CUBA'S TOP 10

TOP 10 Cuba Highlights

Cuba, the Caribbean's largest island, is a land of extraordinary beauty and amazing contrasts. From white-sand beaches and teal-blue seas to lush valleys and cloud-draped mountains, Cuba is kaleidoscopic in its terrains. Steeped in history, this Communist nation is in a time warp and brims with colonial buildings, pre-revolutionary 1950s cars, and rural villages. The country's vivacious populace is a blend of Spanish, African, and indigenous peoples.

1 Habana Vieja, Havana
Colonial castles, palaces, and cobbled plazas make Old Havana the jewel in the crown of the capital city, recalling days when it was the New World's wealthiest city (see pp8–9).

2 The Modern City, Havana
This throbbing 20th-century metropolis encompasses interesting museums, spacious green parks, lovely white beaches, 1950s-era hotels and nightclubs, and stunning examples of latter-day architecture from Beaux Arts to modernismo (see pp10–11).

3 Cordillera de Guaniguanico
A few hours west of Havana, these rugged mountains are a birder's and hiker's delight. The dramatic limestone formations rising over tobacco fields add surreal beauty to Valle de Viñales (see pp12–13).

4 Zapata Peninsula
This vast swampland and park protects many of Cuba's crocodiles and endemic bird species (left). It has great fishing flats and cave dive sites. Two museums recall the 1962 Bay of Pigs invasion (see pp14–15).

5 Trinidad
Trinidad boasts a breeze-swept hillside setting. This UNESCO World Heritage Site is Cuba's most complete colonial city, with great museums and an active santería tradition, plus a superb beach close by (see pp16–17).

Jardines del Rey 6

Stretching 275 miles (442 km) along Cuba's northern coastline, this chain of offshore islands and cays is lined with stunning beaches. Three islands offer superb diving plus exciting watersports and deluxe hotels (see pp18–19).

7 Camagüey

The colonial buildings of the "City of Tinajones" are showing their age, but the city is slowly being restored. Rich in history, it is awash with imposing churches looming over cobbled plazas (see pp20–21).

Holguín 8

This provincial capital has played a key role in Cuban history. Its plazas are lined with museums and cultural centers. Castro's birthplace and a beach resort are two of its attractions (see pp22–3).

70 miles — 0 km — 70

9 Santiago de Cuba

Santiago de Cuba exudes a mystique that is influenced by its French and Afro-Caribbean associations. Intriguing architecture includes Cuba's oldest building, a fine cathedral, plus numerous key sites and monuments relating to the Revolution (see pp24–5).

Baracoa 10

Founded in 1511 as Cuba's first city, Baracoa enjoys a stupendous setting backed by rainforest-clad mountains. A buzzing street life, scenic mountain hikes, and the Castillo de Seboruco, a castle-turned-hotel, are this town's key attractions (see pp26–27).

TOP 10 Habana Vieja, Havana

With almost 1,000 buildings of historic importance, this intimate quarter is perhaps the largest and most complete colonial complex in the Americas. Like a peopled "museum" full of animated street life, Old Havana boasts an astonishing wealth of castles, cathedrals, convents, palaces, and other important buildings spanning five centuries. An ongoing restoration program, now in its third decade, has transformed the finest structures into museums, hotels, restaurants, boutiques, and trendy bars. Easily walkable, the cobbled plazas and the narrow, shaded streets of Habana Vieja exude colonial charm.

1 Catedral de La Habana

Dominating a cobbled plaza, this cathedral (center) is graced by an exquisite Baroque façade with asymmetrical bell towers. The restored interior features fine murals.

2 Palacio de los Capitanes Generales

This former governor's palace currently houses the City Museum. Displays of colonial treasures in lavishly decorated hallways and chambers recall the height of Spanish power (right).

3 Plaza de Armas

Habana Vieja's largest cobbled square – the seat of the Spanish government – is the site of the city's first cathedral (left), the governor's mansion, and the natural history museum.

4 Calle Obispo
This pedestrian-only thoroughfare is lined with book shops, eclectic stores (left), art galleries, and a coin museum.

5 Iglesia y Convento San Francisco
Rising over Plaza de San Francisco, this 17th-century convent is now a splendid religious museum, while the church is a venue for concerts.

8 Museo de la Revolución

This vast museum (left) in the former Presidential Palace recognizes the growth of Socialism, with a whole section dedicated to Che Guevara.

9 Museo Nacional de Bellas Artes

The fine arts museum is housed in two buildings and displays both an international collection and Cuban art (see p36).

Parque Histórico-Militar Morro-Cabaña

Completed in 1774 as the largest fortress in the Americas, the Cabaña fortress (above) offers dramatic views across the harbor to Habana Vieja. The Morro castle nearby has a museum on Columbus' voyages.

6 Calle Mercaderes

This cobbled street links Calle Obispo to Plaza Vieja. Lined with tiny museums, exquisite boutiques, colonial mansions (below), and other attractions, it offers hours of exploration.

7 Plaza Vieja

The fountain at the heart of Old Havana's largest plaza is an exact replica of the 17th-century original. More modern sites here include a brew-pub, a boutique, and intimate museums and galleries.

The City Walls

Havana's fortified city walls were completed in 1697 and encircled the original colonial city. The 30-ft (9-m) high wall was protected by nine bastions and a moat. However, by the early 19th century the city was bursting at the seams. This rapid expansion led to the eventual tearing down of the wall in 1863. Today only fragments of the original wall remain.

TOP 10 The Modern City, Havana

Beyond Habana Vieja, this lively, colorful metropolis of two million people is remarkable for its architecturally significant districts in various stages of dilapidation. Radiating inland from the harbor and coastline like a Spanish fan, the city emerges from compact 19th-century barrios into more spacious 20th-century municipios and post-Revolutionary working class suburbs. Functional apartment blocks give way to once-noble, upper-class districts full of Beaux Arts, Art Deco, and Modernist mansions, while concrete office blocks, government buildings, and hotels from the 1950s lend the city a retro feel.

A replica of Washington D.C.'s Capitol (below), this Neo-Classical structure was once a congressional building. The diamond inset in the floor is the point from which all distances are measured in Cuba.

Paseo de Martí

Sloping from 3 Parque Central to the Malecón, this tree-shaded boulevard – known colloquially as Prado – is a great place to meet locals.

The area is full of school kids at play during the day (right).

2 Parque Central

This attractive park makes a good starting point for exploring the city. Featuring a statue of national hero José Martí and surrounded by hotels and several city attractions, it also hosts a lively debate among baseball fanatics.

4 Malecón

Stretching west from the foot of Prado, the Malecón – Havana's seafront boulevard – is lined with eclectic apartment blocks and Mafia-era hotels.

5 Avenida de los Presidentes

Flanked by mansions, this broad boulevard slopes north to the Malecón and is studded with busts and monuments to deceased heroes (right) and heads of state.

6 Hotel Nacional

A grandiose legacy of the 1930s, this landmark building (center) is modeled on The Breakers, in Palm Beach, Florida. A great place to stay, it boasts an international Who's Who list of past guests.

7 Cementerio Colón

Laid out in a regular grid, Havana's huge cemetery (above) features an astonishing collection of elaborate tombs. Many of Cuba's most famous personalities are buried here.

8 Plaza de la Revolución

A vast, austere square surrounded by government buildings such as the Ministry of the Interior (right), this square is the heart of state affairs and best visited during the May Day Parade.

9 Universidad de La Habana

With a dramatic Neo-Colonial façade reached via a vast staircase, Havana University's museums showcase Cuba's flora, fauna, and pre-Columbian cultures.

10 Miramar

This sprawling region of western Havana, developed in the 20th century, features avenues lined with mansions and modern deluxe hotels set amid age-old fig trees.

Biotech Success

One of the world's most advanced biotechnology and genetic engineering industries is concentrated in western Havana's district of Siboney. The research facilities here are cutting edge in the field and treatments for illnesses such as cancer, AIDS, and meningitis have been developed.

TOP 10 Cordillera de Guaniguanico

The pine-clad mountains that begin a short distance west of Havana and run through northern Pinar del Río province are a nature lover's paradise of protected national parks sheltering endangered animals. The mountains grow more rugged westward, where dramatic rock formations called mogotes tower over lush valleys where tobacco plants thrive in the rich red soils and gentle climate. Centered on a village that itself is a National Historic Monument, the Valle de Viñales is rural Cuba at its most quintessential. Huge caverns beneath the mogotes provide a realm of possibilities for spelunkers.

1 Soroa

A lush retreat within the Sierra del Rosario Biosphere Reserve, Soroa (center) is famous for Orquideario – its hillside orchid garden – and scenic trails. Enjoy treatments in a bathhouse directly fed by the fresh mineral springs.

2 Las Terrazas

Built as a model rural community and located on the edges of a lake (left), this mountain village is a center for ecotourism and is known for its artists' studios and trails that lead to beautiful waterfalls and coffee farms.

Cueva del Indio 3

Deep inside a mogote, this huge cavern lit by artificial lighting has fabulous dripstone formations. After walking a floodlit trail, visitors can ride through an underground river on a motorized boat (right).

4 San Diego de los Baños
 This venerable yet decrepit village was once the most important spa town in Cuba, thanks to its sulphurous springs. The Balneario San Diego still offers therapeutic treatments in a modern facility.

5 Cueva de los Portales
 At an amazing height of 100 ft (30 m), this cavern was Che Guevara's headquarters during the Cuban Missile Crisis. It features Che's old iron bed as well as giant stalagmites and stalactites.

6 Viñales
 Harking back to a bygone era, this quintessentially colonial village exudes unspoiled charm. Ox-carts plod through quiet streets lined with traditional homes fronted by old-fashioned arcades.

7 Parque Nacional de Viñales
 This exquisite valley, the most scenic setting in Cuba, is remarkable for its limestone formations called mogotes (above). Many of these massive structures are riddled with caves.

8 Tobacco Farms
 The valleys of Pinar del Río are renowned as centers for the production of the nation's finest tobacco, often seen drying in sheds (below). The fields are tilled by ox-drawn ploughs even today.

9 Hiking
 Las Terrazas, Soroa, and Viñales have official trails. Those at Reserva Biosfera de la Península de Guanahacabibes provide a chance to spot endangered species.

10 Gran Caverna de San Tomás
 Take a guided tour through Cuba's largest cave system, with 28 miles (45 km) of galleries adorned with stalactites and stalagmites.

Mogotes

These round-topped rock formations are the remains of a limestone plateau. Over millions of years, water dissolved the rock, creating underground caverns. The ceilings eventually collapsed, leaving free-standing pillars – the mogotes. Visit the Mural de la Prehistoria at Valle de Viñales, painted on the face of a mogote by artist Diego Rivera.

TOP 10 Zapata Peninsula

Protected within a huge biosphere reserve, the Zapata Peninsula is covered in swampland and forests teeming with wildlife. The coast, in turn, is lined with sandy beaches and coral reef, attracting scuba divers. Much of the population here works as carboneros, eking out a living making charcoal. The area is known for Bahía de Cochinos, site of the Bay of Pigs Invasion (see p31). Known locally as "La Victoria", the event is commemorated in two museums.

Accessed via a 3-mile (5-km) canal, Treasure Lake is named for the gold that Taíno Indians supposedly hid in its waters when Spanish conquistadores arrived. Boat tours (below) visit a recreated Taíno village on an island that also hosts a mosquito-ridden resort hotel.

4 Crocodile Farm

Visitors can photograph crocodiles (above) from an observation point overlooking the Boca de Guamá, which is Cuba's largest crocodile farm.

5 Fishing

The saltwater shallows off southern Zapata teem with bonefish, a feisty species, while tarpon and the bizarre-looking manjuari (alligator gar) inhabit the estuaries of the Hatiguanico river and its tributaries.

6 Birding

Eighteen of Cuba's 22 bird species (see p50) inhabit Zapata, including tocororo and zunzuncito (below). Flamingos tip-toe around Las Salinas lagoon, while sandhill cranes through the reeds.

7 Scuba Diving

Unspoiled coral reefs (left) and a wall plunging 1,000 ft (305 m) lie close to the shore. Inland is a series of cenotes – pit-caves full of fresh water – that are suitable for experienced divers only.

9 Caleta Buena

This splendid cove with coral-filled turquoise waters is perfect for snorkeling and scuba diving. White sands top the coral shoreline.

10 Museo Girón

Housing military hardware, including tanks and a Cuban air force plane (right), this museum features items relating to the Bay of Pigs invasion and the three-day battle that followed.

8 Cenote de los Peces

With peacock-blue waters, this exquisite natural pool is 33 ft (10 m) deep, and has a side tunnel that descends 230 ft (70 m). Named for the fish that swim in it, this is a popular spot for cave diving enthusiasts.

La Victoria

Trained by the CIA, the anti-Castro exiles who landed at the Bay of Pigs on April 17, 1961 intended to link up with counter-revolutionaries in the Escambray Mountains. The site was ill-chosen as the landing craft grounded on reefs. The invasion was doomed when President John F. Kennedy refused to authorize the US naval and air support.

For tourist information, contact the Zapata Cubatur office, Villa Playa Girón, (45) 98 4110.

TOP 10 Trinidad

Founded in 1514 by Diego Velázquez, Trinidad was declared a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1988. During the 17th and 18th centuries, the city was a wealthy slave-trading center and hub of sugar production and its wealthy landowners and merchants erected fine homes and mansions. The cobblestone streets lined with pastel-colored houses have barely changed since the colonial era; Trinidad feels like a town that time has passed by. Unlike most Cuban cities, Trinidad sits on a hill and is cooled by near-constant breezes.

3 Museo Histórico Housed in the Palacio Cantero, this museum's exhibits, including a fountain that once spouted eau de cologne, tell the town's history.

Museo Romántico The Palacio Brunet, now a museum, is furnished in period style (right). The beautiful architectural details include a carved cedar ceiling and mediopuntos – half-moon stained-glass windows.

Vehicular traffic is not permitted in the restored heart of the colonial city around Plaza Mayor.

4 Antiguo Convento de San Francisco de Asís

This ancient convent (center) hosts a museum that recounts the fight against counter-revolutionaries (see p31). The landmark bell-tower can be climbed for a commanding view of the historic center.

5 Casa de la Trova

Traditional music is played at the "House of the Troubador," (below) on Plazuela de Segarte. This 1777 mansion is adorned with murals.

6 Shopping

Good bargains can be found at the crafts markets lining the streets (below), where locals sell ceramic wind-chimes and papier mâché models of 1950s US automobiles.

7 Nightlife

Trinidad is rightly celebrated for its after-dark ambience and particularly for its traditional performances by Afro-Cuban troupes.

8 Playa Ancón

This is an immaculate beach with turquoise waters on a peninsula 6 miles (10 km) from Trinidad. It is the setting for three tourist hotels.

Steam Trains

About 100 steam trains still operate in Cuba. Most are used to haul sugarcane to the mills, while a few are used for tourist excursions. Many trains date back to more than a century. Maintenance is an ongoing problem – every year several trains are abandoned.

10 Casas Particulares

Many casas particulares (see p127) are atmospheric colonial properties full of exquisite antiques and often just steps away from the main plazas.

9 La Boca

This rocky beach (below) has spectacular views of the Escambray mountains. Shaded by flamboyán trees, the sands are a great place to mingle with the locals.

For tourist information, contact the Trinidad Cubatur office, Calle Maceo and Simón Bolívar 352, (41) 99 6368.

TOP 10 Jardines del Rey

Rising from the Atlantic sea along the north shore of Ciego de Ávila and Camagüey provinces, this 280-mile (450-km) long archipelago, known as the King's Garden, contains hundreds of islands. Three of the major cays are linked to the mainland by pedraplenes (causeways), although only Cayo Coco and neighboring Cayo Guillermo have tourist facilities. Lined with white sandy beaches melting into clear, warm turquoise waters, these twin isles are popular with package vacationers. Flamingos wander the inshore lagoons, while other birds inhabit a nature reserve. Unfortunately, the causeway to Cayo Coco blocks ocean currents, much to the detriment of marine ecology.

A classic American auto, often available to rent

6 The cays are reserved exclusively for tourists, the only Cubans permitted access are tourism workers. If arriving in a rental car, you will need your passport for the police checkpoints, where you could be searched for Cuban stowaways.

6 There are few places to eat outside the resort hotels. Cueva del Jabali, (33) 30 1206, open Tue-Sat, serves cabaret dinners in a subterranean cave.

Graceful flamingos (right) flock to the Laguna de los Flamencos from every April to November. Parador La Silla is the best place to spot them flying overhead at sunrise and dusk.

2 Cayo Guillermo
Connected to Cayo Coco by a raised highway, this island (center) is lined with pretty beaches shelving into the waters. Mangroves grow in the channel that separates the two islands. Dunes reach 59 ft (18 m) at Playa Pilar.

4 Water Sports

The resort hotels offer a wide range of beach and ocean activities, including banana-boat rides and catamarans (above). Excellent visibility reveals an exciting underwater world for snorkelers and divers.

5 Parque Nacional El Bagá

Studded with lakes surrounded by mangroves and juniper forest, this park's highlights are its nature trail, a netted butterfly garden, and a crocodile enclosure.

6 Boat Adventure

Although billed as an "eco-tour," this fun excursion into the mangroves is by way of noisy jet-skis (above) that usually scare the birds away.

7 Pedraplén

The highway linking Cayo Coco to the mainland runs ruler-straight across the Bahía de Perros, slicing it in two. At its north end, the road weaves through a series of small islands with herons, roseate spoonbills, and other wading birds.

8 Cayo Sabinal

This virgin island's beaches (above) are fringed by a coral reef. Wild pigs inhabit the scrub-covered isle, and flamingos, the inshore lagoons.

9 Cayo Coco

With miles of sandy beaches, Cayo Coco is a haven for marine birds and a popular destination for families, divers, and water sports enthusiasts.

