Introduction

If Star Wars is an extraordinarily rich and detailed fantasy world, LEGO® Star Wars™ is that same fantasy world made entirely of colored bricks. In LEGO Star Wars, all the characters, vehicles, settings, and weapons of the movies are instantly recognizable, yet subtly different. The wealth of movie-accurate details surprise and delight even the most dedicated Star Wars fans: From the targeting sensors on the front of Emperor Palpatine's shuttle to the inclusion of Sullustan B-wing pilot Ten Numb. The LEGO Group's designers are endlessly creative with the lexicon of LEGO elements—a minifigure cup standing in for headlamps on an airspeeder or a green frog from a fairy-tale set becoming a gorg in Jabba's snack bowl. (The only thing more enjoyable is encountering new elements made especially for a LEGO Star Wars set: For instance, the printed flap on the cockpit of the Mini AT-ST, which is incredibly simple yet depicts an armor plate, two viewports, and a forward sensor.) But the differences between the movie originals and the LEGO versions are as much fun to spot: A change of color scheme, a new feature, an interior designed for two minifigures rather than a legion of battle droids. Yes, LEGO Star Wars exists in both the Star Wars world and the LEGO world, and this is what makes it so fascinating to children and collectors alike.

TIMELINE

The LEGO Group released its first Star Wars sets in 1999 to coincide with the release of Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace. Models were then issued for each new movie in the Prequel Trilogy (Episodes I to III), as well as sets based on the Classic Trilogy and the Star Wars: The Clone Wars animated TV show, along with a handful of vehicles from the Expanded Universe (video games, comics, novels, etc.).

DATA BOXES

Throughout the book, each LEGO Star Wars set is identified with a data box (see example below), which provides the official name of the set, the year it was first released, the LEGO identification number of the set, the number of LEGO pieces, or elements, in each set (excluding minifigures), and the movies in which the model appears: The abbreviations "EP I" to "EP VI" are used for each of the six movies (EP I, for instance, being Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace); "CW" is the 2008 animated Star Wars: The Clone Wars movie (and ongoing TV show); and "EU" refers to the Expanded Universe.

Chapter 1: Movie Saga

Anakin Skywalker

Anakin's journey from a slave boy to perhaps the most capable and ambitious Jedi ever is filled with action and danger. Anakin has always been an incredible pilot and has flown everything from "borrowed" speeders to custom-designed Jedi starfighters during the Clone Wars. But Anakin's daring has its price: The loss of his hand in battle with Count Dooku starts a process of dehumanization that will end in the full body armor of Darth Vader.

Naboo Fighter

Young Anakin Skywalker (with a yellow face) and his trusty astromech, R2-D2, fly the Naboo N-1 starfighter that blows up the Trade Federation's Droid Control Ship. The two blaster-wielding battle droids included with this set are unable to function without the signals from that Control Ship!

Young Anakin Skywalker, in Tatooine robes, now has a natural face color and short legs (which cannot move). He fits in the cockpit of the starfighter, entering via a boarding ladder. An alternative pilot, a Naboo pilot minifigure, also comes with the set. R2-D2 sits in the droid socket at the back, with a drop-release mechanism that enables him to exit in a hurry! The ship can blast its missile (situated on the underside) at the vulture droid starfighter, also included in the set.

ANAKIN (PADAWAN)

Teenage Anakin is now a headstrong Padawan, training under Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi. Anakin wears a Padawan braid (printed on his minifigure's shirt). He and Obi-Wan sit in this airspeeder with its exposed turbojets. The Jedi store their lightsabers in a secret compartment. Can the Jedi catch up with assassin Zam Wessell's speeder, as they weave through the skyscrapers of the city planet, Coruscant?

PADMÉ
Anakin first meets his future wife, Padmé Naberrie, on Tatooine. At this time, she's Queen of Naboo, but is disguised as a simple peasant. This figure came with Mos Espa Podrace (set 7171).

▼ Swoop Bike

Padawan Anakin borrows Owen Lars's swoop bike to rescue his mother from Tusken Raiders (two are included with the set). The bike has a second seat behind Anakin. Watch out for that moisture vaporator! (The vaporator comes with the set and opens to reveal secret controls.)

◀ Jedi Interceptor

Anakin is now a Jedi Knight, with a scarred face, pilot headset, cyborg hand, and black robe. He pilots a custom yellow starfighter (actually, an Eta-2 Arcis Interceptor), with R2-D2 (head only) seated in the astromech socket. Together they fight a fearsome vulture droid (included with the set)—the wings move into attack mode and two blue-tipped missiles can be fired.

BRICK FACTS

- The Ultimate Lightsaber Duel (set 7257) featured a Jedi Knight Anakin minifigure with a light-up lightsaber to battle Obi-Wan Kenobi (who also has a light-up lightsaber).
- Naboo Fighter (set 7141) came with a small utility vehicle.

OBI-WAN KENOBI
(PADAWAN)

▲ Padawan

In Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace, Obi-Wan is the Padawan of Jedi Master Qui-Gon Jinn. With a Padawan braid and yellow face, his minifigure battles droidekas two at a time. He wears his Jedi hood when he travels in a Gungan sub and, with a flesh-colored face, when he flies in the Republic Cruiser.

BRICK FACTS

- Obi-Wan's Padawan minifigure was also issued with a Jedi hood. Obi-Wan "Ben" Kenobi also wore a hood in the Death Star (set 10188). In the Ultimate Lightsaber Duel (set 7257), Kenobi had a light-up lightsaber.

For a Jedi who's not crazy about flying, Obi-Wan Kenobi pilots a starfighter a lot of the time—though he can't help losing them, too! Kenobi trains headstrong Anakin Skywalker and goes on missions to far-flung planets including Utapau and Mustafar. Under the Empire, an exiled Obi-Wan meets Luke Skywalker and fights a final duel against his former Padawan, now named Darth Vader.

