Walkabout International organizes free daily walking tours.

6 Parking

Many hotels operate shuttles to SeaWorld and other attractions. Parking at the Zoo, Balboa Park, and Old Town is free, as well as at many trolley stops. At Horton Plaza, buy anything and receive a few hours of validated parking. At the Tijuana border, park for free on the street in front of the outlet center.

7 Gasoline

San Diego has some of the highest gas prices in the US. If you fill up in La Jolla or along the freeways, you'll be broke. Look for stations away from the coast and tourist attractions; Arco stations tend to be the lowest priced.

8 Multiple Theme Park Passes

The "Passport to Balboa Park Combo" includes the Zoo and park museums for a set number of days. Other packages include variations of the Zoo, Zoo Safari Park, and SeaWorld. The "Go San Diego Card" includes the Zoo, Zoo Safari Park, Legoland, and many other attractions.

9 Arts Tix

Tickets for music, dance, and theater performances throughout the San Diego area are available for half price at a kiosk in front of Horton Plaza. A small service fee is charged.

10 Transportation Passes

Stop by the Transit Store to pick up a transit pass good for buses of the Metropolitan Transit System, the North County Transit District, and the San Diego Trolley. Passes are available for 14 and 30 days, and there are premium monthly passes too.

TOP 10 Special Needs Tips

1 Disabled Parking

Reserved parking spaces are marked by a blue curb, a blue-and-white wheelchair logo on the pavement, and by a posted sign. You may also park with no charge at any regular parking metered area. A special disabled placard must be displayed at all times.

2 Hotels & Restaurants

Hotels with over five rooms must provide accessible accommodation to disabled guests. Always call in advance to reserve one of these rooms, and specify if you need a roll-in shower. When making restaurant reservations, do clarify that you require access.

3 Transportation

All buses, the San Diego Trolley, and the Coaster are equipped with lifts. Amtrak trains have a limited number of accessible spaces and recommend advance reservations. Greyhound provides a lift-equipped bus with advance notice. The Cloud 9 Shuttle provides transportation from the airport, also with advance notice.

4 Accessible San Diego

The excellent booklet Access In San Diego gives specific access information on many hotels, restaurants, and shopping centers. Also included are tour bus companies, public and private transportation firms equipped with lifts, and car rental agencies that offer hand-controlled vehicles. You'll also find a directory of medical equipment suppliers and disability organizations.

5 Power Beach Chairs

Imperial Beach, Mission Beach, Coronado, Ocean-side, and Silver Strands have power and manual beach chairs, while Ocean Beach and La Jolla offer manual chairs. Advance reservations and ID are required. You must be able to get into and out of the chair.

6 Ramped Curbs

Every intersection and sidewalk in San Diego has ramped curbs or at least a ramped driveway. Ramped access is standard in government buildings, universities, concert halls, museums, some theaters, and large hotels and restaurants.

7 Accessible Toilets

The universal wheelchair symbol indicates those restrooms that are private unisex or single occupancy with locking doors.

8 San Diego Zoo

The park map indicates walkways where you may need extra assistance if your mobility is limited or you're in a wheelchair. Have any employee call for shuttle assistance if you need it. Regular and motorized wheelchairs are available for rent near the zoo entrance.

9 Balboa Park

Older buildings are now in compliance for disabled access. Free park trams have been equipped with wheelchair lifts, and most restrooms are wheelchair accessible. For those with special needs and with advanced arrangement, the education office of most museums can supply a staff member to escort and narrate tours.

10 Tijuana

No federal law in Mexico requires businesses to provide disabled access. Many curbs in Tijuana are ramped, but the drawback is the poor condition of the sidewalks. Yet, many mobility-impaired people do successfully navigate the streets.

TOP 10 Security & Health

1 Consulates

Some European consuls only deal with trade issues; they do not issue passports or visas. In an emergency, contact your embassy in Washington, DC or LA. Dial 411 for assistance.

2 If You Lose Everything

Before leaving home, it is advisable to photocopy all important papers. If you lose your wallet, make a police report, notify your credit card companies, and notify the credit-reporting companies to prevent identity theft. You can have money wired through Western Union.

3 911

During an emergency, dial this number free from any telephone. Be prepared to specify if medical and/or police assistance is needed and your location. Call the police department for all other matters.

4 Hospitals

San Diego has some of the country's best hospitals. If your situation is not life-threatening, urgent care clinics are less expensive. Call your insurance company for a referral to a local doctor or clinic.

5 Pharmacies

CVS and Rite-Aid have 24-hour pharmacies.