Sol Meliá Beach Hotels 10

Spain's Sol Meliá has 24 hotels in Cuba, including five on Cayo Coco and Cayo Guillermo (see p133), that offer a plethora of restaurants, water sports, and creature comforts (right).

Hemingway and the Cays

During World War II, Ernest Hemingway patrolled off the north coast of Cuba in his sportfishing vessel, Pilar. While searching for Nazi submarines in Jardines del Rey, he encountered a U-boat, which then escaped. His experiences were the basis for his novel, Islands in the Stream.

TOP 10 Camagüey

A cradle of Cuban culture, the "City of Tinajones" lies in the heart of cattle country and was laid out with irregular streets designed as a convoluted maze to thwart pirates. The historic center is full of well-preserved colonial plazas and cobbled streets featuring antique churches and convents, and by colorful 17th- and 18th-century domestic buildings featuring red-tile roofs, lathe-turned wooden window grills, and spacious interior courtyards adorned with the city's trademark oversized jars called tinajones.

1 Parque Agramonte
Dominated by a bronze equestrian statue of Ignacio Agramonte, the town's main square is surrounded by interesting colonial buildings, including the 18th-century cathedral with a six-story bell tower.

2 Plaza San Juan de Dios
A national monument, this plaza is lined by 18th-century pastel buildings (left) that reflect the local style. On the east side, a former church and military hospital houses a museum of colonial architecture.

3 Plaza del Carmen
Graced by a recently restored Baroque convent that now functions as an art gallery, this cobblestone plaza is pedestrianized and features life-size ceramic figures of locals depicted in daily pursuits (right).

4 Museo Ignacio Agramonte
This eclectic museum housed in the former Spanish cavalry headquarters focuses on local and natural history (above) and boasts a fabulous collection of art.

5 Catedral Nuestra Señora de la Merced

Dating from 1748, this Baroque church features noteworthy murals and the Santa Sepulcro, a statue of Christ in a coffin cast from 23,000 silver coins.

6 Teatro Principal

This Neo-Classical theater (1850) was rebuilt in 1926. Its marble staircase is lit by a gilt chandelier. It is the principal venue for the acclaimed Ballet de Camagüey.

7 Iglesia Nuestra Señora de la Soledad

Built in 1776, this fine example of Cuban Baroque architecture has a lovely wooden alfarje ceiling and decoratively painted pillars (above).

8 Iglesia Sagrado Corazón de Jesús

Newly emerged from a complete restoration, this gracious church dates from 1755 and has a magnificent wooden ceiling, exquisite frescoes, and an elaborate gilt altar.

9 Casa Natal Ignacio Agramonte

This former home of a local hero of Cuban Independence displays colonial furniture plus Agramonte's personal belongings, including his pistol. It has an intimate courtyard with tinajones.

Ballet de Camagüey

Second only to Havana's Ballet National, Camagüey's globally acclaimed troupe (right), founded in 1967, has toured over 40 countries. In season, it performs at the Teatro Principal.

Tinajones

Large earthenware jars up to 6 ft (2 m) wide called tinajones are a symbol of Camagüey. Introduced by Catalan immigrants in the early 1700s, they are used to collect rainwater as well as for decorative purposes in courtyards and gardens.

For tourist information, contact the Camagüey Cubatur office, Calle Ignacio Agramonte 421, (32) 25 4785.

TOP 10 Holguín

This sprawling industrial city, known as the "City of Squares", radiates around a compact colonial core arranged in an easily navigated grid. Its numerous historic plazas include Parque Calixto García, named for the general who liberated the city from the Spanish in 1872. With its abundance of small museums, Holguín has an especially active cultural life. Tourists generally bypass the town to visit the hilltop tourist complex of Mirador de Mayabe or the beach resort of Guardalavaca, offering various ecological and archaeological attractions as well as spectacular scuba diving.

1 Plaza Calixto García
This large, tree-shaded plaza features the marble monument of General Calixto García (above). The busy square is home to the city's main museums, including Casa Natal de Calixto García, where the hero was born.

2 Museo Provincial
The Neo-Classical building that houses this museum used to be a social club for the Spanish elite. Displays include historical artifacts, most notably the Hacha de Holguín – a pre-Columbian stone axe carved with human motifs.

3 Plaza San José
An antique, cobbled square, this is the most intimate of the city's plazas and a pleasant place to sit on benches beneath shady trees. Surrounded by colonial buildings, it is home to the Iglesia de San José, which is topped by a domed clocktower (left).

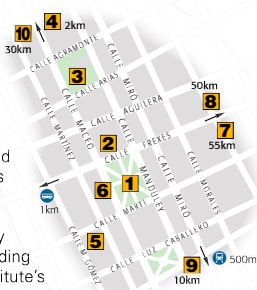

4 Loma de la Cruz

With views over the town, this hill is named for the Holy Cross at its summit and can be reached via 485 steps. It is the site for the Romerías de Mayo pilgrimage every May.

5 Plaza de la Marqueta

The ruins of a former market stand over this partially-restored plaza, which features life-sized bronze figures (left). It is lined with many shops including the Cuban Book Institute's Linotype print shop.

6 Casa de la Trova

This is one of Cuba's liveliest music venues (below) with two programs daily. It is named for Faustino Oramas "El Guayabero" Osorio, an octogenarian who still plays the guitar here (see p17).

7 Playa Guardalavaca

A one-hour drive northeast of Holguín, this resort is lined with wonderful beaches and unspoiled coral reefs that tempt diving enthusiasts.

9 Mirador de Mayabe

Offering a stunning vista over the Mayabe valley, this lookout is the setting for a fine hotel, a country-style restaurant, and a cliff-top pool. A re-created Cuban farmstead is famous for its beer-drinking donkey.

10 Gibara

A windswept coastal town, Gibara was once a prominent port protected by a fortress. Packed with colonial buildings, it has several interesting museums, including the Museo de Artes Decorativas (see p37).

8 Chorro de Maíta

This burial place, Cuba's largest pre-Columbian Indian site (below), is an archaeological treasure with skeletons next to funerary offerings. Adjacent to it is a re-created Indian village called Aldea Taína.

Organs

The Fábrica de Órganos at Carretera a Gibara 301 is the only factory in Cuba still making mechanical hand-driven órganos neumáticos (air-compression organs) using traditional methods. The machines are fed with cards punched with the score. The organs can be heard in Plaza San José on weekends.

TOP 10 Santiago de Cuba

The country's second-oldest and second-largest city has a flavor all its own thanks to it being the most African city in Cuba and the most musical place in the island nation. Surrounded by mountains, Santiago was founded in 1511 on the hilly east shore of a deep flask-shaped bay. Its sloping colonial core is replete with noteworthy historic buildings, while its fascinating past as the first capital of Cuba is enriched by its importance as a hotbed of revolution. Fidel Castro studied here as a youth and later initiated the Revolution with an attack on the Moncada barracks (see p31). Santiago explodes with colorful frenzy during Carnaval each July.

2 Plaza Dolores
This popular tree-shaded plaza (left) is a pleasant place to relax. The former Iglesia de Nuestra Señora de los Dolores church on the east side now functions as a venue for classical concerts.

3 Museo Emilio Bacardí

Visitors can view colonial-era armaments, relics from the slave trade, as well as a superlative body of paintings and sculptures in Cuba's oldest museum (above).

4 Parque Céspedes

At the heart of the city, this square is surrounded by historic buildings such as the Casa de Diego Velázquez, and the Catedral de la Asunción (center).

5 Calle Heredia

A lively street, this is the setting for a colorful cultural fair on weekends and is abuzz with bar-life on any other night. The Museo del Carnaval and the Casa de la Trova are among the intriguing attractions found here.

6 Plaza de la Revolución

This vast plaza was used primarily for political rallies and features a huge monument of General Antonio Maceo on horseback (above). There is a hologram museum to the rear.

7 Cementerio Santa Ifigenia

Many important figures are buried at this monumental cemetery (above), including Carlos Manuel de Céspedes and José Martí, whose casket is on view to the public.

8 Vista Alegre

A leafy residential district, Vedado features mansions and Modernist homes (below). The Casa del Caribe and Casa de la Cultura Africana honor Afro-Cuban culture.

10 El Cobre

This village is famous for Basílica de Nuestra Señora de la Caridad del Cobre, Cuba's most important church, where pilgrims gather to pray to the Virgen del Cobre.

Virgen del Caridad del Cobre

Miraculous powers are ascribed to the Virgin of Charity, Cuba's patron saint, who is represented as a black Virgin Mary holding a black Christ. According to legend, three fishermen were caught in a storm in 1608 and survived because a statue of the Virgin appeared, calming the seas for them.

9 Parque Histórico-Militar El Morro

Guarding the entrance to Santiago Bay, the well-preserved 17th-century El Morro castle offers spectacular coastal vistas. Soldiers in period costume march in and fire a cannon at dusk.

TOP 10 Baracoa

Tucked inside a broad bay enfolded by mountains, Baracoa sits at the far northeast corner of Cuba. This antique city was founded in 1511 as the island's first settlement. When governor Diego Velázquez later moved to Santiago, a long period of isolation set in. Locals claim that the Bahía de Miel was the site of Columbus' first landing in Cuba in 1492, and that the flat-topped mountain he described is El Yunque, which rises dramatically behind Baracoa. Lined with venerable wooden houses in local, vernacular style, the sleepy town is laid out in a tight grid. A favorite with independent travelers, Baracoa today buzzes with crowds of tourists.

1 Fuerte Matachín

Guarding the eastern entrance to town, this tiny fortress (above) contains the Museo Municipal that traces the history of the region and a collection of polymites – colored snails particular to the region.

2 The Cathedral

The Catedral de Nuestra Señora de la Asunción, built in 1512, stands over Plaza Independencia and safeguards the Cruz de la Parra, a wooden cross said to have been brought to Cuba by Columbus.

3 Plaza Independencia

This small triangular plaza – also known as Parque Central – has a bust of the heroic Indian leader Hatuey (left). At night the park bustles with locals who gather to share beer.

4 Hotel El Castillo

Built to repel the British, the Castillo de Seboruco fortress now houses a hotel (see p131) with shimmering views.

5 Bahía de Baracoa

This flask-shaped bay to the west of town is lined by a gray-sand beach, with the thickly forested Alturas de Baracoa mountains forming a backdrop.

10 Playa Duaba

This black-sand beach west of Baracoa features a bust of General Antonio Maceo who landed here in 1895 and fought the first battle of the War of Independence here.

9 Hiking

Guided hikes into the rain forests to the south of town lead deep into the mountains. Birders still hope to spot the ivory-billed woodpecker, believed to be extinct.

8 El Yunque

An anvil-shaped mountain formation (left), El Yunque rises above rain forests that provide a habitat for rare species of flora and fauna.

6 Museo Arqueológico

Full of fascinating drip-stone formations, the Cueva de Paraíso hosts an archaeological museum filled with Taíno Indian artifacts and a funerary cave displaying skeletons in situ (below).

7 Regional Cuisine

Baracoa is known for its cuisine based on creative use of coconut, such as the cucurucho, a coconut dessert mixed with fruits and honey, and calalú, a vegetable simmered in coconut milk.

Polymites

The polymita genus of snail, endemic to the Baracoa region, is remarkable for its multi-colored shell with a whorled pattern. Each snail has a unique pattern and color. With a dwindling population, the polymite is now endangered. You are advised not to buy any shells offered for sale.

TOP 10 Moments in History1 c. 500 BC: Taíno Culture

The Taíno people arrived from the Orinoco region of South America on the island they called Cuba. Worshipping gods of nature, this peaceful society was organized into nuclear villages led by caciques (chieftains).

2 1492: Columbus Arrives

The Genoese explorer sighted Cuba during his first voyage and renamed it Juana. In 1509, Columbus' son Diego conquered the island and exterminated the Taínos. Conquistador Diego Velázquez founded the first town, Baracoa, in 1512.

3 1762: The English Occupy Cuba

The golden age of the Spanish colony ended when English troops seized Havana. England opened Cuba to free trade and expanded the slave trade. In 1763, Havana was returned to Spain by the English in exchange for Florida.

A depiction of Columbus' arrival in Cuba

4 1868: Ten Years War

Landowner Carlos Manuel de Céspedes freed his slaves and revolted against Spanish rule. A guerrilla war ensued, in which towns were razed and the economy devastated. Later, US companies bought up Cuban sugar plantations.

5 1895: War of Independence

Exiled nationalist José Martí returned to lead the fight for independence. Though martyred in battle, his forces gained the upper hand, but were sidelined after the USS Maine was destroyed in Havana harbor. The US declared war on Spain, and invaded Cuba, occupying it.

6 1902: Independence

Following four years of US military rule, Washington granted the island its independence. A period of mostly corrupt government followed, while US corporations came to dominate the Cuban sugar-based economy.

7 1953: Castro Attacks Moncada

Castro launched the Cuban Revolution with an audacious attack timed to coincide with carnival celebrations in Santiago. The assault failed and 64 captured rebels were tortured to death. Fidel delivered a brilliant defense at his trial, during which he gained national sympathy.

8 1959: Revolution Triumphs
On New Year's Eve 1958, General Fulgencio Batista fled Cuba and Castro delivered a victory speech in Santiago in advance of his triumphant journey to Havana. A newly formed democratic government was quickly usurped by Castro, who allied with the Soviet Union and initiated dramatic reforms.

A triumphant Fidel Castro in 1959

9 1962: Bay of Pigs Invasion
CIA-trained Cuban exiles stormed ashore to assist Cuban-based counter-revolutionaries in toppling Castro. The attack was repelled. Castro took advantage of popular sentiment against the US-inspired invasion to announce that Cuba would be socialist.

10 1991: Período Especial Begins
Thirty years of economic support ended overnight when the Soviet Union collapsed. The economy imploded and Cubans faced extreme hardship, triggering a mass exodus to the US on flimsy rafts. Since 1994, the crisis has eased with a tourism boom helping to promote recovery.

Top 10 National Figures

TOP 10 Moments in Fidel Castro's Life

1 Birth and Childhood
Born on August 13, 1926 to a rural patriarch and his maid at Birán in Holguín, Castro was raised by his mother and was not formally recognized by his father until he turned 17.

2 Jesuit Schooling
Castro was schooled by Jesuits in Santiago de Cuba, and later at Belén college in Havana. Although combative, he excelled in his studies and was named Cuba's top student athlete.

3 University
Castro entered the University of Havana law school in 1945, where he became embroiled in politics as a student leader, and graduated in 1950. He made national headlines several times as an outspoken critic of the government.

Castro at the Sierra Maestra hideout

4 Attack on Moncada
After Batista overthrew the constitutional government and cancelled elections in March 1953, Castro initiated a legal petition against him. It failed and he launched his revolution with an assault on the Moncada barracks on July 26, 1953.

Castro as a child

5 Prison
After giving his impassioned "History Will Absolve Me" speech in 1953, Castro was sent to prison for 15 years. He used the time to organize his forces. Amnestied in May 1955, he set up a guerrilla army during exile in Mexico.

6 War in the Sierra Maestra
After his exile ended, Castro initiated a plan to return to Cuba. On landing in the Granma province, his forces were ambushed, but Castro, Raúl Castro, and Che Guevara escaped and established their headquarters. Castro directed the opposition from here, winning several battles and slowly taking control of Cuba.

7 Batista Toppled
Castro pledged to support a provisional democratic government after his forces ousted Batista in 1959. Meanwhile, separate guerrilla columns led by Che Guevara and Camilo Cienfuegos won key victories.

When Santa Clara fell to Che Guevara's troops on New Year's Eve, 1958, Batista fled the country and Castro triumphantly returned to Havana.

8 Bay of Pigs
A democratic government was founded, but Castro usurped it and initiated dramatic Socialist reforms. This resulted in a massive exodus of Cubans. A group of unhappy exiles, trained by the CIA, landed at the Bay of Pigs on April 16, 1961 to invade Cuba, but were quickly defeated.

Soviet ship during the Cuban Missile Crisis

9 Cuban Missile Crisis
In December 1961, Castro declared Cuba a Marxist-Leninist state. He signed a pact with the Soviet Union, which installed nuclear missiles in Cuba. However, the US President Kennedy demanded their withdrawal. The nations stood at the edge of nuclear war until Soviet President Khrushchev backed down.

10 Castro Resigns
Castro announced on July 31, 2006 that he had an acute intestinal illness. Handing temporary power to Raúl Castro, he underwent surgery and began a long recovery. Castro resigned on February 19, 2008, ending much speculation as to whether he would return to power.

Top 10 Revolutionary Heroes

1 Raúl Castro (1931–)
Younger brother of Fidel, a life-long communist and leader of the armed forces.

2 Camilo Cienfuegos (1932–59)
Chief of Staff in Fidel's guerrilla army.

3 José Antonio Echeverría (1932–57)
Student leader who led an assault on Batista's palace and was later murdered.

4 Che Guevara (1928–67)
Argentinean doctor-turned-revolutionary who was killed while attempting to inspire a revolution in Bolivia.

5 Julio Antonio Mella (1903–29)
The founder of the Cuban Communist Party, he was murdered in Mexico.

6 Jesús Menéndez (1911–48)
Socialist labor agitator who worked on behalf of local sugarcane workers.

7 Frank País (1934–57)
A principal leader in the M-26-7 movement, País was murdered by Batista's police.

8 Abel Santamaría (1925–53)
Castro's probable successor, Santamaría was killed after the Moncada attack.

9 Haydee Santamaría (1931–80)
Abel's sister was captured at Moncada, but managed to survive the torture.

TOP 10 Santería

1 Babalawos

The powerful high priests of santería (an Afro-Cuban religion) act as intermediaries to interpret the commands of the orishas. They use seashells, coconut husks, and seeds to divine the future and interpret the oracles. A santero (aspiring priest) might train for a decade to reach the status of babalawo.

2 Santeros

These official practitioners act as priests, healers, and diviners and are sought out by believers for consultations to find solutions to personal problems. Santeros are easily identified by their metal bracelets and colorful necklaces, which represent their particular orisha.