▼ Jedi Starfighter

A yellow-faced Kenobi, Jedi Master to Anakin Skywalker, wears a headset when piloting his Delta-7 Aethersprite light interceptor. Kenobi's trusty astromech, R4-P17 (styled slightly differently from the movie), provides support. Together, they duel with Jango Fett's Slove I, blasting by the asteroids above Geonosis!

After the destruction of his red Eta-2 Interceptor in the Battle of Coruscant, Obi-Wan pilots a blue Interceptor on his mission to Utapau, with bronze-domed R4-G9 in the astromech socket. Like all Interceptors, this ship is too small to feature a hyperdrive, so it must connect to an external hyperdrive booster ring. Jedi Master Kit Fisto, also included with the set, provides backup.

"Ben" Kenobi

JEDI IN EXILE
In exile on Tatooine, Obi-Wan becomes known as Ben Kenobi. His hair is gray and he wears a cream-colored Jedi robe. He appears in Luke's landspeeder and at the Mos Eisley cantina, as well as in the Millennium Falcon and Death Star (both Ultimate Collector sets).

Jedi Knights

For millennia, the Jedi were the guardians of peace and justice in the galaxy. During the Clone Wars, they become military leaders, fighting alongside clone troopers—in vain. The Sith emerge victorious and the Jedi ranks are decimated. The few remaining Jedi go into hiding until the time comes to restore balance to the Force.

BRICK FACTS

- Kit Fisto's head was the first LEGO® Star Wars™ minifigure not to be made from the resilient plastic ABS. Rubber holds more detail and is easier to cast.
- Luminara Unduli's minifigure first appeared as part of a limited-edition invitation to special guests for the launch of the Revenge of the Sith sets at the 2005 International Toy Fair in New York.

Republic Cruiser

The red Republic cruiser Radiant VII carries Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi to their diplomatic mission on Naboo. The ship accommodates the Republic captain and pilot minifigures, with seats for the Jedi in the detachable salon pod. The ship has hidden blaster cannons, detachable landing gear, storage for guns and electrobinoculars, and a space speeder mini-vehicle. An R2-R7 droid provides inflight backup.

QUI-GON JINN

MACE WINDU

A Jedi Master and member of the Jedi Council, Mace Windu is an awesome lightsaber fighter. When he rides in a Clone Turbo Tank, his minifigure wields a rare purple lightsaber, with a light-up blade. However, in the version of this set reissued in 2007, Mace uses a normal lightsaber.

KIT FISTO

Jedi Knight Kit Fisto is a Nautolan, an amphibious species whose head tentacles can sense others' feelings—an ability that can prove useful in combat. During the Clone Wars, Fisto became a member of the Jedi Temple. The head tentacles on his minifigure are made from rubber and he carries a green lightsaber.

QUI-GON JINN

Jedi Qui-Gon Jinn was Padawan to Count Dooku and Master to Obi-Wan. His minifigure fights battle droids on STAPs in the Gungan swamp, combats Darth Maul on Tatooine, rides with Jar Jar and Obi-Wan in a Gungan sub, battles a red security battle droid, and flies with Obi-Wan in the Republic cruiser, Radiant VII.

Duel on Mustafar

Teetering on service platforms above the red-hot lava of Mustafar, Obi-Wan (wearing a hood, unlike in the movie) fights his former Padawan, Anakin Skywalker, now recruited to the Sith and renamed Darth Vader. They are moved on long rods and their lightsabers glow (though they cannot be removed from the minifigures' hands). Meanwhile the pillars could come crashing down at any time!

Yoda's Hut

Yoda survives the Great Jedi Purge at the end of the Clone Wars to live in exile on Dagobah. He lands on the planet in an escape pod, which he makes into a hut. Yoda's lifestyle on the swamp planet is frugal: His dwelling is furnished with a simple bed, table, cooking pot, and barrels.

JEDI BOB

The end of the Clone Wars sees most Jedi killed and the Jedi Temple ransacked, with many records lost. All we know about this Jedi (whose name may have been Bob) is that he once flew on a Republic gunship (set 7163).

YODA

Grand Master Yoda helps train Dooku before the Count leaves the Jedi Order and joins the Sith. In exile on Dagobah, Yoda teaches Luke Skywalker. His minifigure defends itself against a speeder bike-riding Dooku on Geonosis, and accompanies fellow Jedi Luminara Unduli and Chewbacca on a Wookiee catamaran.

Sith Apprentices

DARTH MAUL

Darth Maul's minifigure wields a double-bladed lightsaber in Sith Infiltrator (set 7151) and Star Wars #1 (set 3340). In Lightsaber Duel (set 7101) and Sith Infiltrator (set 7663), his lightsaber is single-bladed.

◀ Sith Speeder Bike

Sith apprentice Darth Maul rides an open-cockpit speeder. Powered by a powerful repulsor engine, this super-fast vehicle is highly maneuverable, turning at high speed around obstacles such as the moisture vaporator that comes with the set. Darth Maul carries the single lightsaber that he uses to fight Qui-Gon Jinn on Tatooine. The bike and moisture vaporator can be recombined to create a repulsorlift laser-blaster platform.

◀ Sith Infiltrator (2007)

Darth Maul returns in a sleeker version of his Sith Infiltrator, with flick-firing missiles and equipment storage in the nose (for probe droids, electrobinoculars, and a lightsaber hilt). Maul's speeder bike drives into the rear of the ship so Maul can operate the flight controls. Two of the ship's weapons can be removed to provide Maul with a double-bladed Sith lightsaber.

BRICK FACTS

- The Sith minifigure pack, Star Wars #1 (set 3340), issued in 2000, featured Darth Maul, Darth Vader (with Anakin's burned face beneath his helmet), and Emperor Palpatine (with a yellow face).

▼ Dooku's Speeder Bike

Count Dooku's open-cockpit repulsorlift speeder bike allows a quick getaway at the Battle of Geonosis—with the Sith Lord carrying the secret plans for the Death Star. In an abandoned factory serving as a hangar for Dooku's Solar Sailer spaceship, Dooku duels with Yoda.