6 Helplines

If you don't have health insurance, head to a community clinic. Expect to pay on the spot for services rendered. Look in the Yellow Pages under "clinics" to find a walk-in clinic.

7 If You're in a Car Accident

Call 911 if anyone is injured. Call the police if property damage appears to be over $500 and/or you need a police report. Drivers must exchange driver's license information and all vehicle insurance details. If you're in a rental car, report any accidents or vehicle damage to the agency immediately.

8 Seatbelts

It is California law for all passengers in the car to wear seatbelts. If not, you can be pulled over by the police and ticketed. Children under six and who weigh less than 60 lbs (27 kg) must be secured in a car safety seat. If renting a car, request the agency for a child seat in advance.

9 Public Restrooms

All major attractions have restrooms, as do gas stations and restaurants. Shopping centers, public buildings, libraries, and large hotels are other places to try. Beach restrooms are an option if you can't find a better alternative.

10 Food & Water Safety

All restaurants are required to post a letter grade, indicating the sanitation level, in their front window. An "A" means the restaurant has passed inspection; a "B" is passing, but sanitation issues exist; with a "C," a restaurant has 30 days to improve or risk closure. Water from the faucet is safe to drink but may not taste great.

TOP 10 Banking & Communications

1 Exchange

San Diego International Airport has international exchange kiosks in Terminal 1 and Terminal 2. Major banks handle most transactions; bring plenty of ID. Large hotels exchange currency as well, but offer low rates. Exchange windows in San Ysidro handle transactions in dollars and pesos.

2 ATMs

There are 24-hour Automatic Teller Machines all over the city. Look behind your ATM or credit card to see which banking network it's associated with. ATMs inside convenience stores or malls charge you for the convenience, as does your own bank if you go outside the network.

3 Banks

Most major banks are found throughout San Diego. Banking hours are usually 9 or 10am–6pm, Monday through Friday, with Saturday hours from 9am–1 or 2pm.

4 Traveler's Checks

Traveler's checks are good for backup in case your ATM card is swallowed. Most hotels, restaurants, and shops cash them with ID; sometimes banks charge a fee. Checks should always be in US dollars. Personal checks are difficult to cash.

5 Telephone

If using a telephone at a hotel, ask what the specific charges are first. Coin-operated pay phones can be found at hotels, some restaurants, and at gas stations, but not all of them accept incoming calls. If calling Mexico, dial 011–52 followed by the three-digit city code and seven-digit local number.

6 Phone Cards

Available all over the city, pre-paid phone cards eliminate the need for coins at public phones. Read the card before buying it; many of them charge a three-minute minimum even if you talk for less than that.

7 Internet

The San Diego Public Library offers Internet access, as do hostels. San Diego has more than 200 Internet cafés with Wi-Fi. Several Starbucks coffee shops offer coffee while surfing. Lestat's Coffee House (see p56) and the Gelato Vero Caffe offer free wireless access.

8 Post Offices

Regular post office hours are 8:30am–5pm Mon–Fri, with some branches open on Saturday mornings. Stamps are usually available from vending machines in the lobby, and signage indicates the cost of postage for mail sent to domestic and international addresses. Hotel concierges can post mail for you.

9 Shipping

Franchised United Parcel Service stores throughout the city will package and ship for you. Regular parcel post at the post office is the cheapest, and some branches sell boxes and tape. Packages shipped internationally can take over a month for delivery.

10 Courier Services

Federal Express and UPS have guaranteed overnight delivery and reliable international service, as does DHL. Many offices sell packaging supplies. Much cheaper, the US Postal Service offers overnight service in the continental US and two–three day service internationally.

TOP 10 Shopping Tips

1 Bargaining in Mexico

Bargaining is an ancient art and social exchange in Mexico. The rule of thumb is to offer half the asking price and work up from there. If the vendor senses you really want an item, he or she will stand firm. Remain polite and remember the vendor needs to earn a living. Department stores, upscale shops, and restaurants all have fixed prices.

2 Kobey's Swap Meet

Wear comfortable shoes, bring cash, and come early to walk the 21 aisles of this enormous outdoor flea market. Merchants sell clothing, plants, jewelry, luggage, electronics, sporting goods, and much more. Always ask sellers: "Is that your best price?"

3 Shopping Malls

The best shopping mall bargains can be found around public holidays. Department stores sometimes bring in outside merchandise to sell at "bargain" prices. Malls with concierge services sometimes have discount booklets.