3 Batá

Of Yoruba origin, the sacred, hourglass-shaped batá drums – itotele, iya, and okonkolo – are carved of solid wood. Each of these three styles have a different size and pitch. The drums are used during most important ceremonies and have their own rituals pertaining to their use and care.

4 Orishas

The many deities of santería act as intermediaries between human beings and the supreme god,

Olorún. Most orishas are avatars of Catholic saints, and each has his or her own costume, colors, symbols, and favorite foods, as well as specific abilities. Each believer has a personal orisha, who is considered to have the power over that person's destiny and is worshipped in daily life.

5 Obi

Santería adherents believe that the wisdom of the orishas can be divined by dropping four pieces of coconut shell and studying the pattern they form. Mojubas (prayers) are said to invite the orisha to speak. These obi (oracles) are considered to help the believer reach wise decisions. At times, sacred palm seeds or cowrie shells are cast to invoke other oracles.

6 Initiation Ceremonies

Believers who seek a new path in life make a pact of veneration and obedience with their orisha through a week-long series of rituals. These require rigid adherence to meet the orisha's approval. The final initiation usually involves animal sacrifice. For a year thereafter, the iyawó (initiate) adopts strict prescriptions of behavior and dresses solely in white.

An altar for Changó

 Colorful elekes, or beads

7 Elekes

These necklaces of colored beads relate to specific orishas. While uninitiated believers wear generic elekes, the bead patterns are determined by santeros, who prepare these necklaces using divination to find an order that reflects the iyawó's path.

8 Ebó

Santería rites, known as ebó, require offerings of food and drink to the orishas. An ebó often involves ritual cleansing, and may include sacrificing of chickens, pigeons, or goats. Ebó is also used to woo an orisha's favor, or guard against witchcraft.

9 Guemilere

These ritual ceremonies are held to honor orishas. They comprise prayers, songs, and batá drum rhythms. A believer may sometimes go into a trance – he or she is then believed to be possessed by the orisha.

10 Altars

Altars are decorated with the attributes of the orisha, including their likeness in the form of a doll, devotional objects, and ebó. Tiny bells, maracas, and agogó (rattles) are played to awaken the orisha.

Top 10 Orishas

1 Olorún

The principal god, often considered the androgynous sum of all divinity. He is the source of all spiritual energy.

2 Obatalá

The father of humankind, he represents wisdom and purity. He is androgynous and celebrates Our Lady of Mercy.

3 Ochún

The youngest orisha, Ochún is the sensual deity of water as well as the goddess of love.

4 Yemayá

The mother goddess is the giver of life and the protector of children and pregnant women.

5 Changó

The hot-tempered, heroic god of thunder and lightning represents virility. His symbol is a double-bladed axe.

6 Babalu Aye

Associated with disease, Babalu Aye wears rags, walks with a crutch, and is accompanied by his dog.

7 Elegguá

God of the crossroads, Elegguá opens or closes the way of life. Cuban drivers often place Elegguá's elekes in their cars for protection.

8 Oggún

God of metal and war, he fights battles on behalf of petitioners' and is often depicted with a machete.

9 Osain

This celibate deity represents the forces of nature. All initiations require his presence.

10 Oyá

She controls the fate of the injured and is aligned with the saint, Santa Bárbara.

Left Portocarrero's Escena de Carnaval Right Alejo CarpentierTOP 10 Writers and Artists*1 Amelia Peláez (1896–1968)

Influenced by Matisse and Picasso, this ceramist and painter is best known for her vast mural Carro de la Revolución (the Revolutionary Car) adorning Hotel Habana Libre (see p69).

2 Wilfredo Lam (1902–82)

Born in Sagua la Grande, Lam befriended many leading European painters while living in Paris. His works strongly reflect Afro-Cuban culture.

3 Alejo Carpentier (1904–80)

Carpentier is known for his cultural journalism focused on Afro-Cuban traditions. He was sent into exile for opposing General Machado. After the Revolution (see p31), he headed Cuba's state publishing house.

Statue of José Martí, Plaza de la Revolución

4 Dulce María Loynaz (1902–97)

The doyenne of Cuban poetry, Loynaz went into relative seclusion following the Revolution after her husband fled Cuba. Her works were rediscovered in the 1980s, when she re-engaged with literary circles. An erotic intensity infuses many of her works.

5 José Martí (1853–95)

Perhaps the leading Latin American essayist, poet, and journalist of the 19th century, Martí led the Independence movement (see p30). He wrote profusely for the cause of social justice, pan-Americanism, and liberty.

6 Guillermo Cabrera Infante (1929–2005)

This critic, journalist, and novelist is best known for Tres Tristes Tigres, his seminal novel about the sordid era of pre-Revolutionary Havana. Post-Revolution, he edited a key literary magazine before being forced into exile for criticizing Castro's government.

7 José Lezama Lima (1910–76)

A gay libertine known as much for his flamboyant lifestyle as for his Baroque writing, Lima was persecuted following the Revolution. Today he ranks among the Cuban literary elite. His most famous work is the semi-biographical Paradiso.

Peláez's The Tree and the Cross

8 Nicolás Guillén (1902–89)
 Considered the poet laureate of Cuba, Guillén's African heritage is reflected in his distinctive poesía negra (black poetry). He joined the Communist Party at an early age and, following the Revolution, became president of the National Union of Writers and Artists.

9 René Portocarrero (1912–85)
 One of Cuba's masters, Portocarrero is well-represented in Havana's Museo Nacional de Bellas Artes (see p9), his murals are also found in the Teatro Nacional and Hotel Habana Libre. His work is infused with religious icons. 📍 Map T3 • Teatro Nacional: Paseo y 39; (7) 879 6011; adm

10 Manuel Mendive (b. 1944)
 Mendive is considered to be Cuba's most visionary and influential living artist. His works are both naive and highly erotic. A practising santero (see pp38–9), Mendive is represented in museums around the world.

TOP 10 Musical Styles

1 Danzón
Originating in France via Haiti in the 18th century, danzón is the root source of most Cuban music, and gained popularity within slave culture and with Creole peasants. Played by orquestras típicas, danzón has a repetitive jaunty tempo.

2 Classical
Cuba boasts a National Symphony Orchestra and many smaller accomplished ensembles that are actively sponsored by the government. A unique style has evolved, known as Afrocubanismo, incorporating African-derived instruments and rhythms into classical themes.

3 Jazz
A musical form that has made a resounding comeback in Cuba, jazz was suppressed following the Revolution (see p31). A colorful and fast-paced Afro-Cuban style has emerged, propelling Cuban musicians to the fore of the world jazz scene.

4 Son
Son became popular in the second half of the 19th century in the eastern province of Oriente. Its popularity peaked in the 1950s and was revived decades later after the success of the Buena Vista Social Club movie and album.

5 Changüí
A rougher, choppiest variant of son, changüí has minimal instrumentation with the tres and bongos dominating. It is played mainly in the eastern provinces, notably by groups like the Estrellas Campesinas and Grupo Changüí.

Tres, a small guitar

6 Guaguancó
Born in the slave barracoons of 18th-century sugar estates, this folkloric Afro-Cuban dance is highly flirtatious. Accompanied by complex bongo rhythms, the male dancer circles his female partner, who dances in a provocative yet defensive manner in front of him.

An Afro-Cuban jazz trio

Salsa dancers

7 Salsa
A popular form that evolved in the 1960s, when Cuban musicians began experimenting with new sounds and styles from the US. Fusing jazz and rock with traditional son, it is normally fast and intense, but can also be slow and romantic.

8 Rumba
Social gatherings in Cuba often evolve into informal rumbas, a generic term which covers a variety of African-derived rhythms and dances involving sensuous flicks of the hips. Many rumbas involve a call and answer pattern between singers and drummers.

9 Timba
A derivative of salsa, the highly aggressive and innovative timba is an eclectic and ever-evolving musical form that incorporates various genres, including classical, disco, and even hip hop. Improvisation is key to this flexible form.

10 Rap
Cuba's contemporary rap scene differs markedly from its aggressive US counterpart. Raperos adopted rap to express their frustrations and lyrics that focus on socio-political commentary with the intention of bettering society.

Top 10 Musicians

1 Chucho Valdés (b. 1941)
This Grammy award-winning jazz pianist is considered to be one of the world's greats.

2 Compay Segundo (1907–2003)
Sentimental guitarist of the 1940s, Segundo resurrected his career with the Buena Vista Social Club.

3 Frank Fernández (b. 1944)
Cuba's foremost classical pianist studied at Moscow's Tchaikovsky Conservatory.

4 Celia Cruz (1925–2003)
Legendary salsa singer who left Cuba in 1960 and found fame in the US.

5 Benny Moré (1919–63)
This tenor sang everything from son to mambo and is considered perhaps the greatest Cuban singer of all.

6 Juan Formell (b. 1942)
Founder of Orquesta Revé and Los Van Van – Cuba's most popular salsa band.

7 Silvio Rodríguez (b. 1946)
The foremost exponent of politicized nueva trova ballads, also a member of parliament.

8 Gonzalo Rubalcaba (b. 1963)
This contemporary jazz pianist often tours the world and is a Grammy award winner.

9 Pablo Milanés (b. 1943)
A singer-songwriter of nueva trova, this guitarist hails from the city of Bayamo.

10 Rubén González (1919–2003)
A jazz pianist, González first performed in 1940 and starred in Buena Vista Social Club while in his eighties.

The Buena Vista Social Club (1999) is a documentary-film that highlights the work of son musicians over 80 years old.

Huge Tyrannosaurus rex occupy this prehistoric theme park, featuring life-size concrete reptiles. A natural science museum has informative displays on local wildlife (see p110).

8 Parque Histórico-Militar Morro-Cabaña, Havana

This ancient castle with cliff-top battlements comes alive at dusk, with a daily ceremony which features real-life soldiers get dressed in the costumes of Independence soldiers, and march into the castle to fire a cannon. There is also a fine collection of blunderbusses, muskets, swords, and other yesteryear armaments (see p9).

9 Steam Train Rides

Cuba still has more than 100 steam trains puffing away. Though most of the trains are used to haul sugarcane, some have been spruced up for sightseeing trips. In Trinidad, kids can whistle down the tracks of the Valle de los Ingenios (see p97) on a 1907 "choo-choo," or ride around Havana's Parque Lenin in an antique train.

10 Fun Fairs

Nearly every town in Cuba has a parque de diversiones (a fun park) with carousels and other rides. The Todo en Uno fair in Varadero has modern rides that include carros locos (bumper cars) and carousel rides. Havana's main fun park is in Parque Lenin. 📍 Todo en Uno: Map F2

TOP 10 Beach Resorts

1 Playas del Este
Meandering for several miles east of Havana, this long sweeping stretch of beaches is popular with the capital's citizens as a weekend hangout. Pounding surf and a powerful undertow can be a deterrant to swimmers. The prettiest sections are Playa Tárara and Playa El Mégano, with gorgeous white sands and plenty of beach facilities. Map H5

2 Cayo Levisa
This small island, ringed by white sands, an offshore coral reef, and mangroves, is renowned for its superb scuba diving. Coconut trees sway enticingly over a small resort, totally rebuilt since the Hurricane Wilma swept it off the map in 2005. Map C2

3 Playa Sirena, Cayo Largo
Only a few miles from the all-inclusive hotels of Cayo Largo (see p81), is Playa Sirena with its broad swathe of pure white sand and thatched restaurants. The waters are an alluring blue and perfect for watersports, but the walk-in is steep and not suitable for children. Access to Cayo Largo is restricted, with only tourists allowed, many of whom naked on the sands. Map E4

4 Playa Mayor, Varadero
Lined with hotels for almost its entire length, this long stretch of silvery sand is the most well developed beach in Cuba. Still, there is enough space for everyone, and the peacock-blue waters are warm and inviting. However, tourist interactions with Cubans are restrained by a heavy police presence. Map F1

5 Playa Ancón
Shaded by Australian pine, this white-sand beach lying along the Ancón Peninsula is within a 20-minute drive of Trinidad (see p16). The Cuban government is in the process of gradually developing it as a tourist resort and now three all-inclusive hotels and a diving school are located here. The Caribbean seas offer superb snorkeling and diving, but swimmers need to be careful of the microscopic sea lice that sometimes infest the waters and can result in the occurrence of flu-like infections (see p17).

7 Playa Flamingo, Cayo Coco

One of the most beautiful beaches in the country, Playa Flamingo boasts white sand and turquoise waters protected by an offshore coral reef. With half a dozen large, beach-front hotels, the facilities here continue to expand as new hotels are added. However, there is plenty of wilderness as well. Wildlife, including the flamingos from whom the beach gets its name, parade around the inshore lagoons (see p18).

8 Playa Pilar, Cayo Guillermo

Brushed by near constant breezes, the white sands of this beach are swept into dunes overlooking pristine reef-protected ocean waters where you can wade knee-deep for 400 yards (366 m). Water birds can be found frolicking in the lagoons and mangroves alongside hungry mosquitoes. 🗺 Map K1

TOP 10 Animals and Birds

1 Cuban Crocodile
Up to 16 ft (5 m) in length, the Cuban crocodile is endemic to the island and is far more aggressive than its cousin, the American crocodile, which is also found here. Despite being hunted to near extinction, the population has recovered thanks to a breeding program introduced by Fidel Castro.

2 Solenodon
You are unlikely to see one of these long-nosed, ant-eating mammals in the wild, as they are shy and nocturnal. Resembling a giant shrew, the solenodon is an endangered species, as it is easy prey for dogs and mongooses. A few can be seen in captivity.

3 Polymite
These snails are remarkable for their colorful shells, whorled in patterns that are unique to each individual snail. The shells of these multicolored mollusks can range from simple black-and-white spirals to blazing stripes of orange, yellow, and maroon. Cuba's polymite population has plummeted in recent years.

5 Flamingo
Standing atop legs that resemble carnation stalks this pink bird is the most attractive of Cuba's many estuary birds. Large flocks of flamingos inhabit the salt-water lagoons of Zapata. They primarily eat insect larvae, which contain a substance that gives them their bright color.

6 Hutia
A shy mammal, the endemic hutia looks like an overgrown guinea pig. This rabbit-sized herbivore is endangered by deforestation, illegal hunting, and predators. It inhabits many of the wilderness regions of Cuba, but is most likely to be seen in captivity. Many Cubans breed hutias for food.

7 Zonzuncito
The tiny Cuban hummingbird is so small, it is often mistaken for a bee; earning it the nickname "bee hummer." In fact, at only one inch (2.5 cm) long, it is the world's smallest bird. Nonetheless, this feisty bantam defends its territory aggressively and has even been seen attacking vultures.

8 Iguana Resembling a small dragon, this leathery reptile inhabits offshore cays and feasts on leaves, fruit, and occasionally insects. It basks in the sun to become active, but seeks refuge from the mid-afternoon heat in cool burrows.

9 Jabalí The Cuban wild boar is known for its aggressive nature when threatened. Covered in thick bristles, it is common to lowland wilderness areas. The jabalí is hunted for sport – its meat is a local delicacy.

10 Cuban Parrot The cotorra, or parrot, an inhabitant of dry forests, was once found throughout Cuba. Now threatened, it is most easily seen in the Zapata swamps, on Isla de la Juventud, and in Parque Alejandro Von Humboldt. It performs noisy mating displays during the onset of the wet season.

Top 10 Cuban Trees and Flowers

- 1 Royal Palm Cuba's silver-sheathed national tree is a beautiful palm with feather-like fronds.
- 2 Mangrove Five species of mangroves grow along Cuba's shores, rising from the waters on a tangle of interlocking stilts.
- 3 Ceiba With a huge limbless trunk topped by wide-spreading boughs, this tree is considered sacred by believers of santería.
- 4 Jagüey Seeding atop host trees, this species drops roots to the ground and envelopes and chokes its host.
- 5 Sea Grape This hardy shrub grows along shores and issues broad, circular leaves and bunches of grape-like fruit.
- 6 Orchid Hundreds of orchid species grow in Cuba from the plains to the mountains.
- 7 Creolean Pine Native to the Caribbean, this species is found above about 5,000 ft (1,524 m).
- 8 Bougainvillea Brightening many towns, the spectacular pink, purple, and bright red "flowers" of this shrub are, in fact, leaves surrounding tiny petals.
- 9 Flamboyán Flowering flame-red, this wide-spreading tree emblazons the country in spring and summer.
- 10 Cork Palm The endangered cork palm grows only in remote areas of the Cordillera de Guaniguanico (see p80).

TOP 10 Festivals and Holidays

1 Jan 1, Liberation Day
New Year's Day in Cuba is celebrated as the day that dictator Fulgencio Batista (see p41) was toppled. Officially known as the "Anniversary of the Triumph of the Revolution," the event is commemorated with nationwide musical concerts.

2 Jan 28, José Martí's Birthday
Cubans celebrate the birth of their national hero (see p31) with events including readings of Martí's poetry and concerts. Kids are integral to the celebrations.

3 Apr 19, Victoria de Playa Girón
The plaza and museum behind the beach at Playa Girón is the setting for speeches, a wreath-laying ceremony and festivities to celebrate the "first defeat of imperialism in the Americas." The holiday also honors the Cuban victory in the Bay of Pigs invasion (see p31).

4 May 1, Día de los Trabajadores
As many as half a million communists march through Plaza de la Revolución (see p11) while Cuba's leaders look on. Rallies full of patriotic songs are held throughout the island as Cubans proclaim their dedication to socialism and the Revolution.

5 Jul 26, National Revolution Day
A celebration of the launch of the Revolution of 1953 (see p33) is held in a different city each year. Attendees dress in black and red T-shirts – the colors of Castro's M-7-26 revolutionary movement – and listen to speeches by Communist leaders.

6 July, Carnaval
Many major cities organize some sort of street carnival in July featuring live music and dancing showgirls. The biggest event is in Santiago de Cuba, where carnival season climaxes with a parade of bands along Avenida Jesús Menéndez. 📍 Map P6

7 Oct 8, Anniversary of Che Guevara's death
Santa Clara's Plaza de la Revolución and the Monumento del Che (see p32) are the setting for a wreath-laying ceremony in the presence of key political leaders.