Podracing

Ladies and gentlemen, Dugs and Hutts, please join us at the Boonta Eve Classic, the most keenly fought and downright dangerous Podrace on Tatooine. Experienced racers Sebulba, Gsgano, and Aldar Beedo will power up their oversized Podracers, while human newcomer, nine-year-old Anakin Skywalker, climbs aboard his self-made machine, watched nervously by his supporters. The tension here is electric!

Anakin's Podracer

What's that blur on the Tatooine horizon? It's Anakin, in flying goggles, piloting his super-fast Podracer, with "glowing" power couplings and hinged front air scoops (for additional control in cornering). If Anakin needs any help fine-tuning or repairing his vehicle, a pit droid is on hand. Padmé hopes that Anakin will at least survive the dangerous enterprise.

The dastardly Dug named Sebulba is determined to win the Boonta Eve Classic—and he doesn't care what dirty tricks he uses to do so. Sebulba's Podracer has four secret flip-up weapons, including a deadly chainsaw, along with six opening flaps on the engine nozzles. His pit droid stands by at its repair station.

BRICK FACTS

- Aldar Beedo appeared in two forms. In the Star Wars Bucket (set 7159, from 2000), he was made from battle droid pieces: His head had a breathing mask and pilot's helmet. But in Watto's Junkyard (set 7186, from 2001), he had a custom mold.

In addition to pit droids, the Mos Espa Podrace set includes Qui-Gon Jinn, Padmé Amidala, Jar Jar Binks, C-3PO, and R2-D2, all watching with bated breath.

▼ Watto's Junkyard

Podracer pilots on Tatooine all know about Watto's junkyard, where they can find a spare part or custom accessory, even if the winged Toydarian strikes a hard bargain. Look, there's Aldar Beedo now, looking for ways to add speed and maneuverability to his Mark IV Flat-Twin Turbojet Podracer. Mawhonic's Ord Pedrovía Podracer is here, too, souped up with scrounged parts, though this won't stop Sebulla from ramming the craft until it crashes in the race.

Naboo and Gungans

It takes an invasion by the villainous Trade Federation to propel peaceful Naboo to consider war. Its inhabitants—human Naboo and amphibious Gungans—must band together and work with their Jedi protectors to repel the hordes of merciless battle droids.

▼ Naboo Swamp

JAR JAR BINKS

Jedi Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi land on Naboo to help its inhabitants. In the Naboo swamp, Qui-Gon Jinn uses his lightsaber to deflect blaster fire from battle droids on STAPs (Single Trooper Aerial Platforms) and shield his Gungan guide, Jar Jar Binks. The STAPs come with “invisible” stands to make them hover.

► Gungan Sub

Qui-Gon Jinn, Obi-Wan Kenobi, and Jar Jar Binks travel to Theed from the underwater city of Otoh Gunga in a bongo, or Gungan sub. The set adapts the movie's three-person cockpit model to a version with three cockpits. Lurking underwater are a manta ray, a clam, and a starfish (staples of earlier deep-sea or beach LEGO sets).

The set's instructions provide ideas (and a comic strip) for variant models, including a submersible, a spaceship, a lifeboat, and a “monster” sub to scare sea creatures!

Geonosians

▼ Geonosian Fighter

Thousands of deadly Nantex-class starfighters are launched against Republic forces at the Battle of Geonosis. These ships are specially designed to accommodate the anatomy of Geonosian pilots, and include a lifting cockpit roof, hinged steps, and a swiveling forward laser cannon.

During the Clone Wars, the hive-dwelling Geonosians are notorious for their huge factories that endlessly churn out battle droids for the Separatist Army. A winged elite class rules over this savage, caste-based society, with wingless drones doing all the work. Geonosian soldiers carry exotic sonic weapons and fly twin-pronged fighter ships.

Separatist Army

Although mass armies are illegal at the start of the Clone Wars, many wealthy commercial bodies use private forces to enforce payments and collect debts. These armies are pooled to form the Separatist army, which begins to wage deadly war across the galaxy.

Armored Assault Tank

Trade Federation battle tanks, called AATs (Armored Assault Tanks), are repulsorlift tanks carrying massive forward-facing guns. A pilot droid in the forward seat drives the tank into battle, with a second battle droid acting as gunner in the top hatch. AATs spearhead the invasion of Naboo, rolling into Theed to take the Palace and meeting the Gungan army on the grass plains.

MTT (2000)

When the Trade Federation invades Naboo, it transports platoons of ground troops in huge MTTs (Multi Transport Tanks, or, simply, large transports). This model can hold six battle droids, deployed via a sliding rack system from the hinged front hatch. Side doors open to reveal a storage compartment and a control room with a pilot seat. The back hatch opens to fire the forward blaster cannons.

BRICK FACTS

- The Trade Federation MTT (set 7662, released in 2007) was the first set to include battle droid minifigures with turned hands that could hold a standard blaster. The set also included a redesigned droideka.
- The Hailfire Droid & Spider Droid (set 7670) first appeared in movie-related box packaging in January 2008. It was reissued in Clone Wars packaging in September 2008.

▶ MTT (2007)

The larger, updated MTT carries 20 battle droids. Turning the side gear deploys the droid storage rack, while various exterior panels are hinged to allow access to the interior. A separate troop carrier deploys from a hatch in the back for the rapid transport of battle-ready droids. The set includes 16 regular battle droids, two red security droids, two blue pilot droids, and a droideka.

Buzz droids are small enough to slip through a target ship's shields and they carry schematics in their droid "brains" to identify a ship's weak points.

BUZZ DROID

BRICK FACTS

- An Episode III Collectors' Set (65771) also included the droid tri-fighter and a buzz droid, as well as an ARC-170 starfighter, mini Jedi starfighter or mini ARC fighter, plus three clone pilots and an R2 unit, an Episode III LEGO poster, and a CD-ROM, "From the LEGO Vaults."

General Grievous

The Supreme Commander of the Droid Armies is a villainous cyborg called General Grievous. Grievous does not consider himself a droid, however—and reacts savagely to anyone who calls him one. His hatred of the Jedi Knights in particular is long-standing and all-consuming. His only pleasure is defeating Jedi in battle and collecting their lightsabers as trophies.