4 Outlet Centers

San Diego has three major outlet centers within an hour's driving distance: the Carlsbad Company Stores in North

County, the Shops at Las Americas at San Ysidro, and Viejas Outlet Center on the Viejas Indian Reservation east on I-8. You can usually find good deals at the designer spin-off shops.

5 Garage Sales

To meet San Diegans, drive around residential areas on any given Saturday and you'll find them selling items in their driveways. To locate garage sales, look for signs posted on telephone poles or find a copy of the Pennysaver, which lists addresses.

6 Senior Discounts

Senior discounts are offered at movie halls, restaurants, hotels, and shops. Some theater chains deem senior status at age 55, and many retail stores designate a certain day of the week for senior discounts. Use your AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) card when booking hotels.

7 Taxes

Current sales tax in San Diego is 8.75 percent. A non-refundable sales tax is added to all retail purchases and restaurant checks. Food items in grocery stores are not taxed unless they are for immediate consumption. If a store is shipping your purchase to an out-of-state address, you shouldn't pay sales tax. Hotel tax is 10.5 percent.

8 Shopping Hours

Retail shops usually open at 10am and close at 5 or 6pm. Regular hours at shopping malls are 10am-9pm Mon-Sat and 11am-7pm Sun. Department stores sometimes open at 7am for super sales or extend their hours during the Christmas season. Malls close only during a few major holidays.

9 Open 24 Hours

You shouldn't have any trouble finding a 24-hour convenience store selling groceries. Many Ralph's and Albertson's supermarkets are open all night. A 24-hour CVS (see p110) has grocery items, and some office supplies can be found at FedEx Office.

10 Returns

Most stores accept returns, unless the item was bought on sale. Stores usually post their returns policy in a prominent place. Many accept returns for in-store credit only.

TOP 10 Eating & Accommodation Tips

1 Farmers' Markets

Local farmers sell fresh vegetables, fruit, and specialties such as tamales, cheese and bread at special markets around the city. Seasonal produce is usually of much better quality and price than at the supermarket. Take a supply of single dollar bills to make quick purchases.

2 Lunches & Early Bird Dinners

Entrées on the lunch menu are often less than half the price of those at dinner. Some restaurants offer early-bird dinners from 4–6pm, with a limited number of entrées at a considerable discount.

3 Picnics

Make the most of San Diego's beautiful parks and beaches. Get items to go from restaurants, or stop by markets such as Trader Joe's (see p99) in Pacific Beach to pick up salads, sushi, and deli items.

4 Tipping

Most food servers expect a 15–20 percent tip; leave it in cash or add it to your credit card bill. If the service is truly awful, you're not obliged to tip. With large parties, 18 percent gratuity is automatically added to the check.

5 Alcohol Age Limit

The legal drinking age in California is 21.

If you look under 30, restaurant servers and merchants selling alcohol will ask to see your photo identification. In Tijuana, the legal drinking age is 18.

6 Fast Food

Fast food restaurants are the cheapest way to eat, are easily found, and many are open all night. San Diego is the birthplace to two fast food chains, Rubio's and Jack-in-the-Box.

7 Happy Hours

Many restaurants and bars offer happy hours on weekdays. For the price of a drink and a few dollars, snack on anything from a hot buffet to chips and dip. Some Mexican restaurants sell cheap tacos on "Taco Tuesdays." Check out the advertisements in the San Diego Reader (see p104).

8 Motel Chains

Staying at a motel chain offers standardized accommodation. Most major chains can be found in Mission Valley's Hotel Circle. Parking is generally free, breakfast is often supplied, and you aren't charged countless petty fees.

9 Apartments & Extended Stay

If you plan to stay in San Diego for more than a few weeks, consider renting an apartment.

Summer rentals, especially along the beach, are more costly. Always ask what amenities are included.

10 Camping

The only comfortable place to camp legally near the city is in Chula Vista. The well-located campground offers a swimming pool, hot tub, and bicycle rentals. If desperate, try sleeping at the airport, or rent a cheap car and sleep in a motel parking lot. RV owners can try Campland on the Bay, who also accept tent campers.

Acknowledgments

The Author

Born in San Diego, Pamela Barrus is an unapologetic vagabond, having traveled solo through some 200 countries. She is the author of Dream Sleeps: Castle and Palace Hotels of Europe and has contributed to a number of national magazines. She still finds San Diego one of the best places in the world to come home to and enjoy the sunshine.

The author would like to thank Mary Barrus and Roger Devenyns for sharing their exceptional knowledge and insight of San Diego with her.