Musicians at the Carnaval

8 Oct 28, Memorial to Camilo Cienfuegos

Schoolchildren in Havana march to the Malecón (see p11) to throw "a flower for Camilo" into the sea on the anniversary of the death of Cienfuegos (see p35). This revolutionary commander died in 1959 in a mysterious plane crash. There is also a parade to the sea at the Museo de Camilo Cienfuegos in Jaguajay, Sancti Spiritus province (see p97).

9 Nov, Festival de Ballet

For 10 days in November, Havana's Gran Teatro (see p69) plays host to brilliant ballet performances featuring leading international dancers and ballet corps. Hosted by the Ballet National de Cuba, the festival is one of the major events in the bi-annual cultural calendar.

10 Dec, Festival de Nuevo Cine Latinoamericano

Cubans are inveterate movie-goers and the highlight of their year is the Havana Film Festival, which screens a variety of art-house films and documentaries from around the world, as well as off-beat works from some of Cuba's own first-rate directors.

Top 10 Local Festivals

1 Holguín (Jan), Semana de Cultura Holguinera

The town comes alive with a medley of cultural activities.

2 Camagüey (Feb), Jornadas de la Cultura Camagüeyana

This city celebrates its founding with much fanfare.

3 Trinidad (Easter), El Recorrido del Vía Crucis

Catholic devotees follow the ancient "way of the cross."

4 Cienfuegos (Aug), Festival Internacional Benny Moré

Celebrated every other year to honor Benny Moré (see p43).

5 Santiago de Cuba (Aug), Festival de Pregon

Citizens converge on Parque Céspedes to recite traditional songs and verses.

6 Las Tunas (Jun), Jornada Cucalambeana

Singers compete in décimas – 10-syllable rhyming verses – to honor this composer.

7 Guantánamo (Dec), Festival del Changüí

An excuse to party as son groups perform (see p43).

8 Trinidad (Dec), Fiestas Navideñas

The journey of Mary and Joseph is re-created.

9 Rincón (Dec 17), Procesión de los Milagros

The orisha San Lázaro is honored in this pilgrimage.

10 Remedios (24–29 Dec), Parrandas

Two sides of town duel in a firework contest (see p88).

TOP 10 Places to Meet the Locals

1 Parque Central, Havana
Havana has many plazas, but this tree-shaded park on the edge of Old Havana is the liveliest. Baseball fans gather here to argue the finer points of the game. With plenty of benches, it is a tremendous place to watch the flurry of activity. Expect to have jiniteros (hustlers) approach you to tout their wares or services (see p10).

2 The Malecón, Havana
The cooling breezes of the capital's seafront boulevard attracts habaneros (Havana locals) of all ages, who socialize with guitars and bottles of rum. On hot days families bathe in the balnearios cut into the limestone rock. Take care to watch your step – the pavement is crumbling and waves often crash over the seawall (see p11).

3 Calle Obispo, Havana
This pedestrian-only shopping street has plenty of intriguing shops, bars, cafés, and ice-cream stores, where many private art galleries display their works. Pick-pockets are on the prowl, so guard your belongings (see p74).

4 Baseball Games
Watching a Cuban baseball game is as much a social experience as a sporting one. The crowds are passionate but friendly, and the game is interspersed with chatting and drinking. You will make new friends here, even if you support the "other" team.

5 Playas del Este
On weekends, families flee Havana for a day at the beach. Singles and tourists interact toward the west end, despite a disapproving police presence. Many families prefer the beach around Guanabo (see p48).

6 Casas de la Trova
When bitten by the dancing bug, head to a Casa de la Trova. Every town has one of these traditional music houses, where Cuban singles as well as couples have a great time dancing to timeless sons and boleros.

7 Cumbanchas
Few Cubans have money for discos, so they spark up their own song and dance at street parties where anyone can join in. Contribute a bottle of rum, the drink of choice, as courtesy. Cubans are not shy, and even if you arrive with a partner, expect to be asked to dance.

8 Cabarets Cuban couples adore these traditional and sexy revues featuring scantily clad dancers and great salsa music. There is at least one cabaret in every major town, and even in some remote villages. Most couples linger for the discos that typically follow the show. Tables are usually shared – everyone chips in for a bottle of rum and cola.

9 Mercados Agropecuarios The farmers' markets are packed with Cubans shopping for fresh produce, while others enjoy the local gossip. Every town has at least one "agro." Even if you are not planning to buy, the atmosphere makes a visit worthwhile.

10 Casas de la Cultura These cultural centers found in every town draw a cross-section of society, who come to enjoy activities such as literary readings and traditional music. The atmosphere is informal and these are a great place to make new friends and perhaps learn a few dance moves.

Top 10 Customs and Beliefs

- 1 Politeness Old-fashioned courtesy, such as saying "Thank you!" and "Please!," is very important to Cuban people.
- 2 Dress Even impoverished Cubans dress as well as their budget will allow. Scruffiness is not appreciated.
- 3 Santería More than half the Cuban population are followers of this Afro-Cuban religion (see pp38–9)
- 4 Racial Harmony Cuba is an ethnically diverse society and the degree of racial harmony on the island is profound.
- 5 Equality The concept of equality for all on every level is a concept Cubans hold close to their hearts.
- 6 Take it easy Hurrying is uncommon in Cuba where foreigners who expect things to happen quickly can be disappointed.
- 7 Greetings Cubans greet everyone upon entering a room. People refer to each other as compañero (companion).
- 8 Machismo This is totally ingrained among most men – even married men flirt openly.
- 9 "The New Man" Che Guevara dreamed of creating a society where people are motivated by altruism, a key tenet of the Revolution.
- 10 Chistes (Jokes) A great sense of humor helps many Cubans deal with the hardships of daily life – the subject of most chistes.

TOP 10 Cuban Dishes

1 Moros y Cristianos

The base of comida criolla (traditional Cuban fare), this dish comprises white rice cooked with black beans and is served as an accompaniment to meat and seafood meals. It is known as congrí when cooked with red beans and congrí oriental when the red and black beans are mixed.

2 Ropa Vieja

The "old rope" is a combination of boiled rice, black beans, fried plantain, and shredded beef marinated in red wine or rum, seasoned with onions, peppers, oregano, and cumin.

Ropa Vieja

3 Cerdo Asado

Pork is roasted in an open oven or on a spit, and is served whole on skewers. Cerdo Asado is usually served with rice and black beans accompanied by fried plantain.

Ajiaco

4 Corvina al Ajillo

This simple and delicate seabass dish is typically combined with slices of lime and regular vegetables such as carrots. Either mashed potatoes or moros y cristianos are served on the side.

5 Ajiaco

This minestrone-style vegetable stew is made with malanga, turnips, corn and yucca, plus a variety of meats, including pork and chicken. It is seasoned with oregano and other herbs.

6 Bistec Uruguayo

"Uruguayan beef," a staple found on many restaurant menus, is a steak stuffed with ham and cheese. It is usually accompanied by a side salad of boiled vegetables, mashed potatoes or rice, and beans. Fish and chicken are often used instead of beef.

7 Pollo Montuno

A traditional country recipe, this dish is a chicken casserole simmered with onions, ginger, and cloves of garlic, sweetened with sugarcane syrup, wine, or even rum, and seasoned with parsley and basil. It is served with a bowl of steamed or boiled malanga, yams, and potatoes, accompanied by white rice.

Flan de huevos

8 Potaje Black beans are slow-cooked with garlic, onions, pepper, oregano, and other herbs to produce this delicious, thick soup. Sometimes pieces of pork or chicken are added. A bowl of plain white rice is usually the sole accompaniment.

9 Enchilada de Langosta Lobster is typically boiled, then cooked in a sauce of tomatoes and spiced with peppers and other seasonings. Shrimp is often used as a substitute for lobster. It is usually served with rice and a salad of lettuce and boiled vegetables.

10 Flan Cuba's most popular dessert, apart from ice cream, this custard is found on most menus. It closely resembles crème brûlée and is made from eggs and milk. It is almost always served with a sugary syrup and sometimes the custard is served caramelized.

Top 10 Drinks

1 Mojito This world-famous Cuban drink is made of white rum with mint leaves, sugar, and a dash of soda water.

2 Cuba Libre Dark rum with cola and natural lime juice served with plenty of ice in a tall glass, garnished with a lime.

3 Cristal A light, lager-style beer, usually served chilled. It has a milder taste than the more full-bodied Bucanero beer.

4 Rum Younger "white" rums are used for most cocktails, while aged rums – añejos – are typically drunk straight.

5 Daiquirí White rum blended with sugar, lime juice, and crushed ice and served in a broad glass decorated with a maraschino cherry.

6 Fruit Juices Many tropical fruits are packaged as fresh juices, including guayaba (guava), grapefruit, and orange.

7 Batidos Water or milk is blended with ice and fresh fruit, such as mango and papaya to make a refreshing shake.

8 Refrescos An infinite variety of tropical fruit-flavored, water-based, sweetened drinks.

9 Pru Made from various herbs and roots, this medicinal drink is served in the eastern provinces of Cuba.

10 Chorote Strongly flavored chocolate drink of Baracoa, thickened with cornstarch and sweetened with sugar.

TOP 10 Things to Buy

1 Guayaberas
This Cuban cotton shirt worn by men is ideal for beating the heat. It features a straight hem and is worn draped outside the trousers. Either long- or short-sleeved, the shirts usually have four buttoned pockets and are embroidered with twin, vertical stripes down the front.

2 Che Guevara T-shirts
Almost every Cuban souvenir store and flea market sells cotton T-shirts for men, women, and children. The most common image is the iconic photo of Che Guevara in his trademark black beret with the five-point revolutionary star.

Che Guevara T-shirt

4 Fans
Traditional, handmade, and prettily painted Spanish fans or abanicos make a great gift. The fans are hand-painted in an age-old tradition. Gift shops throughout Cuba also sell them.

5 Papier Mâché Cars
Cuban artisans are skilled at making papier mâché items, and pre-revolutionary American automobiles are a popular theme. These can be incredibly lifelike, or eccentric, smile-inducing distortions. Look for papier mâché muñequitas (dolls) of the orishas and figures of baseball players as well as cigar-smoking mulattas (Santería deities).

African-style figure

3 Wood Carvings
Carved wooden statues are a staple of craft markets found all over Cuba. The most common items, which make good gifts, are exaggeratedly slender nude female figures made of mahogany, ebony, and lignum vitae. Bowls and plates are also available as are chess sets and humidors, often in colorful combinations of different types of hardwoods.

6 Music CDs
CDs and cassette tapes of everything from son to salsa are widely available in casas de la trova, (see p54), souvenir stores, and shops run by the state-owned recording entity, EGREM. Musicians who perform at restaurants and other such venues often offer recordings of their music for sale.

7 Coffee
Some of the best mountain-grown beans in the Caribbean are sold in vacuum-sealed packages at reasonable prices. Many shops sell an export-quality brand called Cubanita.

8 Cuban Art

Although much of Cuban art is kitsch, mass-produced, and repetitious, the nation's many artists also produce some of the most visually exciting works in the Caribbean. Colorful recreations of typical street scenes featuring old American automobiles or ox-drawn carts are irresistible, but also look for more profound works by contemporary masters. The former are sold at street markets nationwide; the latter are represented at quality state-run galleries.

9 Jewelry

Scour the street markets for creative avant-garde pieces made from recycled cutlery. Black coral finds its way into contemporary silver, and sometimes into gold jewelry sold at state-run joyerías (jewelry stores) in Havana. Black coral looks very pretty when set in jewelry, but bear in mind that it is a threatened species.

10 Lace

Much of Cuba's lovely, traditional lace embroidery is from Trinidad, the center of homespun production. Look for exquisite tablecloths, antimacassars, blouses, as well as pretty, crocheted bikinis.

Top 10 Rums and Cigars

1 Havana Club Gran Reserva

Aged for 15 years, this is the finest of all Cuban rums, with a texture and flavor like a superb cognac.

2 Ron Matusalem Añejo

Elegant rum aged in barrels for 10 years, three years longer than most añejos.

3 Cohiba Siglo

Large, flawless cigar loaded with flavor.

4 Vega Robaina

Hand-rolled cigars using choice filler and Cuba's finest wrapper leaves.

5 Varadero Oro

Aged for five years, this dark golden rum is smooth, sweet, and has distinctive caramel flavors.

6 Partagás Series D

A full-bodied cigar with an intense, earthy flavor, this Robusto is the standard-bearer of the Partagás brand.

7 Montecristo Figurados No. 2

This extremely rare, perfectly balanced, distinctly flavored, torpedo-shaped cigar is much sought after by connoisseurs.

8 Ron Santiago 45 Aniversario

Limited edition, well-aged rum with hints of honey and walnuts – one of Cuba's finest.

9 Romeo y Julieta Churchill

This long, large, full-bodied smoke is considered the finest cigar produced by the Romeo y Julieta factory.

10 Trinidad Fundadores

A classic considered perhaps the finest of Cuban cigars, Fidel Castro presents these to visiting dignitaries.

TOP 10 American Legacies

1 American Autos

Time seems to have stood still for five decades on Cuban roads, where one in every eight cars dates back to before the Revolution (see p31). Most are American classics from the 1950s – including models that vanished from US roads years ago.

Dancers at the Tropicana in the 1940s

2 Tropicana

A fixture of Havana's night scene since opening on New Year's Eve in 1939, this Las Vegas-style cabaret has more than 200 performers, including statuesque showgirls and amazing gymnasts (see p69).

3 Baseball

Americans introduced baseball to Cuba in the mid-19th century. Today, the island produces some of the finest players. Cuban teams regularly defeat US teams at the Olympics.

4 Art Deco

Cuban cities are graced with Art Deco buildings that date back to the 1930s and the heyday of Hollywood movies. The finest are the cinemas, often with rounded architectural elements and horizontal banding. These designs exemplify the architects' desire to imbue local buildings with slick, streamlined forms, reflecting the great age of transport.

5 US Naval Base

When the US government wrote Cuba's Constitution in 1902 (see p30), it included a clause – the Platt Amendment – granting itself a perpetual lease of Guantánamo Bay. The naval base is a bone of contention today in American/Cuban relations. The US government writes a check every year for the annual lease, but Fidel Castro (see pp34–5) refuses to cash it. 📍 Map Q6

6 Hotel Nacional

Symbolic of Havana's decadent pre-revolutionary heyday, this hotel (see p11) was built in 1930 in Spanish Neo-Classical style and was closely associated with the Mafia. Actor Marlon Brando and supermodel Naomi Campbell feature in the hotel's celebrity guest list (see p11).

Socializing on the Malecón

7 Malecón
Havana's seafront boulevard was laid out in 1902 by US Army General Leonard Woods. It took another 50 years for the six-lane causeway to be extended to the Río Almendares. Now officially known as Avenida Antonio Maceo, it is lined with late 19th-century buildings and high-rise hotels (see p11).

8 Hotel Habana Libre
This national monument opened in March 1958 as the Havana Hilton. Built in Modernist style with 630 rooms, it was the largest and tallest hotel in Latin America, and featured a casino and supper club. The hotel also once served as Fidel Castro's headquarters (see p69).

9 Ernest Hemingway
The famous US author first came to Cuba in 1932 to fish for marlin. He fell in love with the island and it was here that he wrote For Whom the Bell Tolls. In 1940 he bought Finca Vigía (see p36) outside Havana, making it his home for 20 years.

10 Steam Trains
Creaking engines towing carriages piled high with sugar-cane are a common sight in Cuba, which has more than 100 working steam trains – more than any other country except China. Most were made in Philadelphia in the 1920s.

This was a perfectly proportioned 1950s icon.
- 2 1958 Edsel Corsair
Launched in 1958, the Edsel Corsair's styling drew more laughs than praise. Production of the flamboyant fully ended the following year.
- 3 1959 Cadillac Eldorado
Reflecting the pinnacle of exorbitant late-1950s styling, this rocket-like car was inspired by the space race.
- 4 1951 Chevrolet Styleline
This Chevy was the most commonly seen classic car in Cuba.
- 5 1950 Studebaker Champion
Its unmistakable bullet-nose design proved to be popular with Cubans.
- 6 1951 Kaiser Traveler
Ahead of its time, this excellent car had many safety features that the US government would later mandate.
- 7 1951 Pontiac Chieftain
This car had a likeness of a Native American chieftain on its hood, which lit up when the headlights were on.
- 8 1953 Buick Super
Famed for its "grinning tooth" grill, this car's Dyna-flow three-speed transmission was nicknamed "Dynaflush" for its slow responsiveness.
- 9 1951 Hudson Hornet
Its ground-hugging profile and power made it a winner in stock-car racing.
- 10 1952 Oldsmobile Super 88
This behemoth had power steering and a lightweight body that promised "one finger" parking.

FROM THE COLONIAL SPLENDOR OF HABANA VIEJA (Old Havana) to the faded early 20th-century grandeur of Vedado, central Havana is replete with castles, palaces, mansions, and cathedrals. Centered on four colonial plazas, much of Habana Vieja has been restored and teems with atmospheric hotels, top-notch restaurants, trendy boutiques, and lively bars. Farther afield, Vedado is laid out on an easily navigated grid of tree-shaded streets lined with once resplendent mansions. The main attractions are the amazing university and cemetery, and the Plaza de la Revolución, the setting for many of the impressive political marches past and present. Vedado's nightclubs from its 1950s heyday still sizzle, and the high-rise hotels of the same era are a popular draw even today.

Plaza Vieja

1 Catedral de La Habana
 Havana's charming cathedral (1777), officially known as the Catedral de la Virgen María de la Concepción Inmaculada, has an exquisite Baroque façade supported by pilasters and asymmetrical bell towers. The relatively austere altar has fading frescoes by Giuseppe Perovani. Of the eight side chapels, the largest is Capella Sagrario, which contains tiny houses used as ex-votos. The plaza is surrounded by colonial mansions and enlivened by pretty mulattas dressed in colorful colonial costumes (see p8).