WALKING MODE

Battle Droids

Battle droids are the foot soldiers of the Separatist Army. The advantage of these mindless mechanized soldiers is that they can be manufactured easily and cheaply in huge factories on planets such as Geonosis. Basic battle droids have no independent thought processors, although upgraded versions, such as commanders and super battle droids, are able to make limited independent tactical decisions.

◀ Infantry Battle Droid

Infantry battle droids make up the majority of the Separatist land troops. Early versions of the minifigure have two identical hands. From 2007 onward, battle droid minifigures have a turned hand in order to hold a blaster properly.

▼ Droid Commander

Commanders operate with a degree of autonomy compared to the standard infantry. They come in two versions, one with a partially yellow chest and the other with a completely yellow chest.

Clone Troopers

At the start of the Clone Wars, clone troopers wear Phase I armor, which is loosely based on Jango Fett's Mandalorian shock trooper armor. Informally called "the body bucket," this armor is heavy and often uncomfortable. Colored stripes denote rank. During the later part of the Clone Wars, Phase II armor mainly replaces Phase I armor. Phase II armor is stronger, lighter, and more adaptable than the earlier type, with many specialist variations. Color now denotes unit affiliation, not rank.

Phase I Trooper

Phase I clone trooper minifigures wear basic white armor with white helmets. Under the helmets, their heads are black, without faces.

Phase II Trooper

Episode III sets were issued with clone troopers wearing Phase II armor. Their helmets feature improved breath filter/annunciators and their heads are plain black under the helmets. Camouflage is sometimes used on Phase II armor.

BRICK FACTS

- A slightly adapted Phase I clone trooper appears with Star Wars: The Clone Wars (animated TV series) sets.
- Specialist ARC troopers receive a helmet-mounted rangefinder, a visor, a floodlight, a kama (a flexible, anti-blast skirt), a command pauldron, and two small DC-17 commando blasters.

Wookiees

During the Clone Wars, an epic battle takes place on Kashyyyk, home planet of the Wookiees. Droid armies face fierce resistance from well-armed and proud Wookiee warriors, led by commander Tarful and including Chewbacca. Wookiees use traditional wood-framed vehicles, many of which are unarmed, but the Wookiees' knowledge of the swamps and forests of their planet gives them an advantage over the ruthless droids.

On Kashyyyk, Separatist battle droids, spider droids, and tanks droids launch a massive attack. The Wookiees fight bravely in their ornithopters, catamarans, and other vehicles, supported by Republic clone troops led by Jedi generals.

Ornithopter

Wookiee ornithopters, also known as fluttercraft, are lightweight, two-seated fliers used to patrol the swamps of Kashyyyk. BRICK FACTS

- In 2009, LEGO made an exclusive Luke Skywalker minifigure for DK's LEGO Star Wars: The Visual Dictionary. As the book celebrates 10 years of LEGO Star Wars, Luke is dressed for the celebration scene at the end of Star Wars: Episode IV A New Hope.

CELEBRATION LUKE

▼ X-Wing (2004)

Luke Skywalker flies his X-wing fighter to Dagobah to train as a Jedi with Yoda. Crash-landing in a bog, the ship is festooned with swamp weeds. The craft has a cockpit that opens for Luke and moveable wings which spread into "attack" formation (operated by turning a knob that moves all four wings at once).

ESCAPE POD

C-3PO and R2-D2 slip into a small escape pod to escape the clutches of Darth Vader when he captures the Rebel Blockade Runner. After the droids crash-land on Tatooine, Jaws capture them and sell them to Owen Lars.

Cockpit

A Jawa steers the sandcrawler from inside the cockpit situated high on the front of the vehicle. It is hinged at the top for access.

Cockpit hatch hinged for access.

Workshop

In the workshop, Jawas use scrap parts to mend broken equipment or droids. After a sale, the Jawas move on quickly, as their patch-up goods rarely remain working for long.

REMOTE FARMER

As a farmer living in a remote desert, Owen Lars is resigned to buying poor-quality work droids from passing Jawas. His minifigure is unique to this set.

Dimensions:

length 38 cm (15 in) width 19 cm (7.5 in)

height 22 cm (8.6 in)

Minifigures: 11 (Owen Lars, three Jawas, R2-D2, C-3PO, RS-D4, R1-G4, ASP droid, GNK droid, and Treadwell droid)

▶ Droid Cargo

The other droids in the sandcrawler are: A GNK power droid; a Treadwell repair droid; R1-G4, an R1-series astromech refitted with the armored shell of a Mark II reactor drone; an ASP (general labor) droid; and a faulty astromech, RS-D4.

▶ Transfer Crane

A transfer crane picks up scrap droids and transports them into the bowels of the sandcrawler, where they are either mended or broken up for spare parts. The crane can attach to the sandcrawler roof.

Sandcrawler

On Tatooine, Jawa sandcrawlers patrol the deserts and wastelands in search of salvage from spaceship crashes. Sandcrawlers are forgotten relics from the days when Tatooine was a mining colony. Jawas have repurposed them to round up stray droids, junked vehicles, and any unwanted scrap metal or minerals that can be used or sold. Each sandcrawler is home to an entire clan of Jawas, and serves as transport, workshop, traveling store—and safe protection from desert predators or rampaging Sand People.

Han Solo and Chewbacca

▼ Cantina

When one of Jabba the Hutt's minions, Greedo, accosts Han Solo in the Mos Eisley Cantina, only one of them will leave the table. Here's a clue: Solo's blaster pistol is stored in a compartment under the table.

ESCAPE POD

Set name: Millennium Falcon
Year 2004 Number 4504
Pieces 985 Film EP III, IV, V, & VI

He's a rogue and a scoundrel. Worst of all, according to Princess Leia, he's scruffy looking. But Han Solo and copilot Chewbacca fly one of the fastest ships in the galaxy. The Millennium Falcon is also scruffy looking, but, according to Solo, it "made the Kessel run in less than 12 parsecs." The ship needs to be smart and fast: Solo has a bounty on his head for unpaid debts to Jabba the Hutt. What a time to get mixed up in a Rebellion against the Empire!

▼ Millennium Falcon (2000)

This version of Han Solo's battered but trusty YT-1300 light freighter includes an escape pod (or "scout sled") that can be jettisoned from the side. The top can be removed to reveal the navicomputer, smuggling compartments, and main hold with Dejarik hologame.

▶ Millennium Falcon (2004)

In this set, Han Solo wears his Hoth outfit with tan-colored pants (with holster) and blue shirt (with printed binoculars). In the X-Wing Fighter (set 6212, issued in 2006), Solo's pants are red-brown.

HAN SOLO
(HOTH)

After the disastrous Battle of Hoth, Han Solo and Chewbacca pilot the Falcon to Cloud City with Princess Leia and C-3PO on board. Hinged exterior panels reveal the main hold (with chairs and hologame) and, at the rear, the hyperdrive and engine room. Pulling on the docking port lowers the boarding ramp. A minifigure can be placed in the seat to aim and fire the upper quad laser cannon.

Millennium Falcon

According to its captain, Han Solo, the Millennium Falcon "may not look like much, but she's got it where it counts." She's fast and well-equipped, though prone to malfunctions. Han and its previous captains have tinkered with its systems over the years, adding Imperial-military-grade armor, quad laser cannons, an outsized sensor dish, and many other customized features—all of which require frequent repairs!

Engines

At sublight speed, the Falcon relies on two heavily modified Girodyne SRB42 engines that emit glowing blue exhaust gases when fired up. Sublight drives propel spaceships within star systems or far enough away from planets so they can safely jump to hyperspace.

- On its release in 2007, UCS Millennium Falcon was the largest LEGO set ever, with more than 5,000 bricks and a 311-page instruction manual.

▼ Imperial Shuttle

The Lambda-class shuttle is a multi-purpose transport vessel used throughout the Imperial fleet. These unusually elegant vessels also carry the Imperial elite, including Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader. It is an ominous sight when the yellow-faced Palpatine minifigure, grasping his superfluous cane and flanked by red-robed Imperial guards, appears from the shuttle, piloted by an Imperial shuttle pilot.

Emperor Palpatine

Feared Sith Lord Emperor Palpatine rules as dictator over the most oppressive regime the galaxy has ever known. Rarely seen, even by his own officers, the Emperor wears a black hood over a face that has been deformed by dark side energies. Never content with the extent of his rule, Emperor Palpatine's focus now is on replacing his apprentice, Darth Vader, with Vader's own son, the powerful Jedi Luke Skywalker.

▶ Emperor Palpatine

Emperor Palpatine's face is distorted by Dark Side energies and his sulphurous eyes betray his inner anger. Palpatine wears a black robe to hide his face and often walks with a cane, not because he needs it, but because he wishes to pretend that he is weak.

BRICK FACTS

- Palpatine with a yellow face appears in Final Duel I (set 7200), Imperial Shuttle (set 7166), and the Sith Minifigure Pack (set 3340). In the Imperial Inspection (set 7264), his face and hands are gray. In the Death Star (set 10188), his face is gray and his hands are black.
- The Imperial Star Destroyer (set 6211, released in 2006) included Emperor Palpatine as a hologram.

Darth Vader

One of the most decisive moments during the Clone Wars occurs when one of the most powerful Jedi in history, Anakin Skywalker, becomes Darth Sidious's new apprentice. Sidious renames Anakin as Darth Vader, whose first mission is to destroy the Jedi Order. Only a few Jedi escape the "Great Jedi Purge." Vader soon becomes a feared leader of the Empire.

▼ Darth Vader

Vader with cloak and scarred face appears in Cloud City (set 10123), Final Duel I (set 7200), TIE Fighter & Y-wing (set 7150), and Sith Minifigure Pack (set 3340). He has more detailed chest controls and a utility belt in Darth Vader's TIE Fighter (set 8017) and Death Star (set 10188.) Vader's face has no eyebrows in Imperial Inspection (set 7264) and Star Destroyer (set 621 I). In TIE Fighter (set 7263), his lightsaber lights up.

▼ TIE Advanced (1999)

When Rebel starfighters attack the first Death Star, Darth Vader gives chase in his TIE Advanced X1 prototype—a more capable ship than the standard TIE fighter, with shields and a hyperdrive. Vader's minifigure sits in the cockpit to attack the Y-wing included in the set.

DARTH VADER

Two Death Stars in One

The Death Star set combines aspects of the first and second Death Stars. Luke, for example, appears three times: In stormtrooper uniform to rescue Leia, in his regular outfit to swing across the air shaft, and as a Jedi Knight to battle Darth Vader.

DETENTION CELL

In her detention cell, Princess Leia refuses to give Vader the location of the Rebel base. She even stands firm against the interrogator droid's ultrasonic and electroshock devices. Now she needs Luke and Han to rescue her—and they all dive into a filthy trash compactor!

Minifigures

The set features several unique minifigures, including Luke and Han in stormtrooper disguise, a white assassin droid, and Emperor Palpatine with a supremely grotesque face. Also, Darth Vader features a new torso design.

GARBAGE SQUID

Dianogas, or garbage squids, live in trash compactors, garbage pits, and sewers across the galaxy, feeding on scraps of decaying organic matter.

Death Star

The Imperial battle station known as the Death Star is designed to quash potential dissent through displays of terrifying force. The first Death Star uses its superweapon to obliterate Princess Leia's home planet Alderaan. The second Death Star, though seemingly incomplete, is actually fully operational—and is used to lure the Rebels to their doom.

Imperial Navy

When Palpatine establishes his tyrannical Empire, the Republic's massive navy is appropriated and put to brutal use. Jedi-piloted Interceptor starfighters, with their solar-panel wings, are reborn as aggressive TIE fighters. Indeed, the Imperial fleet is expanded with a variety of new, ever-deadlier models, while Emperor Palpatine travels in an updated version of the shuttle he used as Supreme Chancellor.