2 Plaza de Armas
 This cobbled plaza (see p8), laid out in the 1600s as the administrative center of Cuba, is named for the military exercises that took place here. It is surrounded by notable buildings, such as the Castillo de la Real Fuerza (see p37), the temple-like Neo-Classical El Templete, and the Palacio de Los Capitanes Generales – a former governor's palace that houses Museo de la Ciudad (see p36). Map X4
 • El Templete: open 9am–7pm; adm

3 Plaza Vieja
 Dating from 1559, this plaza (see p9) is in the process of being restored. Columned arcades and interesting buildings spanning four centuries rise on each side. The 18th-century Casa del Conde de Jaruco hosts art exhibitions, while the Museo de Naipes exhibits a collection of playing cards. On the southeast corner, the Art Nouveau Palacio Vienna Hotel is being resurrected.

Map X5 • Casa del Conde Jaruco: Calle Muralla 107; (7) 862 2633; open 10am–5pm Mon–Sat • Museo de Naipes: (7) 860 1534; adm

4 Iglesia y Convento San Francisco
 The grandiose Basilica Menor de San Francisco de Asís ceased to be used for worship following British occupation in 1762. Today it hosts music concerts. The adjoining cloisters of the former convent house is a museum of religious art. An open crypt displays bodies of important colonial citizens (see p9).

Castillo de la Real Fuerza, Plaza de Armas

Restoring Old Havana

In 1982, UNESCO named Habana Vieja a World Heritage Site and Cuba initiated a plan to save the crumbling colonial city. Eusebio Leal, the Official City Historian, has since overseen the remarkable effort. Priority has gone to the most important buildings, many of which have been turned into museums, hotels, and bars.

5 Calle Mercaderes

This cobbled street (see p9) is lined with colonial mansions housing tiny museums, boutiques, and other fascinating places. The three blocks might take a full morning to explore, with requisite stops at the Museo de Asia, Museo del Tabaco, and Maqueta de la Habana – a fabulous scale-model of Habana Vieja. Break your stroll at Mesón de la Flota, a bodega hosting live flamenco.

6 Museo Nacional de Bellas Artes

This world-class museum has two parts. An international section occupies the Renaissance-style Centro Asturiano, built in 1927, and boasts treasures from ancient Egypt, Greece, and Rome. There are also works by European and North American masters, which include Gainsborough, Goya, and Rubens. The Modernist Palace of Fine Arts, a separate building two blocks away, displays works by Cuban artists (see p41) from different periods (see p9).

7 Museo de la Revolución

Housed in the former presidential palace once occupied by General Batista, this museum is a tribute to the Revolution (see p31), from the guerrilla war to the current day. The ornate, domed building, built in 1920, is as fascinating as the collection, and includes the Salón de los Espejos, a hall lined with mirrors. At the rear is the Granma Memorial (see p32), featuring the yacht Granma as well as aircrafts and vehicles used in the Bay of Pigs invasion (see p31).

The dome at the Museo de la Revolución

8 Capitolio

The nation's grandiose former congressional building was inaugurated in 1929 and incorporates Art Deco elements into a Neo-Classical design that closely resembles Washington D.C.'s Capitol. It has been restored and is open to the public. Visitors approach via a steep flight of stairs flanked by classical bronze figures. A huge Statue of the Republic stands at the entrance hall, which features a fake 25-carat diamond embedded in the floor. The cavernous Salón de los Pasos Perdidos (Hall of Lost Steps), named so for its unusual acoustics, leads to the grand Chamber of Deputies (see p10).

Ministerio del Interior, Plaza de la Revolución

9 Parque Central
An epicenter of social life in Havana, this palm-shaded square has a statue of José Martí (see p31) and is surrounded by monumental 19th- and 20th-century buildings. These include the Neo-Classical Hotel Plaza and the spectacular Baroque Gran Teatro de la Habana (see p69), which has angels mounted on its corner towers (see p10).

10 Plaza de la Revolución
The administrative and political center of Cuba since the early 1950s, the plaza was laid out and surrounded with Modernist and monumentalist government buildings. Huge political rallies are held here. The Memorial José Martí on the south side features a large granite monument of the national hero, plus an excellent museum topped by a Surrealist tower. A visage of Che Guevara adorns the façade of the Ministerio del Interior (see p11).

Habana Vieja Walk

Morning

After breakfast, head to Plaza de la Catedral (see p8), the most intimate of the city's colonial plazas. Peek inside the Cathedral and then stop for a drink at Ernest Hemingway's favorite haunt, La Bodeguita del Medio (see p72). Take photos of the locals dressed in colonial dresses before strolling along Calle San Ignacio, which is full of art galleries. Then turn left on Calle O'Reilly and walk two blocks south to Plaza de Armas (see p8). Move around the square in a clockwise direction, stopping to admire the Castillo de la Real Fuerza (see p37). On the park's southeast corner, explore the Palacio de los Capitanes Generales (see p8). Opposite, the Museo de la Plata (see p36) is worth perusal before exiting the square along Calle Oficios. Take your time to admire the 18th-century buildings here.

Afternoon

Stop for refreshments at La Paella (see p72), a bodega-style restaurant on Calle Obrapia. Revived, continue south to visit the Iglesia y Convento San Francisco (see p9). Then walk toward Plaza Vieja (see p9), where highlights include the Museo de Naipes, which displays playing cards through the ages, and the Cámara Oscura, a rooftop optical reflection camera that offers a magnified view of life from the top of Havana. End your day with a satisfying meal at Restaurante Santo Ángel (see p72), just north of Plaza Vieja.

Western Cuba

WESTERN CUBA BOASTS SOME OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL scenery in the country. The dramatic beauty reaches its pinnacle at Pinar del Río in the Viñales valley. These mountains are laced with hiking trails, notably at mountain communities Soroa and Las Terrazas, and in the Guanahacabibes Peninsula, at the western tip of Cuba. Fine tobacco is grown in fields tucked into valleys and spread throughout the Vuelta Abajo region. Just off the mainland is Isla de la Juventud, with an expanse of wild terrain that shelters endemic bird life. Neighboring Cayo Largo, an island in the Archipiélago de los Canarreos, with its white beaches, is a tourist-only haven.

Farmer ploughing a field with oxen near Viñales

1 Las Terrazas

Founded in 1968 as a village in the pine-clad mountains of the eastern Sierra del Rosario, this community (see p12) has a lovely setting with simple houses built in terraces overlooking a lake. The local Hotel La Moka focuses on ecotourism and arranges bird and hiking trips. The village also hosts local rodeo entertainment. Tourists can walk the well-maintained trails that lead to the Buena Vista coffee plantation and along the San Juan river to cascades and mineral springs. Boats can also be hired on the lake. Map C2 • Hotel La Moka: Autopista Nacional, km 51, Pinar del Río; (82) 277 8600 • www.lasterrazas.cu

2 Soroa

Surrounded by forested mountains, Soroa, once a center for coffee production, is currently a holiday village offering a scenic escape for nature lovers. Attractions include a stunning orchid garden (see p12) displaying more than 700 species. A trail heads sharply downhill to the El Salto waterfall, while more challenging hikes lead to the Mirador de Venus – a mountaintop lookout with superlative views. The Hotel & Villa Turística Soroa is a simple, though delightful, retreat. Map C2 • Hotel & Villa Turística Soroa: (48) 52 3534

3 Viñales

The agricultural community of Viñales has preserved the colonial architecture of this tiny village. The main street is lined with red-tile, roofed cottages fronted by columned arcades. The nearby Casa de Don Tomás, an architectural gem built in 1822, has been converted into a restaurant. A church stands over Parque Martí, where the Casa de la Cultura hosts cultural activities. It is common to see horse-drawn carts making their way through town toward the tobacco fields and mogotes nearby (see p13). 4 Cayo Levisa

Ringed by white-sand beaches, this tiny island (see p48) off Pinar del Río can be reached by a small ferry from the mainland. A nearby coral reef has splendid crystal-clear dive sites while the deeper waters farther offshore are populated with marlin and other game-fish. The mangroves found in this region are also a habitat for waterbirds (see p48).

The Palacio de Guasch at Pinar del Río

5 Pinar del Río

Founded in 1669, this is a peaceful town with a sloping main street lined with eclectic buildings, many with Art Nouveau façades. The Palacio de Guasch stands out for its flamboyant exterior. The town is a center of tobacco processing and is home to the Fábrica de Tabacos Francisco Donatién, the local cigar factory. Map B3 • Fábrica de Tabacos Francisco Donatién: (48) 773 069; open 9am–4pm; adm

6 Vuelta Abajo

To the west of the provincial capital, these fertile plains centered on the town of San Juan y Martínez are famed for their tobacco. The leaves, protected from the sun by fine netting, are cured in traditional ranches. The Finca El Pinar Vegas Robaina, a private tobacco finca (ranch) of renowned farmer Alejandro Robaina is worth a visit. Map B3 • Finca El Pinar San Luís, Vegas Robaina • (48) 79 7470 • Open 10am–5pm Mon–Sat • Adm for guided tours

Cork Palm

Found only in a few tiny pockets of the Sierra del Rosario, Cuba's endemic Palma corcho is a primitive member of the cycad family. Living in an ecosystem threatened by deforestation, the species reproduces with difficulty, although individual palms live to be more than 300 years. As a result, this living fossil faces possible extinction.

7 Parque Nacional Península de Guanahacabibes

Occupying a slender peninsula jutting into the Gulf of Mexico at the western tip of Cuba, this park (see p46) – a UNESCO Biosphere Reserve – protects a rare dry forest habitat. Endangered mammals like the endemic hutia and solenodon exist here, as do deer, wild pigs, iguanas, and more than 170 bird species. Guided hikes are offered from the Ecological Station. A sandy track runs to Cabo San Antonio, marked by a lighthouse built in 1849. Map A3 • (48) 75 0366 • Adm • www.ecovida-pinar.cu

8 Cayo Largo

Lined with a series of white-sand beaches, Cayo Largo offers activities like horseback riding, sailing and scuba diving. Excursions whisk you off to nearby isles that are home to flamingos and iguanas. Accommodations range from a fishing lodge to 4-star all-inclusives (see p124). The island is popular for excursions from Havana and Varadero. Map F4

Hanging tobacco to dry at Vuelta Abajo

9 Nueva Gerona

The slightly sleepy capital city of Isla de la Juventud has a graceful colonial core featuring venerable one-story buildings with columns supporting red-tiled roofs. The Iglesia Nuestra Señora de los Dolores is a lovely church on the recently remodeled main plaza, which has a small museum. The Museo de Ciencias Naturales nearby displays re-creations of local natural habitats. 📍 Map D4

Presidio Modelo at Nueva Gerona

10 Presidio Modelo

This former penitentiary (see p32) on the southeast outskirts of Nueva Gerona was built in 1926 with three huge circular cellblocks. In October 1953, Fidel Castro and 25 other revolutionaries were imprisoned here following their failed attack on the Moncada barracks (see pp30–31). These days, the prison hospital functions as a museum recalling the 20 months that Castro and the other revolutionaries spent here. Castro's room features a collection of books he read, using them to instruct fellow prisoners.

North Coast Drive

Morning

🕒 Leave Havana in a rental car and head west along Avenue 5ta, which leads past the Latin American School for Medical Sciences, where international students receive free medical training. Pass through the port town of Mariel, onto Carretera 2-1-3, a winding and gently rolling road frequented by ox-drawn carts. After about two hours of driving past sugarcane fields, turn south at the sign for Soroa (see p79) and follow the road as it curls uphill through pine forest. Take the time to explore the orchid garden and hike the short trail to the Cascadas El Salto waterfall. Enjoy lunch at one of the restaurants in the locale before continuing.

Afternoon

Returning to the highway, continue west through the towns of Bahía Honda and Las Pozas, with the Sierra del Rosario mountains to the south. The Pan de Guajabón – a dramatic mogote can be reached by turning south at the hamlet of Rancho Canelo. Further west beyond Las Pozas, turn north for the ferry dock to Cayo Levisa (see p79) where you can enjoy an overnight stay at a charming hotel. Boats depart at 10am and 6pm. Alternatively, continue west beyond La Palma to Viñales (see p13). The road cuts through tobacco fields before emerging in the Valle de San Vicente. Turn south at the T-junction for Viñales. Two affordable hotels sit atop mogotes; and private rooms (casas particulares) are available.

4 Diving

Acclaimed for the finest diving in Cuba, La Costa de los Piratas (the Pirate Coast) off Punta Francés (see p82) offers dozens of fantastic dive sites – including the opportunity to explore the wrecks of several sunken Spanish galleons.

5 Cycling

The dramatic scenery and peaceful, paved roads of the Valle de Viñales (see p46) guarantee cyclists an experience to remember. Local farmers offer a warm welcome.

6 Bird-Watching

The Guanahacabibes Peninsula is home to more than 170 bird species, including a number of endemics best seen on guided hikes through the preserve. ☎ Estación Ecológica, Parque Nacional Guanahacabibes • (45) 24 8111 • osmanibf@yahoo.es

7 Rock-Climbing

Scaling the mogotes of the Valle de Viñales requires skill; more than 100 established climbs have been pioneered by local enthusiasts.

8 Swimming

The waters surrounding Cayo Levisa are ideal for swimming and snorkeling, and the lakes at Las Terrazas (see p12) are great for refreshing dips. ☎ Cayo Levisa • (48) 75 6501

9 Wildlife Viewing

TOP 10 Wildlife

1 Mangroves

Growing at the boundary of land and sea, mangroves form a tangled web of interlocking roots that rise from the waters and provide shelter for juvenile marine creatures. Five species grow in Cuba along both Caribbean and Atlantic shores.

2 Crocodiles

The swamplands of southern Isla de la Juventud harbor a large population of Cuban crocodiles (see p50). A successful breeding program has brought the species back from the edge of extinction.

3 Turtles

Female marine turtles crawl onto the shores of pristine Cuban beaches to lay their eggs above the high-water mark. A farm on Isla de la Juventud specializes in breeding green and hawksbill turtles.

4 Parrots

Cuba's endemic parrot (see p50) is easily recognized with its red cheeks, white forehead, and blue wing-tips. The dry tropical forests of Isla de la Juventud have the largest parrot population in Cuba.

5 Spoonbills

This rose-colored wading bird has a spatulate bill and is a member of the Ibis family. It nests in mangroves and can be seen in the Refugio Ecológico Los Indios (see p82).

6 Whale Sharks

Scuba divers often have close encounters with whale sharks in the warm waters of the Bahía de Corrientes and off Punta Francés.

7 Bonefish

This silvery fish is well-camouflaged against the sandy bottoms of shallow lagoons and is notorious for the challenging fight it gives anglers. Cayo Largo is a prime site for bonefishing.

8 Marlin

The fast-flowing Gulf Stream off the north coast of Pinar del Río is a veritable highway for marlin, which give sport-fishers a tremendous fight. María La Gorda has a marina and offers sport-fishing charters. ☎ María La Gorda: (82) 77 1306

9 Iguanas

Looking almost as lifeless as the ground they walk on, these giant lizards (see p50) crawl around the arid terrain of the Península de Guanahacabibes (see p46) and the infertile Archipiélago de los Canarreos.

10 Manatees

These endangered marine mammals inhabit the coastal lagoons off both north and south shores and, although rarely seen, are very common off the Golfo de Guanahacabibes. Manatees feed on seabed grasses and other vegetation.

Central Cuba West

Encompassing the provinces of Matanzas, Cienfuegos, and Santa Clara, Central Cuba West is the traditional center of tourism. Visitors flock to the white sands of Varadero, and even further east, Cayo Santa María is fast developing into a booming tourist beach spot. The region is also blessed with wilderness – the Zapata Peninsula shelters crocodiles and birdlife, while the pine-clad Sierra del Escambray offers mountain trails and waterfalls. History fans are drawn to museums at Playa Girón and Santa Clara. Cienfuegos is blessed with imposing colonial structures and fin de siècle mansions, while Matanzas thrums to the rhythms of Afro-Cuban music and dance. At Christmas, the sleepy town of Remedios explodes with fireworks fever.

1 Matanzas

This historic port town, which evolved as a center for sugar export and importation of slaves, was dubbed the “Athens of Cuba,” when artistic life flourished here during the 19th century. Most sites of interest surround Plaza de la Vigía, including the Teatro Sauto and the Catedral de San Carlos. good starting point is tiny Parque Colón, where a statue of Christopher Columbus stands in front of the browbeaten Catedral de la Concepción Inmaculada, built in 1826. The Museo Municipal Oscar María de Rojas (see p37) has fascinating displays with some artifacts dating back to pre-Columbian days. Horse-drawn taxi-cabs traverse town, and are a great way to sightsee and meet locals. 📍 Map F2

4 Parque Nacional Ciénaga de Zapata

This vast park is Cuba’s most complete wildlife preserve. Swampland smothers the region, while mangroves, reeds, and wet forests also provide varied habitats that support more than 170 bird species, including the Cuban pygmy owl and the tiny endemic zunzuncito (see p50). Manatees swim in coastal lagoons, where Cuban crocodiles also lurk, and flamingos flock to Laguna de las Salinas at the head of the Bahía de Cochinos (see p14). Official guides lead nature-oriented tours. The few inhabitants have traditionally made a living by burning mangroves to make charcoal. 📍 Map E3 • National Park office: Playa Larga; (45) 98 7249; open 8am–4:30pm daily; adm includes a guide

Manjuarí

This primitive fish from the antediluvian dawn evolved at least 270 million years ago, about the time the first reptiles crawled out of the seas. Growing to 6 ft (2 m) long, it has an elongated snout like a crocodile's. Its scaly skin is covered with natural oil. Endemic to Cuba, the dark green fish inhabits the Zapata swamps.

5 Santa Clara

Known as the "city of the heroic guerrilla," Santa Clara is an industrial and university town from where, in 1958, Che Guevara led the final battle to topple Batista (see p32). Visitors flock to sites associated with the battle, such as the Tren Blindado (a derailed armoured train) and the Complejo Escultórico Ernesto Che Guevara (see p91). Also of interest is the frescoed ceiling of the Teatro de la Caridad (Charity Theater).

The calm peacock-blue sea is protected by a coral reef and is ideal for swimming and snorkeling – the deeper waters beyond the reef offer diving. Catamaran and sport-fishing excursions depart from a marina. ☎ Map J1

8 Cienfuegos

A maritime city lying on the shores of a massive bay, Cienfuegos was founded in 1819, when French settlers laid out a near-perfect grid around the Plaza de Armas, now called Parque Martí. Neo-Classical buildings that grace the square include a restored cathedral. The tree-shaded Paseo del Prado boulevard slopes to the Punta Gorda district, where accommodation in Art Nouveau and mid-20th-century Modernist homes can be rented. The highlight of any visit is a meal at Palacio del Valle, a mansion decorated in Moorish fashion (see p93).

9 Sierra del Escambray
Spanning three provinces, this rugged mountain range rises inland from the Caribbean coast, attaining 3,790 ft (1,156 m) atop Pico San Juan. Coffee is farmed on the lower slopes, while the densely forested upper slopes are of great ecological value for their plants and profuse birdlife. Topes de Collantes (see p46) offers accommodation and is a base for guided nature hikes. Embalse Habanilla, a manmade lake, shimmers on the northern slopes. Map H3

10 Caibarién
A once-important port town that still lives partly off its humble fishing fleet, sprawling Caibarién has a dishevelled countenance and awaits a renaissance of its incredible wealth of architecture, with buildings from Neo-Classical to Art Nouveau centered on Parque de la Libertad. The town also has beaches, and mangroves teeming with birds. Map H3

Jagüey Grande to Cienfuegos Drive

Morning

Start your day early with a visit to the Museo Memorial Comandancia FAR (see p14). After a brief tour, get to the highway and drive south along the ruler-straight road with the grassy swamps of Zapata (see pp14–15) on each side. Break at La Boca de Guamá to see the crocodiles and then at Centro Ecológico, where an ecological trail lets you experience the Zapata ecosystems first-hand. Back at Playa Larga, follow the main road south along the shoreline toward Playa Girón. Take time to browse the fascinating Museo Girón (see p15) then continue 5 miles (8 km) east to Caleta Buena (see p15). Enjoy lunch and an hour or two snorkeling in this sheltered cove. Note that in March and April, the road is smothered with crabs migrating inland to spawn. They are a hazard; ensure that your tires have plenty of tread to reduce the chance of getting a puncture from broken shells.

Afternoon

Retrace your path to Playa Girón and turn north; the route is potholed in places. At Bermejas, turn right. Observe daily rural Cuban life in the remote settlements you pass through. Turn right onto Carretera 3-1-2, the main highway that leads to the well-planned maritime city of Cienfuegos. Spend the rest of the day admiring its Neo-Classical structures, ending with a seafood meal at the exotic Palacio del Valle (see p93).

TOP 10 Things to Do

1 Sailing

Small sailing boats can be rented at Rancho Luna and Varadero (see p87) from where boat trips to outlying cays depart and rum cocktails are served as the sun sets.

2 Scuba Diving

Diving enthusiasts will enjoy the region's north and south shores. Playa Larga (see p91), is famed for its coral reefs, and Varadero for sunken warships.

3 Learning to Dance

Matanzas (see p87) is an excellent venue for learning to dance like a Cuban. Festivals in October and November feature dance workshops.

4 Riding the Hershey Train

Connecting Matanzas to Casablanca, this commuter train passes through sugarcane fields once owned by the Hershey chocolate factory.

5 Angling for Bonefish

The region offers some of the best bonefishing in the Caribbean. The shallow lagoons off southern Zapata (see p87) and Cayo Santa María (see p88) are the best spots. Hotels offer guided fishing trips.

6 Birding

Parque Nacional Ciénaga de Zapata and the Sierra del Escambray teem with exotic bird species. Look for parrots, the tocororo, and zunzuncito (see p50), as well as flamingos in the lagoons of Zapata.

7 Snorkeling at Caleta Buena

The whole region is very good for snorkeling, but this cove (see p15) near Playa Girón offers a display of corals, sponges, and tropical fishes. Snorkeling gear can be rented. Lunch and snacks are served during the course of the day. 📍 Map F3

8 Horse-Carriage Tour

Formal excursions by colonial-era, horse-drawn carriages are a great way to explore Varadero and Cienfuegos (see p88), while in all other cities you can hop aboard rickety coches that ply the main streets as slow-moving taxis for locals.

9 Paragliding

Varadero is the place for this thrilling activity, where you strap on a harness attached to a giant kite pulled by a speedboat. In seconds you're soaring, with a bird's view of the beach resort far below.

2 Trinidad

Cuba's most endearing colonial city was founded in 1514 by Diego Velázquez and named a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1988. Closed to traffic, the cobble streets have remained largely unchanged since the 18th century, when Trinidad grew wealthy from trade in slavery and sugar. The museums, churches, and plazas are intriguing, but the real joy is in wandering the narrow streets and observing daily life (see pp16–17).

3 Valle de Los Ingenios

A broad carpet of sugarcane covers this fertile vale northeast of Trinidad. The area gets its name from the many sugar mills

(ingenios) built during the 18th and 19th centuries, when vast sugar plantations occupied the entire valley. While many of the sugarcane estates are in the process of being restored as museums, the main house of the Hacienda Manaca Iznaga estate has been converted into a restaurant. Climb its 147-ft (45-m)

4 Gran Parque Natural Topes de Collantes

The steep drive to the northwest of Trinidad is well rewarded at Topes de Collantes, which functions as a base for hikes to towering waterfalls and the colonial-era coffee estate at Finca Codina, where caves and a beautiful orchid garden can be explored. Topes has many hotels in its vicinity, including the vast Kurhotel, which is dedicated to health tourism. Reserva y Coordinación oversees the arrangements for organized tours and guides. Antiguo Convento de San Francisco de Asís

Nuestra Señora de la Merced, Camagüey

5 Jardines del Rey Off the north coast of Ciego de Ávila and Camagüey, the Jardines del Rey (“King’s Garden”) archipelago comprises about 400 islands, mostly uninhabited. Cayo Coco, one of the largest isles, and neighboring Cayo Guillermo have tourist hotels and watersports along the beaches. The diving is superb, and flamingos flock to the inshore lagoons (see pp18–19).

6 Camagüey Cuba’s third largest city is replete with colonial and Neo-Classical buildings lining restored plazas. The city’s network of streets – designed to thwart pirates – can be confusing to visitors. Sites include the Catedral Nuestra Señora de la Merced, museums and Teatro Principal – home to the Ballet de Camagüey. Two hotels complement the private room rentals. The city’s nightlife is best experienced at the Casa de la Trova (see p23).

La Trocha

A line of defence was built by the Spanish during the 19th-century Wars of Independence to block the advance of Cuban nationalist forces, the mambises. La Trocha stretched across Cuba from Morón, north of Ciego de Ávila, to Júcaro, on the Caribbean coast, and featured fortified towers.

7 Parque Nacional Jardines de la Reina

More than 600 deserted isles scattered on waters off Ciego de Ávila and Camagüey provinces form a marine Eden protected by a long coral reef. Marine turtles lay their eggs on beaches, while iguanas laze in the sun and flamingos wade in the shallows. Two cruise vessels and a floating hotel cater to anglers and divers. The Avalon Dive Center at Júcaro handles all visiting arrangements.  Map J4 • Avalon Dive Center; (33) 98 104; www.avalons.net

8 Playa Santa Lucía Proclaimed as a beach-lovers’ paradise by the Cuban tourist board, this lonesome resort has a lovely beach and fantastic opportunities for diving and seeing sharks being hand fed. Horse-drawn carriages will take you to nearby Playa Los Cocos, an even lovelier beach adjoining a ramshackle fishing village. Dining and entertainment are limited to the budget-focused all-inclusive hotels. 📍 Map M3

9 Playa Ancón

The slender Península de Ancón south of Trinidad is lined by a fine, white-sand beach (see p17) served by three tourist hotels. With shallow waters good for swimming and snorkeling, it is also frequented by the locals. A dive center arranges trips to Cayo Blanco to view the fabulous black coral formations. A marina rents out sailboats prior to arriving in Cuba. 📍 Map H4

10 Las Tunas

A provincial capital located between central and eastern Cuba, Las Tunas suffered during the Wars of Independence (see p30) when the town was razed by fire. Carretera Central, the nation's main highway running through the heart of this city, is lined with charming houses. Parque Vicente García, the main square, features the Museo Histórico Provincial, which traces the town's history. The local tradition of ceramic art thrives in Las Tunas. 📍 Map M4 • Museo Histórico Provincial: Calle Francisco Verona & Colón; (31) 34 8201; open 1–9pm daily; adm CUC$1

A Day in Camagüey

Morning

🕒 A full day is barely enough to explore this historically significant town. Get an early start in the morning in Parque Agramonte (see p20) and catch a glimpse of the equestrian statue, the Cathedral, and the Casa de la Trova (see p23). Exit the square by following Calle Cisneros south. After two blocks, turn right. The street brings you to Plaza San Juan de Dios (see p20), surrounded by 18th-century houses. Explore the museum inside the Iglesia y Hospital San Juan de Dios, then follow Calle Matias west three blocks. Turn right onto Calle 24 de Febrero. After five blocks, cobbled Plaza del Carmen (see p20) opens to the northwest at the junction with Calle Martí, and has life-like sculptures scattered about. Lunch at El Ovejito (see p103), a restaurant on the square.

Afternoon

Retrace your steps to Calle Martí following it east to Parque Agramonte. Turn left onto Calle Cisneros to reach Plaza de los Trabajadores. On your right, Casa Natal Ignacio Agramonte (see p21) is worth a peek before exploring the Catedral Nuestra Señora de la Merced (see p21). Don't miss the Santo Sepulcro – a silver sepulchre. Exit the square to the northwest and walk one block to the Teatro Principal (see p21) on your right. Then stroll north along Calle Enrique José to the Museo Ignacio Agramonte (see p21). Continue south along Calle República to return to the town center.

TOP 10 Colonial Trinidad

1 Plaza Mayor
Trinidad's main square is surrounded by 18th-century mansions. Two bronze greyhounds on the south side are popular with kids (see p16).

2 Palacio Brunet
Boasting marble floors, decorative tilework, and fan windows, this mansion is now the Museo Romántico featuring period furniture (see p16).

3 Iglesia y Convento de San Francisco
Built in 1730 by Franciscan monks, this convent is currently home to the Museo de la Lucha Contra Bandidas. ☎ Calle Hernández Echerri 59 & Guinart • (41) 99 4121
• Open 9am–5pm Tue–Sun • Adm

4 Plazuela de Jigüe
This plaza was named after the jigüe (acacia) tree beneath which Father Bartolomé de las Casas celebrated the city's first mass in 1514.

5 Iglesia Parroquial de la Santísima Trinidad
The Church of the Holy Trinity was built in 1892 on the site of the original parish church and has a Gothic altar. ☎ Plaza Mayor

6 Palacio Cantero
Home to the Museo Histórico Municipal, this gem is filled with sumptuous period furnishings and eclectic exhibits on Trinidad's history (see p16).

7 Casa de Aldemán Ortíz
This early 19th-century mansion has a balcony with views of the plaza and an art gallery on the ground floor. ☎ Calle Rubén Martínez Villena & Calle Bolívar • (41) 99 4432 • Open 8am–5pm

8 Iglesia de Santa Ana
At the northeast corner of the old city, this semi-derelict church stands over a small plaza with a lively cultural center in a former prison. ☎ Calle Camilo Cienfuegos & Calle José Mendoza

9 Ermita de Nuestra Señora de la Candelaria de la Popa
With a triple-arched bell tower, this tiny church is poised on a hill overlooking Trinidad. The chapel is closed but the views from here are worth the climb. ☎ Calle Simón Bolívar Final

10 Casa de los Conspiradores
This intriguing home named for the nationalist conspirators that rendezvoused here is now an art gallery. ☎ Calle Hernández Echerri & Rosario

TOP 10 The Cays

1 Cayo Coco

More than 14 miles (20 km) of gorgeous white beaches, crystal-clear turquoise ocean, and excellent all-inclusive hotels draw visitors from far and wide to Cayo Coco. Map K2

2 Cayo Guillermo

Linked to Cayo Coco by a narrow causeway, this small cay is similarly blessed with stunning beaches and warm waters. Its mangroves provide good opportunities for those interested in birding (see p18).

3 Cayo Sabinal

A remote cay that is accessible solely by a dirt road or by boat excursions from Playa Santa Lucía, Cayo Sabinal has three spectacular beaches, but facilities are scarce. Wild pigs roam the scrub-covered interior (see p19).

4 Diving with Sharks

Certified divers can experience thrilling encounters with sharks on organized dives at Cayo Coco and Playa Santa Lucía. In Jardines de la Reina, guides even ride the sharks.

5 Cayo Paredón Grande

This scrub-covered cay offers a beach with a superb bar and watersports that can be arranged through hotels. Built in 1859, the intriguing Faro Diego Velázquez lighthouse, is located here.

Map L2

6 Pedraplén

This causeway connects Cayo Coco to the mainland. Made of solid earth with only two sluices, it bisects the existing bay and has an impeded tidal flow (see p19).

7 Cayo Romano

Spectacular coral reefs await visitors to this large uninhabited cay. A road connects to the mainland at Brasil, where a military checkpoint sometimes denies access. Map L2

8 Fishing

Fishing enthusiasts can follow the example of Ernest Hemingway who fished the waters off the Jardines de la Reina for marlin and other gamefish. Sport-fishing trips are offered from the main beach resorts at the cays and by Avalon Dive Center (see p98).

9 Centro de Investigaciones de Ecosistemas Costeros

This center for coastal environmental studies and protection is open to the public and features exhibits on manatees, flamingos, and coral reefs. Map K2 • Cayo Coco • (33) 30 1161

10 Cayo Anclitas

In the heart of the Jardines de la Reina, this tiny cay has a turtle farm and a visitors' center. A floating hotel offshore hosts diving and fishing excursions.

📍 Map M4

2 Sugarcane Fields

The southern half of the Sancti Spiritus province is a veritable sea of sugarcane extending east into much of Ciego de Ávila province. Feathery fronds rise from the stalks during the dry summer months.

3 Rugged Mountains

The craggy, thickly forested Alturas de Banao was a base for Che Guevara's guerrilla army in 1958. Trails lead from Campismo Planta Cantú, a holiday camp with cabins.

4 Plains

Hardy cattle munch the windswept, grassy plains of eastern Ciego de Ávila and Camagüey provinces, where the cowboy lifestyle is still very much alive.

5 Lakes

Anglers delight in the many fish species near Sancti Spiritus, and in the milky-colored Laguna de la Leche and Lago de Redonda, both outside Morón.

📍 Morón: Map K2

6 Coral Cays

Enhanced by their jewel-like settings in seas of jade and aquamarine, hundreds of coral cays speckle the oceans off Central Cuba East. Most are uninhabited but offer excellent wildlife viewing.

7 Tropical Forest

Dense montane forests cloak much of this region. Sierra del Chorrillo, south of Camagüey is an excellent venue for those who want to explore the tropical dry forests. 📍 Map L4

8 Underground Caves

Caves make up a large part of the limestone uplands around Topes de Collantes (see p46). The Cueva del Javalí at Cayo Coco (see p101) features a restaurant and cabaret.

9 Waterfalls

Drenched in rainfall, the Sierra del Escambray around Topes de Collantes (see p46) resounds to the thunderous noise of cascades splashing into crystal-clear pool. The Salto de Caburní is easily reached by a well-trodden trail.

10 Beaches

Sandy beaches unfurl along the Atlantic shore of the Jardines del Rey (see pp18–19). The cays of the Jardines de la Reina (see p98) are also ringed by white sands. The mainland shore has few beaches (see pp48–9).

The Far East

FORMERLY KNOWN AS ORIENTE, far-eastern Cuba is dominated by rugged mountains. The Sierra Maestra was the major base of Fidel Castro's guerrilla army (see p34), and the Sierra Cristal and Sierra Purial comprise a wilderness of mountain rain forest and offer spectacular hiking and birding. The coastline is no less rugged with lovely beaches lining the shore of Holguín. Historic cities dot this corner of the republic; Santiago de Cuba – birthplace of the Revolution (see pp24–25) – teems with sites of cultural note while Baracoa is the country's oldest city. Cuba's African heritage is keenly felt in Santiago de Cuba and Guantánamo, the birthplaces of son and changüü (see pp42–3) respectively.

A fortress at Santiago de Cuba

1 Santiago de Cuba
 Graced by intriguing buildings, this sprawling industrial city was Cuba's capital until 1553, Santiago de Cuba's colonial core (casco histórico). Must-see sites include the Cathedral, Casa-Museo de Diego Velázquez, the Museo Emilio Bacardí, and the Moncada barracks – the base for Castro's revolution in 1953 (see pp30 – 31). Following the Haitian revolution in 1791, French and Haitian migrants flooded the city and fostered unique forms of architecture, music, and dance. Don't miss the annual Festival del Pregón in July (see p53).

2 Holguín
 This industrious provincial capital featuring colonial plazas, several churches, and museums is worth exploring. Its most famous son is Calixto García, a general in the Wars of Independence (see p30). His house, now containing a museum, stands near Plaza Calixto García, where the Museo Provincial de Historia displays period pieces. Climb the steps to the top of Loma de la Cruz for splendid views. Mirador de Mayabe offers a grand mountain-top lunch (see pp22–3).