▶ TIE Fighter

Swarms of deadly TIE fighters patrol the Empire, piloted by highly trained black-suited pilots. The ships are armed with laser blasters and have no deflector shields or hyperdrive, making them light and agile in battle. Set 7146 (2001) comes with a pilot, a stormtrooper, and a servicing and refueling rack (which doubles as a display stand). Set 7263 (2005) stands by itself on its wings and includes a TIE pilot and Darth Vader with a light-up lightsaber.

Cloud City

After the Battle of Hoth, Han Solo and Chewbacca escape with Leia and C-3PO to a floating pleasure resort and mining colony called Cloud City, located near a gas planet called Bespin. Its administrator, Lando Calrissian, is Han Solo's longtime friend and sometime rival. Dimensions: length 57.5 cm (22.6 in); width 7 cm (2.8 in); height 38 cm (15 in)

Minifigures: 7 (Luke Skywalker, Han Solo, Leia Organa, Lando Calrissian, Darth Vader, Boba Fett, stormtrooper)

BRICK FACTS

- Boba Fett with printed arms and legs and Lando Calrissian in his regular outfit are exclusive to this set. (In Jabba's Sail Barge, set 6210, Lando is in disguise.)

Rebel Alliance

Freedom fighters who have banded together as the Rebel Alliance are dedicated to the Empire's downfall. Some Rebels are deserters from the Imperial forces, but many are untrained volunteers. With skillful leaders and a ragtag assortment of ships and weapons, the Rebels prove a serious threat to Emperor Palpatine's iron rule.

Y-Wing

BTL-A4 Y-wings are the most numerous fighters in the Rebel fleet, famously employed in the attack on the first Death Star (the set comes with a TIE fighter). They have hyperdrives, ion fission engines, and massive firepower, including ion cannons and laser cannons.

ADMIRAL ACKBAR

Admiral Ackbar is commander of the Rebel fleet. He comes from the ocean world of Mon Calamari.

CRIX MADINE

Crix Madine is a former Imperial. Army officer who defected to the Rebel Alliance.

MON MOTHMA

Mon Mothma helped form the Rebel Alliance and is now Supreme Commander.

Admiral Ackbar

On the bridge, Admiral Ackbar commands the Rebel fleet, supported by a Mon Calamari controller.

BRIDGE

Echo Base

On the ice planet Hoth, the Rebel Alliance establishes its secret Echo Base, protected by an immense energy shield. When the Empire discovers the location of the base, it deploys AT-ATs and AT-STs to destroy the shield generator. The combined strength of Rebel artillery emplacements and snowspeeder squadrons cannot prevent one of the worst battlefield defeats for the Alliance.

Hoth Base

Huge blast doors and DF9 anti-infantry batteries protect the north entrance of the Rebel base. Inside the doors, the Rebels have constructed a large hangar for X-wings and snowspeeders, which are serviced by a variety of repair and maintenance racks.

henchman, Bib Fortuna, who interrogates them.

Jabba's Palace

Jabba the Hutt runs an extensive crime empire from his fortress-palace on Tatooine. The entire complex is overrun with gangsters, bounty hunters, exotic creatures, corrupt droids, entertainers, and servants. This den of vice is also where Han Solo encased in carbonite is displayed—and from where Han's friends must rescue him.

BIB FORTUNA

Jabba's chief lieutenant is a male Twi'lek called Bib Fortuna. His minifigure appears only in Jabba's Message (set 4475).

Dim lights

B'OMARR MONK

Jabba shares his palace with the original owners: B'omarr monks. These monks dispense with their bodies when they reach enlightenment, leaving only their brains in nutrient jars. Automated legs carry the brain jars throughout the palace.

▶ Throne Room

Jabba the Hutt sits atop a dais in his dimly lit throne room, within reach of a bowl of his favorite snack, slimy gorgs. He controls everything in the room, including a trap-door that leads to a pit below. Enslaved Princess Leia has no choice but to watch as Jabba deals harshly with Luke Skywalker: now wearing the robes of a Jedi Knight. Beneath the throne room, droid supervisor EV-9D9 shows no mercy to a lost GNK droid.

Power coupler outlet

Chapter 2: The Clone Wars

Jedi Command

During the Clone Wars, the Jedi must forego their traditional role as peacemakers and take on military roles. Many become generals in the republic army, fighting alongside clone commanders and clone troops on numerous battlefronts.

The Twilight

Anakin's personal starship in the Clone Wars is a battered Corellian G9 Rigger freighter, the Twilight. Anakin first "borrows" the damaged ship from a landing platform on Teth, when he and Ahsoka are rescuing Jabba the Hutt's son, Rotta. Anakin has since repaired and upgraded its weapons and systems.

In the Clone Wars, Anakin is a hot-headed Jedi Knight with a long scar and an unkempt hair and a unkempt scar on his face.

AHSOKA TANO

Young Ahsoka Tano is Anakin Skywalker's Jedi Padawan. She is a Togruta, a species with colorful skin and two long "head-tails."

Obi-WAN KENOBI

General Obi-Wan Kenobi wears black gloves and clone-trooper armor plating over his Jedi robes.

YODA

Grand Master Yoda wears a simple robe and brown tunic. He comes with Armored Assault Tank (set 8018).

MACE WINDU

Jedi Master Mace Windu appears in Republic Attack Shuttle (set 8019) with a tan robe and steely expression.

PLO KOON

Jedi Master Plo Koon wears an anti-oxygen mask and comes with Republic Gunship (set 7676).

Separatist Command

Count Dooku leads the Separatists, but secretly takes orders from Darth Sidious. He commands droid fleets and armies sponsored by member worlds and trade groups, chief among them the Trade Federation, led by Nute Gunray.

Solar Sailer

Count Dooku's personal starship is an elegant Geonosian Solar Sailer. Piloted by an FA-4 droid, Dooku and two MagnaGuards travel to battlefields, where Dooku uses his speeder bike to meet Separatist leaders.