3 Gibara
 Once a wealthy port town, Gibara now draws much of its current income from a fishing fleet that harbors in picturesque Bahía de Bariay. The original city walls are now relics, but Parque Calixto García boasts a colonial church and museums of natural history and decorative arts. The town's white-painted houses lend the city its nickname, "Villa Blanca" (White City). Many colonial homes offer private room rentals (see p23).

4 Playa Guardalavaca
 This beach zone an hour's drive north of Holguín was developed as a holiday resort in the mid-1980s and is now Cuba's third-largest resort destination. Current development is focused on the white-sand beaches of Esmeralda (see p49), Yuraguana, and Pesquero, and either side of flask-shaped Bahía de Naranjo. The bay has an aquarium with dolphin shows, while trails provide insights into local ecology (see p23).

Gibara's colonial church

Columbus in Cuba

Inhabitants of Baracoa believe that Christopher Columbus landed in the Bahía de Miel and that the flat-topped mountain he described was El Yunque (see p27). Experts, however, believe that the mountain was the Silla de Gibara and that Columbus actually landed in the Bahía de Bariay on October 28, 1492.

5 Museo Aborigen Chorro de Maíta

This archaeological site is one of the largest native Indian burial sites in the Caribbean. Of the nearly 200 skeletons unearthed, many still lie in situ as they were found, and can be seen from a boardwalk. A museum displays pottery and other artifacts. The neighboring Aldea Taína re-creates an Indian village with life-size statues and the locals re-enact Taíno life.

6 Sitio Histórico Birán

Opened to the public in 2002, the Finca Manacas estate, outside Birán, where Fidel Castro was born, belonged to his father Angel Castro (see p34). The wooden mansion has been restored and is furnished with original family pieces. The grounds include Fidel's parents' graves, a former schoolhouse, and buildings, which were relocated to create an idealized village. Guided tours are also available.

7 Zoológico de Piedra

Referred to as a “stone zoo” for more than 400 life-size animals that are displayed here. The animals, including lions, an elephant, a gorilla, and crocodiles are carved from stone by coffee farmer Angel Iñigo. He is a self-taught sculptor who used photographs to hew the creatures. Iñigo has also created entire vignettes such as monkeys picking fleas and Taíno Indians killing a wild boar. A restaurant serves criollo meals. 📍 Map Q5 • Boquerón de Yateras • Open 8am–5pm daily • Adm

8 Bayamo

Founded in 1513 by Diego Velásquez, Bayamo is Cuba's second oldest city. In the early 19th century it was the cradle of revolt against Spanish rule. Much of the original city was destroyed in 1869 when citizens razed their town rather than surrender to the invading Spanish forces. Fortunately, many key sites survived this destruction and today the restored historic core is a national monument. Most sights are concentrated around Parque Céspedes and Plaza del Himno, including the not-to-be-missed Parroquial Mayor de San Salvador

9 El Cobre

This village is named after the copper (cobre) mined here in early colonial days. Today it is famous for the Basílica de Nuestra Señora del Cobre (see p25), built in 1926 on a hill overlooking the town. Many pilgrims arrive here to beseech favors of the statue of Virgen de la Caridad del Cobre, and leave offerings in the Sala de Milagros (Salon of Miracles). 📍 Map P6 • 12 miles (20 km) northwest of Santiago • (22) 36 118 • Sala de Milagros: open 6:30am–6pm

10 Baracoa

Cuba's most easterly city, Baracoa (see pp26–7) is spectacularly set within a broad bay. The El Castillo hotel (see p27), a former fortress, provides the best views in town. The city has a church with a cross that locals believe was brought over by Columbus. Baracoa is a good base for hiking and birdwatching, especially at Parque Nacional Alejandro Humboldt (see p47).

A Drive from Santiago to Baracoa

Morning

🕒 Leave early from Santiago de Cuba (see p107), taking the Autopista Nacional, which begins in the Vista Alegre district. Be careful on the freeway, which has plenty of potholes and stray traffic. After about 5 miles (8 km), exit at the signed junction for La Maya. The road passes through sugarcane fields, with the Sierra Baconao rising to the south. Continue east to Guantánamo, where sites of interest around Parque Martí can be explored in one hour. Crossing the Río Bano, divert north to Boquerón de Yateras to reach the Zoológica de Piedra, and lunch at the restaurant.

Afternoon

Return to Guantánamo and turn east for Baracoa. The road passes the entrance to Mirador de Malones (see p112) and meets the shore at Playa Yateritas. At Cajobabo, turn south to reach Playitas, where a museum recalls José Martí's return from exile. Visit the memorial at the spot where Martí landed with General Máximo Gómez (see p31). Beyond Cajobabo, the road snakes into the Sierra de Purial via La Farola (see p112). The mountain road is scenic but drive carefully, especially in fog and rain. At the summit, Alto de Coltillo, have a hot coffee from the roadside shacks before winding down the mountain's north side toward a coastal plain. Before reaching Baracoa, stop at the small zoo, Parque Zoológico Cacique Guamá (open 9am–5pm Tue–Sun).

TOP 10 Planning Your Trip

1 Passports & Visa
All visitors must have a valid passport, a tourist card (see p117), and an onward ticket. It is wise to photocopy passport details in case of theft or loss. US law prohibits most of its citizens from visiting Cuba; those individuals permitted travel visas require a special license from the US Treasury Department.  US Treasury Department • (202) 622 2000 • www.treas.gov/ofac

2 Customs Regulations
Visitors are allowed to bring in 200 cigarettes and 6 pints (3 liters) of spirits duty free, plus 44 lb (20 kg) of personal belongings. Laptop computers must be declared upon arrival, and certain electronic items are prohibited. Customs searches in Cuba can be rigorous, and the authorities take a harsh line on drugs.

3 Time Zone
Cuba is on Eastern Standard Time (EST) and is 5 hours behind Greenwich Mean Time (GMT), the same as New York and Miami. Daylight savings operate from May to October.

4 Insurance
Medical insurance is wise when visiting Cuba, as any illness or accident may involve paying for treatment. It is also worth having insurance against loss or theft of valuables. Visitors intending to engage in extreme sports should ensure that they are covered.

5 When to Go
Cuba's tourist season runs from December to April, when fares, accommodations, and car rentals are at their dearest. This period is less hot than the rest of the year, but temperatures in January can reach 78°F (26°C). The hurricane season lasts from June to November, with the majority of storms occurring from August onwards.

6 What to Take
Light cotton clothing is recommended. Carry swimwear for a beach holiday, as such apparel can be expensive in Cuba. It is worth packing a sweater or lightweight jacket for heavily air-conditioned restaurants, chilly winter nights, and visits to mountainous regions. Long-sleeved clothing and mosquito repellent help guard against mosquitoes and sunscreen, hats, and sunglasses help to prevent sun damage.

7 How Long to Stay
Most visitors to Cuba arrive for beach vacations of a week to 10 days. Havana itself requires at least four days to fully explore, while Viñales, Trinidad, and Santiago de Cuba deserve two each. Allow at least three weeks to explore the length of Cuba, from Pinar del Río to Baracoa.

8 Electricity
Cuba's erratic electricity supply works on a 110-volt system, as in the US and Canada, although some outlets are 220-volt and are usually marked. Plugs are the two-pin North American type, so European visitors may need adaptors. While power cuts are common, tourist facilities have private generators.

9 Insect Repellent
One of the most vital things to bring with you, repellent should be applied liberally on exposed skin, particularly at beach resorts and at night. Avoiding mosquito bites is essential when in Cuba, which has had recent dengue outbreaks.

10 Opening Hours
Most offices are open between 8:30am–12:30pm and 1:30am–5:30pm, Monday to Friday. Shops usually stay open 8:30am–5:30pm Monday to Saturday. Banks typically open 8:30am–noon and 1:30–3pm Monday to Friday, and 8:30–10:30am on Saturdays. Museum hours vary widely, although many are closed on Mondays.

TOP 10 Getting to Cuba

1 Airlines

Virgin Atlantic and Cubana offer regular flights between London and Havana. Air France, Iberia, and KLM fly from Europe to Cuba, as do charter companies such as Air Europe, Martinair, LTU, and Monarch. Air Canada, Cubana, and many charter companies connect Canada with the island. No US companies fly to Cuba other than charter companies for licensed travelers only.

2 Air Fares

Fares are lower off-season from May to November and for mid-week departures. As far as possible, book in advance. Charter companies are usually cheaper than scheduled airlines, although more restrictions apply.

3 José Martí International Airport

Situated on the southern outskirts of Havana, Aeropuerto Internacional José Martí is the main entrance for visitors not arriving for a beach vacation. There is no bus service and travelers will need to take a taxi for the 40-minute ride into the city. The fare should cost about CUC$15–25.

4 Santiago de Cuba Airport

The Aeropuerto Internacional Antonio Maceo is about 5 miles

(8 km) south of Santiago de Cuba's center. Bus services are untrustworthy and unreliable, and the best bet is to take a taxi. Official tourist taxis should cost about CUC$8–10, which you must agree upon with the driver in advance.

5 Other Airports

International airports are at Varadero, Ciego de Ávila, Cayo Coco, Camagüey (used for Playa Santa Lucía), and Holguín (primarily for the resorts of Guardalavaca), and Cayo Largo.

6 Tourist Cards

All visitors must present a tourist card at Cuban immigration upon arrival. The card costs CUC$25 and is valid for 30 days; Canadians receive one for 90 days. Cards are issued upon checking in for your flight to Cuba and must be filled in before passing through passport control.

7 Airport Taxis

Tourist taxis are present at international airports. As few taxi drivers use meters, it is wise to agree upon a fare before setting off. Touts may attempt to steer you toward private taxis, but always decline the offer.

8 Changing Money at the Airport

It is impossible to obtain Cuban Convertible Pesos (see p120) outside Cuba, so exchange currency at the airport. Cadeca (see p120) offers money-changing services at the main airports.

9 Arriving by Ship

A few Caribbean-based cruise lines include Cuba in their itineraries, stopping at the new port facilities in Havana and, less frequently, Santiago de Cuba and Cienfuegos.

10 Ports of Entry

Marinas around the island act as official ports of entry for independent sailors. However, US sailors require prior approval from the Coast Guard and Office of Foreign Assets Control.

TOP 10 Getting Around

1 Internal Flights

Cubana de Aviación has regular connections between Havana, the provincial capitals, and key tourist centers. Although it can be useful, demand exceeds supply and service is unreliable. Aerocaribbean also offers good service.

2 Long-Distance Buses

A good value and reliable bus service is provided by Viazul. It connects Havana to provincial capitals and some major tourist destinations. The buses are air-conditioned with toilets and comfortable seats. Astro provides a less reliable, slightly cheaper, but packed service; modern buses are being introduced.

3 Camellos and Guaguas

Camellos (camels) are articulated buses pulled by lorries. Named for the inverted hump in their middle, they are usually packed and quite uncomfortable. Guaguas are local buses that are also usually full to the brim with passengers.

4 Car Rentals

Car rental is widely available, but expensive. All rental agencies are government owned. Contracts are required for all rentals and customer service is often lax. Rex is the most reputable company of the pack but also the least cost effective.

5 Driving Conditions and Road Rules

Driving can be challenging due to poor roads and numerous obstacles. Poor lighting makes driving at night hazardous. Tránsito (traffic police) enforce speed limits of 30 mph (50 km/h) in towns, 37 mph (60 km/h) on rural roads, 55 mph (90 km/h) on highways, and 62 mph (100 km/h) on freeways.

6 Taxis

There is no shortage of taxis in main tourist areas. However, many drivers don't use their meters and will negotiate a fare. Cocotaxis are a unique mode of transportation. These egg-shaped, bright yellow scooters cost the same as a regular taxi and work particularly well for short distances.

7 Bicitaxis

These crude bicycle-rickshaws are a staple means of getting around within cities. Most are licensed to carry Cubans only. Those that can take tourists provide a fun, but uncomfortable, way to travel short distances.

8 Horse-and-Cart

Antique horse-drawn carriages are a good way of sightseeing in Old Havana, Varadero, and a few other cities. For Cubans, rickety carts are the main means of getting around urban areas.

9 Camiones

These 1950s-era lorries make up for the inadequate bus service. They operate on a scheduled, albeit unreliable, service. They are perennially crowded and uncomfortable.

10 Walking

Cuba's colonial city centers are perfect for exploring on foot. Licensed guides can be hired in Old Havana, Trinidad, and Santiago de Cuba. Beware of hustlers on the street – they cannot be trusted. Be sure to wear comfortable shoes.

TOP 10 Sources of Information

1 Tourist Offices Abroad

Official Cuban tourist offices in Canada and the United Kingdom provide basic information. For more specific details, it is better to contact independent agencies. US travelers should contact the Cubatur office in Canada.

2 Local Tourist Offices

Tourist offices are scattered throughout major tourist centers, but few have the resources to answer more than the most basic questions. Most are set up primarily to sell organized trips.

3 Websites

The Internet has a huge amount of information available. Cuban websites are all state-run and care should be taken if booking online. US websites are barred from accepting bookings for trips to Cuba.

4 English-Language News

The government's official newspaper, Granma, is published in English and distributed at tourist hotels. Most tourist hotels have satellite TV showing CNN and selected English-language news stations.

5 Local Publications

All media in Cuba is government-controlled. Publications are limited to Granma, a few other almost identical newspapers, and about half a dozen publications specializing in the arts. In Havana, the weekly Cartelera provides information on arts and culture in English.

6 Local Tour Operators

Cuba's larger tour operators can provide information on specific regions and activities, but their knowledge is often limited and unreliable. It is better to seek out smaller operators who can offer more specialized tours.

7 Maps

There are several good maps of the country; the best is by International Travel Maps. In Cuba, tourist outlets sell a tourist map of Havana published by Ediciones Geo, and Guía de Carreteras, an excellent road atlas. The best source for maps is El Navegante, situated in Old Havana.

8 Bookstores

A few bookstores in Havana and some shops in large tourist hotels sell a limited range of maps, books, and other travel-related literature. There are very few outlets elsewhere. A second-hand book sale is held on Havana's Plaza de Armas (see p8), from Wednesday to Saturday.

9 Guides

Government-run tour operators can provide guides, and many taxi drivers also act as driver-guides. Car rental agencies will provide a driver-guide on request. Many individuals offer illegal freelance services, but caution must be taken when hiring them.

10 Libraries

Cuba has relatively few libraries (bibliotecas), and the range of books is limited to works deemed politically correct. Havana's Biblioteca Nacional is restricted for both Cubans and foreigners, who must be sponsored by a Cuban government institution.

TOP 10 Banking and Communications

1 The Peso

The Cuban peso is made of 100 centavos. The peso is used mostly by Cubans; there are very few items that tourists will be able, or wish, to use pesos for except local buses, baseball stadiums, and food stalls on the street.

2 The Convertible Peso

All tourist transactions and major purchases are conducted in Cuban Convertible Pesos (pesos convertibles), designated as CUC$, with notes of 1, 3, 5, 10, 20, 50, and 100. The value is pegged at US$1.08. However, it has no value outside Cuba. Euros can be used for transactions in Varadero, Cayo Coco, and Cayo Largo.

3 Banks and ATMs

All banks in Cuba are state-owned. Most will exchange foreign currency at the official rate, though queuing at the counter can be quite a lengthy operation. The regular opening hours are normally 8am–3pm Monday to Saturday, but 8am–noon on the last working day of each month. Some ATMs in major towns can be used to obtain cash advances using cards such as MasterCard and Visa, except for those that have been issued or processed by any US institutions.

4 Cadeca

Foreign currency can be exchanged for CUC$ and pesos at Cadeca casas de cambio (bureaux de change), found throughout the country. An 11 per cent commission is charged if you would like to change US dollars; however, no such commissions exist for other currencies.

5 Credit Cards

MasterCard and Visa are widely accepted in hotels, restaurants, and tourist-oriented stores, but not in out-of-the-way places and smaller outlets. Cards issued by US banks cannot be used. Be prepared for the electronic processing system to be unreliable and frequently not even functioning. Credit cards can be used in order to obtain cash advances at certain banks. An 11 per cent commission is charged for the usage of credit cards.

6 Telephones

Operated by ETECSA, a state company, public phones are plentiful and normally reliable. The system consists of public phones that work with prepaid phone cards for between CUC$5 and CUC$50. These allow you to make relatively inexpensive international calls from any public telephone. Making calls from hotels can turn out to be quite expensive.

7 Cell Phones

Cubacel is a cell phone service provider and has offices in most major cities and tourist centers. If you arrive in Cuba with your personal cell phone Cubacel can activate it, but it is extremely expensive.

8 Phone Codes

Local area codes may have 1 to 3 digits; the number of digits of local numbers varies. To call outside Cuba, dial 0, then 9, followed by the country code. To call Cuba from abroad, dial the international access number (00 in the UK, 011 in the US and Canada), then 53 and the local number.

9 Mail

Mail is dreadfully slow. Every town has a post office and most tourist hotels also sell stamps or prepaid postcards. All mail is read by censors. If sending anything important or valuable it is best to use DHL, which has offices in all major cities.

10 Laptops and Internet

All laptops must be declared when entering Cuba. You can log onto the Internet in many hotels and a few cyber cafés. However, the cost can vary widely. Access to the Internet for Cubans is limited to a privileged few.

TOP 10 Security and Health

1 Emergencies

The following numbers can be used in most places: 116 for police, 115 for fire services, and 114 for an ambulance. However, the police are not usually very responsive to reports of crimes against tourists and reporting theft can result in a lengthy bureaucratic procedure. In case of trouble, it is wise to contact your embassy or consulate. Asistur exists to assist tourists in distress and has offices in most tourist centers.

2 Health Services

Cuba's healthcare system is excellent and free of charge to Cubans. Foreign visitors are usually treated in international clinics. Payment is made in convertible pesos or by credit card, but fees are relatively inexpensive. Most tourist hotels have a doctor or nurse on call.

3 Pharmacies

Pharmaceuticals are in short supply, except in farmacias internacionales (for tourists only) in major cities and resorts. It is wise to bring your own supply of medicines, as well as sunscreens and insect repellents.

4 Personal Safety

Violent crime against foreigners is rare, but in tourist areas and run-down sections of Havana, there is a risk of pick-pocketing and bag-snatching. Avoid dark and lonely spots, do not carry large amounts of cash, or flaunt expensive items. Theft from hotel rooms is a common occurrence, keep your possessions locked in your bag and your valuables in a safe.

5 Jiniteros

Most visitors experience some level of harassment from individuals offering a range of services, but usually only in well-trodden tourist areas. Jiniteros (male hustlers) will attempt to sell you fake cigars as the real thing; jiniteras are female prostitutes. The best way to deal with such situations is to give them the cold shoulder.

6 Police

Every town and village has its local police station but few officers speak English. If you are a victim of theft or are involved in an auto accident, contact your embassy, which should be able to help you.

7 Hitchhiking

Cubans hitchhike from necessity due to the poor public transportation system, although officials discourage foreigners from hitchhiking. Foreign embassies in Cuba report increasing robberies of foreigners by hitchhikers.

8 Women Travelers

Foreign women can receive a fair amount of unwanted attention from Cuban men, but this, for the most part, takes the form of harmless verbal intrusions. The most effective response to them is a stony glare or cold indifference.

9 Water

Do not drink the tap water. Some people prefer not to even brush their teeth with tap water. You should also make sure that ice cubes are made from purified water. Bottled water can be bought cheap and is widely available.

10 Food Hygiene

The best way to avoid an upset stomach is to steer clear of certain foods, notably lobster and fish dishes. Also stay clear of meats or dairy products that have been allowed to stand too long on a buffet counter or in the sun. Food from street stalls should be avoided.

TOP 10 Practicalities

1 Consulates

Spain, Canada, and the UK have embassies in Havana with consular services. The US does not have a full embassy, but the US Interests Section provides assistance to travelers.

2 Legal Assistance

Contact your embassy or consulate for help immediately if you are arrested. The Consultoría Jurídica Internacional provides legal help and has branches in the major cities. ☎ Consultoría Jurídica Internacional: Calle 16 #314, Havana; (7) 204 2490

3 Traffic Police

In the event of a car accident, call the traffic police (tránsitos) and your car rental company. It is also wise to contact your embassy immediately. Do not allow any vehicles involved in the accident to be moved before the police arrive.

4 Bureaucracy

Bureaucracy pervades every aspect of Cuban life. Most services oriented to tourism function fluidly, although unbending regulations can make dealing with businesses and government institutions a frustrating experience.

5 Machismo

Despite advances in women's rights, machismo is ingrained in Cuba's male culture. This is mostly limited to flirtatious behavior to women but can also include expressions of bravado and even aggression intended to demonstrate male pride.

6 Homosexuality

Cuba's Communist government has a history of repressing homosexuality. However, in recent years, the government has been more lenient, and has even become supportive. Unfortunately, police harassment of homosexuals still occurs.

7 Dress Code

Cubans generally dress informally but are usually smartly turned out. Top restaurants require trousers as opposed to jeans or shorts for men. A collared shirt is a good idea for meetings.

8 Photography

It is common courtesy to ask permission before taking pictures of individuals. Photographs of police or military figures should not be taken without permission. Photographing industrial complexes, airports, ports, and military sites is strictly prohibited.

9 Racial Issues

Cuba enjoys harmonious relations between races. Mixed race marriages are common. However, racism has not been eradicated and black youths are the most likely targets.

10 Forms Of Greeting

Civility is important to Cubans, who greet everyone in a room when entering. Women embrace and kiss each other's cheeks, while men shake hands. Common greetings are buen día (good morning), buenas tardes (good afternoon), and buenas noches (good evening).

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Dehydration

It is easy to become dehydrated in Cuba's warm climate, where sweat often evaporates immediately. Drink plenty of bottled water and watch out for headaches, exhaustion, and muscle cramps, signs that you may be suffering from dehydration or heatstroke.

2 Sunstroke

Do not underestimate the power of the tropical sun. Sunburn and sunstroke are the most common health problems tourists encounter when visiting Cuba. Avoid the hottest part of the day, between noon and 3pm, and use a strong sunscreen, even when the weather is cloudy.

3 Traffic Accidents

Driving in Cuba can be dangerous due to the many road obstacles, as well as the lack of street lighting. Accidents involving injuries and deaths are considered a crime, and the guilty driver can be imprisoned.

4 Parking and Speeding Tickets

The traffic police are highly efficient and extremely zealous. Fines for speeding are deducted from the cash deposit of your car rental. Traffic police cannot levy fines on the spot, although unscrupulous policemen may try to do so. Keep to speed limits at all times.

5 Road Hazards

Cuba's roads have many surprises. In cities, cyclists and giant potholes are common threats. In the countryside, livestock often wander into the road. Freeways are especially hazardous due to the presence of pedestrians, ox-drawn carts, cyclists, and broken-down cars. Be prepared for animals and other obstacles moving into your path.

6 Driving At Night

Most Cuban roads are unlit, and lighting in cities is extremely poor. Many vehicles in Cuba do not have functioning lights. Avoid driving at night if possible.

7 Dangerous Rips and Undertows

Cuba's warm oceans tempt bathers to cool off and splash in the waves. However, many beaches are extremely dangerous due to hidden undertows that can drag swimmers out to sea. Beware of beaches with high surf.

8 Scams

Many Cubans are adept at scamming tourists. Scams range from jiniteros (hustlers) trying to sell fake cigars (see p121) and car rental agencies charging for unused gasoline, to taxi drivers overcharging tourists. Try to be alert to this as far as possible. Request an itemized bill at restaurants and hotels, and make sure that you count your change.

9 Prostitutes

Although prostitution is illegal in Cuba, many young women make a living as jiniteras, offering sexual favors for money. Robbery is frequent in these situations, and tourists have even been murdered. Countless other Cubans (male and female) seek relationships with foreigners. Strict regulations govern such sexual relations. Casas particulares will accept unmarried couples (see p127). Tourists are rarely punished, but consequences for Cuban partners (and owners of casas particulares) can be dire.

10 Political Discourse

The Cuban government is highly sensitive to criticism of the Cuban system. Secret police and informers are ubiquitous. Thus, Cubans are extremely wary about discussing politics with people they do not know or trust. Avoid drawing people into conversations about politics, except in private, and foreigners should avoid making critical statements in public. Any tourists who meet with dissidents or visit "independent libraries" are also likely to face problems with the Cuban authorities.

TOP 10 Budget Tips

1 Visit Off-Season

You can save a good deal both through booking package deals and as an independent traveler by visiting during the low season between June and November. The lowest rates are available September through mid-November during the peak of the hurricane season, but such storms are rare and this should not deter you.

2 Stay with Cuban Families

Overnight stays at casas particulares (see p127) are much cheaper than hotels and offer the opportunity of getting to know Cubans. Breakfast and sometimes dinner are served for an extra (but extremely reasonable) charge.

3 Street Food

Cheap food on sale at street stands presents a health risk, and the choices are extremely limited. A pizza or a plate of chicken with rice and beans will cost about five pesos. If you eat at a stall, make sure your food is freshly cooked. Avoid raw salads and fruits, as well as meat or fish dishes that have been left out in the sun.

4 Haggling

Bargaining is acceptable in souvenir markets. If you are persistent and polite, you may succeed in knocking down the price by one third or more. However, most souvenirs in Cuba are reasonably priced. Taxi drivers will negotiate a fare as they prefer not to use their meters; but find out what the metered fare should be in advance to avoid being taken advantage of.

5 Avoid Tourist Stores

Shops in hotels are often overpriced but there are few alternatives as all stores are state-owned. Souvenirs and art are cheaper if bought from the artists themselves or at craft markets that are set up at some of the beach resorts.

6 Public Transport

If you don't mind a little discomfort and unpredictability, traveling like a Cuban can save money. Camellos, guaguas, and camiones (see p118) are a fraction of the cost of tourist buses and taxis and are a great way of meeting the locals. However, state officials try to dissuade foreigners from using public transport intended for Cubans.

7 Share a Guide

Guides normally charge a fixed fee, irrespective of the number of people in a group, so you can cut the cost of a guided tour by hiring a driver/guide for a day and sharing with other visitors. Taxis can also normally be shared between four people during trips.

8 Buy a Phone Card

Making calls from hotel rooms can be very expensive. The best and most economical solution is to buy a phone card (see p120), which can be used in public phones, at some hotels, and in private phones, such as those at casas particulares (see p127).

9 All-Inclusives

The all-inclusive hotels at beach resorts are immensely popular and can offer big savings over other hotels, as all food, beverages, and entertainment is included in your stay. Another benefit is that you can book all-inclusive package deals that include a reduced airfare. The downside is that you may be tempted not to leave the confines of the hotel.

10 Bring a Few Essentials from Home

Cuba's state-run stores impose huge price increases on all goods that are imported. Even local items produced in Cuba itself, such as suntan lotions and soaps, are expensive. You can save a considerable amount of money by bringing all toiletries and other essentials with you.

TOP 10 Eating and Drinking Tips

1 Convenience Stores

The lack of restaurants and convenience stores between towns are the major drawbacks of visiting Cuba. When setting out on journeys, stock up on snacks at Tiendas Panamericanas, the state-run chain of convenience stores. You can also buy imported and packaged food items to supplement the inadequacies of hotel dining.

2 Fresh Fruit and Vegetables

Many hotels face a shortage of fresh fruits and vegetables. However, every town and village has at least one mercado agropecuario (farmer's market), where produce can be purchased for pesos. Visitors staying in casas particulares (see p127) may find this especially useful.

3 Breakfasts

A number of hotels serve typically simple breakfast buffets with cut meats, baked goods, and fruit (often thawed). All-inclusive hotels fare a little better. Other than hotels, few restaurants offer breakfast (desayuno) except in Havana, where French-run bakeries are a bargain.

4 Buffets

Many tourist hotels rely on smorgasbord buffets, called mesa sueca (Swiss table) where you will find a variety of dishes ranging from pastas and salads to roast suckling pig. Although the standards vary greatly, the pricier hotels are usually up to international standards.

5 Fried Food

Typical Cuban criollo cuisine is often deep-fried and heavy with oil. Even vegetables such as green beans often arrive at your table doused in oil. In order to avoid all the grease ask specifically for grilled meat or fish, known as a la parrilla or a la plancha.

6 Bills and Tipping

A 10 per cent service charge is often added to your bill, but no government tax is levied. It is unlikely that your waiter or waitress will end up with any of the service fee, so you should also leave a 10 per cent tip if you think the service merits it, although this is often not the case.

7 Alcoholic Drinks

Cuba excels in making refreshing lager-style beers, such as Cristal or Bucanero, and tasty rums with Havana Club being considered the best option (see p57). Prices range from inexpensive in local bars to very expensive in deluxe hotels. Avoid imported beverages, which are also expensive. Wine is mostly imported from Spain or South America and is relatively expensive – and often stored in poor conditions.

8 Bars

Surprisingly, Cuba has few satisfying bars. Many of the pre-revolutionary bars still exist in their original format, but they mostly serve only tourists. Most of the other bars are much decayed and have a limited range of beers and rums. Hotel bars offer a level of sophistication, but are equally pricey and few Cubans can afford them.

9 Paladares

These are home-run restaurants that offer simple yet filling meals at reasonable prices. As the state restricts what can be sold here, lobster, shrimp, and beef dishes are usually not allowed. Paladares are banned entirely at beach resorts. If an individual on the street guides you to a paladar he or she will expect a commission from the owner who will add the fee to your bill.

10 Buy a Bottle

If you go out with a group in the evenings, it is customary to share a bottle of rum that comes with a bucket of ice, and you can order soft drinks as mixers. It is considerably cheaper compared to ordering individual drinks.

TOP 10 Tours and Special Interests

1 Tours of Habana Vieja

Although visitors can easily explore Old Havana independently on foot, anyone wishing for an in-depth profile should take a guided tour offered by Agencia San Cristóbal. An English-speaking guide will take you through the rich history associated with each sight. Decline the services of individuals presenting themselves on the streets as guides.

2 Excursions to Cayo Largo

Cubanacán and HavanaTur offer one- and two-day excursions from Havana and Varadero to the gorgeous beaches of Cayo Largo. Tour desks in most tourist hotels offer packages, which include airfare, accommodations, and airport transfers. ☎ Cubanacán: Calle 23 #156, Havana; (7) 833 4090; www.cubanacan.cu
• Havanatur: Paseo & 25; (7) 830 8227; www.havanatur.cu

3 Diving

There are superb diving sites around Cuba, which can provide exciting glimpses of underwater life throughout the year. Most beach resorts have scuba diving centers and Avalon Dive Center offers some fascinating dives. ☎ Avalon Dive Center: (33) 98 104; www.avalons.net

4 Birding

For both amateurs and seasoned birders to appreciate the wealth of Cuba's birdlife, dedicated bird-watching tours can be arranged through EcoTur, Quest Nature Tours, and with guides from national parks. ☎ EcoTur: (7) 641 0306
• Quest Nature Tours: (416) 633 5666; www.questnaturetours.com

5 Cycling

Riding a bike is a rewarding way to get off the beaten track and experience rural life. Club Nacional de Cicloturismo offers organized group bicycle tours. Independent cyclists can either bring along their own bikes or rent them.

6 Sportfishing

Marina Hemingway in Havana and most other marinas offer sportfishing charters. All such trips are operated by the state-run Marlin Náuticas & Marinas. Typical rates are CUC$275 for a half-day and CUC$375 for a full day. ☎ Marlin Náuticas & Marinas: (7) 273 1867

7 The Revolutionaries

Anyone interested in revolutionary history cannot miss the venues associated with the Cuban Revolution, including sites in Havana, Santa Clara, Santiago de Cuba, and the Sierra Maestra (see p32).

8 Jewish Heritage Tours

Pre-revolution Havana had a large Jewish population in southern Habana Vieja (see p8), and many Jewish sites have been restored. Start at Casa de la Comunidad Hebrea de Cuba. ☎ Comunidad Hebrea de Cuba: Calle I #241, Havana, (7) 832 8953

9 Hemingway Trail

Ernest Hemingway (see p61) wrote a large number of his most influential books during his 20 years on the island and frequented many venues around the capital. Visitors like to pursue the "Hemingway Trail" that traces the sites in Havana and along the north coast of Cuba. Paradiso offers guided tours of such sites around Havana. ☎ Paradiso: Calle 19 #560, Havana, (7) 832 6928; http://paradisonline.com

10 Steam Train Enthusiasts

Although the first railway on the island pre-dated the establishment of trains on the Spanish mainland, Cuba's remarkable collection of working steam trains is rapidly dwindling (see p61). Museums of trenes de vapores (steam trains) still exist in Havana, Maltipempo, and Rafael Freyre. Several other locations offer rides too.

TOP 10 Accommodation Tips

1 Pick Your Location

In general, beachfront hotels will cost more than those off the beach, and a room with a sea view will be costlier still. Being miles from sites of interest, most beach hotels are all-inclusives, and guests are not expected to stray far except on excursions. In Havana and historic cities, choose a hotel close to the colonial core for ease of exploring.

2 Seasonal Demand

Prior booking is essential during the peak season around Christmas and New Year and is also recommended from January to March. Locally, hotels also fill up for festivals such as the Carnaval (see p52) in Santiago de Cuba and the parrandas (see p88) in Remedios.

3 Casas Particulares

Renting rooms in private homes (see p17) is rewarding for visitors who want to experience everyday Cuban family life. Conditions at casas particulares are fairly simple, but the cost is less than hotels and the experience is priceless. Along with this, some casas particulares will accept unmarried couples, while hotels usually do not. Licensed room rentals are identified by an official sticker resembling an inverted anchor.

4 Making Reservations

Accommodation should be booked well in advance through a travel agency specializing in Cuba in your home country. Reservations made directly with Cuban hotels are not always honored but owners of casas particulares are usually reliable.

5 Arriving Without Reservations

It is possible to travel everywhere off season without advance booking, but the high season is more problematic. If a casa particular is full, the owner will call around town on your behalf to find you a vacant room.

6 Tipping

Tipping is customary for hotel staff although it is at your own discretion. Tip porters CUC$1 per bag carried to your room. If you leave CUC$1 daily in your room you are less likely to suffer theft of personal items by housekeepers.

7 All-Inclusives

Quality varies markedly at all-inclusive hotels, but in general you get what you pay for. The buffet may get monotonous and alcohol is limited to national brands of rum and beer with watered-down wine for dinner. In theory, everything is included in your room rate, but check in advance to see what extra charges may apply. In general, those managed by foreign companies are of higher standard than the locally-managed all-inclusives.

8 Air Conditioning

Almost every hotel and casa particular has air conditioning. Large tourist hotels have a back-up generator, but smaller hotels often suffer blackouts. Some hotels also have ceiling fans, and casa particular owners will usually provide a standing fan if you request one.

9 Visitors with Disabilities

Very few hotels have facilities for the disabled, although recently built or renovated hotels usually have at least one room that is fitted with facilities for disabled travelers. Cuban society, on the whole, is very caring toward disabled people and hotel managers will try to make their stay as comfortable as possible.

10 Parking

Most large tourist hotels have adequate parking facilities for rental cars. However, smaller inner-city hotels and casas particulares rarely do. In such cases, inquire about a secure parking lot that is well-guarded to ensure the safety of your vehicle.

Phrase Book

The Spanish spoken in Cuba is basically the same as the Castilian used in Spain with certain deviations. As in the Spanish-speaking countries in Central and Southern America, the "z" is pronounced like the "s", as is the "c" when it comes before "e" or "i." Among the grammatical variations, visitors should be aware that Cubans use Ustedes in place of Vosotros, to say "you" when referring to more than one person. It is notable that some Indian, African, and English words are commonly used in present-day Cuban Spanish. This basic phrase book includes useful common phrases and words, and particular attention has been paid to typically Cuban idioms in a list of Cuban Terms.