LEGO® Technic

LEGO® Technic is an advanced building range that utilizes gears and interconnecting rods to create complex models with moving parts. In 2000, the LEGO Group released the first Technic Star Wars models, with a pit droid, battle droid, and destroyer droid (or droideka). Since then, new Technic sets have appeared for each Prequel Trilogy movie, as well as the Classic Trilogy movies.

Battle Droid

The battle droid measures over 33 cm (13 inches) tall when standing and can fold up for transportation. When a dial on the back is turned, its arm reaches to the side of its backpack to grab a blaster. The model also comes with spare parts to convert it into a security officer or a commander droid.

Year 2000	Number 8001
Pieces 328	Film EP I, II, & III

Destroyer Droid

The destroyer droid can fold up into a ball, then, when rolling, it will stop after a few turns and unfold into attack position, with its blasters raised—just like it does in the movie. The model utilizes elastic bands in its construction.

C-3PO

C-3PO stands 33 cm (13 inches) tall when upright. Just like the scene in The Empire Strikes Back when a stormtrooper blasts C-3PO, the model's head and arms blow off (when the "belly-button" socket is pressed).

Pit Droid

Utilizing elastic bands, the pit droid folds up into its compressed form (for storage). A tap on the nose makes the model stand up again.

BRICK FACTS

- In 2008, a Technic model of General Grievous was issued as an Ultimate Collector's Set (set 10186).
- C-3PO and R2-D2 were bundled together as a Toys R Us exclusive (set 65081) in 2002.

▼ Hailfire Droid

This sturdy model of the hailfire droid rolls on its giant hoop wheels. The central blaster gun snaps into place and flick-fires missiles. The model, which is not packaged as a LEGO Technic set, is in proportion to LEGO Star Wars minifigures.

▼ TIE Interceptor

The TIE Interceptor is captured accurately, with its long dagger-like wings (which can be folded to lie flat) and a hinged cockpit with a detailed interior featuring a pilot seat, controls, a HUD (heads-up display or transparent data screen), and several monitor screens. The model sits on an adjustable stand, which allows it to be displayed in a variety of positions.

The LEGO Group issues a small number of highly detailed Star Wars models called Ultimate Collector Sets (or UCS). Intended for older builders and primarily for display, each set includes a collector's card and, in many cases, a display stand. Most are not scaled for minifigures, though some, such as Millennium Falcon, are minifigure-scaled.

Distinctive dark red bricks (one of the first models to feature them)

▶ Darth Maul

The 45-cm (18-inch) tall bust of Sith apprentice Darth Maul has to be constructed from the bottom up and utilizes building techniques employed on expert models at LEGOLAND® Parks. This remarkably detailed model weighs almost 4 kg (9 lb).

▲ Tantive IV

Princess Leia Organa's consular starship, Tantive IV (otherwise known as the Blockade Runner), is one of the largest LEGO Ultimate Collector sets, at over 60 cm (2 feet) long and almost 30 cm (1 foot) wide. The highly detailed model is made up of separate sections—front, mid, and rear engine block—built individually and then pegged together. The top and lower turbo lasers rotate and the ship is supported on “landing gear” stands.

BRICK FACTS

- 2000 also saw the release of an UCS X-wing (set 7191), with 1,304 pieces, a gearbox to operate the s-foils, moving controls in the cockpit, and an R2-D2 minifigure. The model is nearly 60 cm (2 feet) long, with a wingspan of 45.5 cm (18 inches).

The Naboo starfighter has fewer bricks than other UCSs, but among them are unique chrome and curved elements, which give the finished model a sleek look. The 29-cm (11.5-inch) long model features twin laser cannons, a proton torpedo launch tube, and R2-D2, as well as a display stand and plaque.

Imperial Star Destroyer

Two sections of bridge built separately from the main body

The 94-cm (3-foot) long Star Destroyer was the largest UCS set until the release of Death Star II (set 10143). The former set came with a scaled model of the Tantive IV to re-create the opening scenes of Episode IV: A New Hope.

Chapter 4: Beyond the Brick

THE COMPLETE STARWARS MINI-FIGURE COLLECTION

Designing LEGO® Star Wars™

Jens Kronvold Frederiksen is Design Manager of the LEGO® Star Wars™ team in Billund, Denmark. He has worked at the LEGO Group for 11 years, 10 of them in the LEGO Star Wars team.

He personally created the stunning

Ultimate Collector Millennium Falcon, as well as many other models. DK interviewed Jens to find out the secrets of how LEGO Star Wars is designed.

How big is the Star Wars team?

The Star Wars team consists of between four and seven designers. We also have project leaders, a marketing leader, engineers developing new elements, and building-instruction developers; we all sit in one big group.

The LEGO Star Wars design team outside their offices in Billund, Denmark.

Could you explain a little bit about your creative process?

First, we come up with suggestions for models for the various price points. These are presented to the LEGO Group and to the various markets. Lucas Licensing (LFL) also approves the assortment; there might be a vehicle that they recommend because it's in the new Star Wars: The Clone Wars TV series.

Then do you start sketching or drawing, or do you build with LEGO bricks?

That is very much up to the designer, because they all work differently. Some designers work best by doing sketches on paper or computer, and some just start building. Normally, I make a brief for the designer. For example, this model should have at least four minifigures—sometimes I know exactly which minifigures and sometimes it's open. I might have some ideas about the model's functions, but also the designers come up with special features or functions. We then have the "sketch model" calculated to see if it fits the specific price point. For a very rough idea, we sometimes put the model on a scale and weigh it, as this is actually a pretty good indicator.

Do you have a lot of LEGO bricks, or elements, in your studio?

Yes, we have element drawers behind where we sit, containing all of the elements that are in stock at that time.

How do you decide when to create an entirely new element for a set?

That is something I would put on the design brief. As you also know, many of our new elements are minifigures, so that's very easy to decide beforehand. But sometimes we also know from the beginning whether to construct a specific model with something new. Or a designer will talk to me and say, "I can not make this model without this new wingtip" or whatever.

Do you often need to amend, change or simplify a sketch model?

It depends. Sometimes if a sketch model is very, very good, it would be a pity to remove some cool functions. We discuss whether we should move the model to a higher price point. But in many cases, the designer simplifies the model or scales it down. Sometimes we even make the models too inexpensively, so we then add extra functions or figures and so on. But now, with the experience that we have got, it's normally pretty close.

How long does it take to design a sketch model?

That depends on the size of the model. A mini model can take an afternoon, but can also take a week. A big model like the Tantive IV can take a couple of months. Sometimes we make models that we don't use straight away, but we still keep everything.

What is the next stage in the design process?

We have something called Model Review. This is a process in which very skilled or experienced designers from outside the Star Wars team work with our designer, engineers, building-instruction developers, and everyone involved in the model. Together, they ensure that the model can be shown in the building instructions in an understandable way. We also test the technical quality—to ensure the model does not fall apart and that there are no elements that are stretched and then could break.

We also normally heat test the models! Because if you take a LEGO model and display it in your window, in the sun, it will get to pretty high temperatures. Plastic is a funny material as it actually expands in the heat, which means the bricks will be a little bit more loose. Therefore, we take the model and put in an oven at 60 degrees Celsius for about four hours, which is the same stress as if a model were standing for about a year in a window.

The big Ultimate Collectors Millennium Falcon was too big for the oven! So we called a local swimming pool that had a sauna and we brought the model in and put it there for some hours, and it worked!

When all the internal quality issues are okay, I send lots of pictures of the model with a long description to LFL. Sometimes we make small movie clips to show functions. Occasionally, we also send them physical models—it depends on how complex the model is. But normally it's just pictures.

And then LFL evaluates it from a Star Wars point of view?

They evaluate it by comparing it to their official reference, which we also use. They are very particular about the outside but are normally quite open about the inside. Like us, LFL is very aware that the models are actually toys and do have to be fun, so sometimes we will put something in the interior that is not actually in the movies, just because it is fun.

A 3:1 scale prototype of the 2009 Hoth Rebel soldier's helmet. It is hand-sculpted in modeling clay, which is then baked in an oven to harden it. The prototype is digitally scanned and the resulting image used to make the actual mold for the production of the final plastic elements.

Can you give an example?

The Gungan Sub, for example. That model could actually be taken apart and used as three separate vehicles, which it obviously couldn't do in the movie. Also, in the new Mon Cal Cruiser, Admiral Ackbar has a coffee mug beside him on the railing!

Which models were most challenging to design?

Many different things can be challenging—it could be the building instructions or it could be the stability of the model. From the models I have designed myself, such as the UCS Millennium Falcon, getting the stability right was the hardest thing. The exterior of this particular model was pretty close to the first sketch model. The big problem was the inside skeleton, which had to be reconstructed a couple of times to make it strong enough.

An unreleased sketch model of the Rebel Base on Yavin 4. Designers in the LEGO Star Wars team make many product suggestions and keep all their sketch models, even when, as is the case with this one, there are no plans to issue them as sets.

Did this particular model take a lot longer than normal to design?

It is hard to say because I actually started it outside of work, just for fun. I was aware that a real Millennium Falcon should fit four minifigures in the cockpit. None of the previous play model versions had a big enough cockpit. When I was halfway through the process, the LEGO shop came by and saw it and decided it would be interesting to sell it at a higher price point. Then I was given the most amazing brief: They let me make the model the way I wanted it first and they priced it afterward!

Are you all Star Wars fans?

Well, not everyone, but the designers are normally big fans. If they weren't, they would not be able to come up with and create the best products for the brand. They know all these small details, so it is definitely an interest.

Do you regularly test models by asking children to play with them?

Yes. We ask in a group of children from the correct age group and just let them play with the sketch models. We observe the kids playing without interfering. It's quite easy to spot a model that no one is playing with. We can also see if a model breaks apart too easily or is too hard to make. You always have to have the kids in mind. With the Ultimate Collectors Series, it's about having something nice to display, but with the minifigure-based models, they just have to be good toys.

Finally, would you tell me something about the exclusive Luke Skywalker minifigure that comes with this book?

One of our graphic designers, Chris Bonven-Johansen, designed the minifigure after LFL suggested adding an exclusive one to the book. We had a brainstorming session in the team and proposed Luke because it is a celebration, and the minifigure comes from the celebration scene in Star Wars: Episode IV A New Hope, so it couldn't fit better: I am also sure that this minifigure will never appear with any other product, so it's a great choice!

Merchandising

LEGO® Star Wars™ is not just about bricks and pieces—fans can also dress the part and accessorize themselves (and their fridges) to match. Much of the LEGO Star Wars merchandise incorporates construction or play elements, such as watches you can build and customizable pens. Adult collectors can make grown-up-sized watches and special maquette minifigures—strictly for display, not play!

Community

The LEGO® fan community spans generations, reaches across continents, and bridges languages. The simple brick has been transformed into the most creative and versatile construction element in the world, and, as each day goes by, even more ingenious uses are devised.

Fan Events

All around the world LEGO Star Wars fans get together in small venues or giant conventions centers to share their latest creations and encourage fellow builders. The LEGO Group often attends these events to showcase new sets and interact with its many enthusiastic fans.

Regular set inside special slipcase.

In 2005, at the New York Toy Fair, attendees of the LEGO Group's V.I.P. gala event received a special edition of the Darth Vader transformation set. At the 2009 New York Toy Fair, lucky guests received a chrome Darth Vader minifigure in an exclusive box.

GIANT REPUBLIC STAR DESTROYER

In 2005, the LEGO Group commissioned developer Erik Varszegi to build a massive 2.4-meter (8-foot) Venator-class Star Destroyer for the Star Wars Celebration III convention. The model contains 35,000 bricks, weighs close to 68 kg (150 lbs), and takes four people to lift it.

Fan Creations

The beauty of LEGO bricks is that you can make just about anything with them, and groups of expert builders, or AFOLs (Adult Fans of LEGO), do just that. Their custom designs even have their own specialist term: MOCs (My Own Creations)!
