TOP 10 OF HONOLULU & O'AHU

TOP 10 Highlights of Honolulu & O'ahu

O'ahu is the most populous of the Hawaiian islands, and its conjoined hubs are the city of Honolulu and the world-famous Waikiki Beach. The vast majority of visitors make Waikiki their base, venturing out on day trips to take in Honolulu's many cultural attractions, Pearl Harbor, and other parts of the island. The family-friendly beaches and parks of the South Shore and Kāne'ohe District are in striking distance of Honolulu, while diehard surfers head for the North Coast. The Polynesian Cultural Center is also an easy day trip from the city.

2 Bishop Museum and Planetarium

This state museum in Honolulu offers a fascinating insight into Hawaiian culture. Its Science Garden represents the unique Hawaiian land divisions called ahupua'a. (See pp10-11.)

1 Pearl Harbor

The World War II site draws 1.5 million visitors each year, including veterans and relatives of those who died. The warship USS Arizona is now a memorial. (See pp8-9.)

2 miles — 0 km — 2

Mālama

3 Capitol District

Chinatown, the modern State Capitol, and an old mansion that was once the home of Queen Lili'uokalani are just some of the attractions of this historic district in Honolulu. (See pp12-13.)

5 Hawai'i Maritime Center

Down by Honolulu Harbor are a number of fascinating exhibits about Hawai'i's maritime history, as well as a great viewing point from the top of Aloha Tower. (See pp16-17.)

'Iolani Palace

The palace was built for King Kalākaua and Queen Kapi'olani in the 19th century and was later the seat of government. It is now restored and open to the public. (See pp14-15.)

6 Honolulu Academy of Arts

Arts of the Islamic and Oriental worlds are strong points of this museum, as well as 15,000 works by American and European artists. Polynesian works are displayed, too. (See pp18–19.)

7 Kalākaua Avenue

Kalākaua is Waikiki's main thoroughfare, running along the ocean right up to the crater of Diamond Head. Halfway along the avenue are the "Pink Lady" and the "White Lady" – two landmark, oceanfront hotels with famous bars. (See pp20–21.)

8 South Shore

The South Shore of O'ahu has among its attractions several popular beaches, walking trails over Koko Head, and an underwater park at Hanauma Bay. (See pp22–23.)

10 Polynesian Cultural Center

On the north shore of O'ahu, this center is the place to explore the rich traditions of Polynesia, such as the pageantry and cuisines of Hawai'i, Tahiti, Tonga, and other Pacific islands. (See pp26–27.)

9 Kāne'ohe District

A stunning region northeast of Honolulu, Kāne'ohe has a scenic coastline, lush gardens, state parks, and a Japanese-style temple to explore. (See pp24–25.)

10 Pearl Harbor

Set in a bay where Hawaiians once harvested clams and oysters (hence the “pearl” connection), the infamous World War II site is still a key military base. The harbor’s relics and memorials, which incorporate the resting place of the doomed battleship Arizona and final berth of the historic USS Missouri, are visited by 1.5 million people each year. A museum of military aviation is also nearby.

USS Arizona Memorial

Security measures are in place, and bags may have to be secured in lockers. Carry only what you need and, of course, nothing that might qualify as a weapon.

The attractions of Pearl Harbor may be too much for small children – too much waiting and walking.

2 USS Arizona Visitor Center

Thousands of people pass daily through the center (above), which is the gateway to the offshore memorial. Arrive early: tickets for the movie and boat ride are gone by noon on busy days. And even then, expect several hours’ wait.

3 USS Arizona Museum

This collection of interpretive exhibits and artifacts is one place to visit during the time you’ll inevitably spend waiting for the boat.

1 Battleship Row

The U.S. docked the workhorses of its Pacific fleet along the shore of Ford Island. Vulnerably positioned, the ships sustained the full force of the attack on the morning of December 7, 1941.

Mighty Mo (USS Missouri)

4 Historical Film

The 23-minute documentary film shown at the Visitor Center gives viewers a broad outline of the forces that led up to the Pearl Harbor attack and the main events of that fateful day.

5 USS Arizona Memorial

The stark white structure, floating above the ship that became a tomb, is a place to solemnly peruse the names of the dead inscribed on the wall (below).

6 USS Bowfin Park

This park, entryway to the submarine museum, plays host to a display of weaponry, including a deadly looking Poseidon C-3 Missile (above) and a Japanese suicide torpedo.

7 USS Bowfin Submarine Museum

If the Arizona is representative of the attack on the U.S., the Bowfin helps visitors understand how the country responded. Nicknamed Pearl Harbor Avenger, SS-287 has tales to tell of wartime patrols and conditions for submariners (below).

8 USS Missouri

Twenty stories high and three football fields long, this vessel HAS earned its nickname, Mighty Mo. Approximately half of the ship is open to visitors.

9 Officers' Quarters

The expensive but highly recommended 90-minute Captain's Tour of the Missouri takes you into areas for officers. The quarters may be small by civilian standards but are plush compared to the sailors' "racks."

10 Deck of Surrender

A bronze floor plaque (above) in the teak deck on the USS Missouri marks where a mess table was set up for Japanese ministers to sign the Instruments of Surrender in Tokyo Harbor in 1945.

"A Day That Will Live in Infamy"

That was how President Roosevelt described December 7, 1941, when the Japanese made a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor. The bombers crippled U.S. military installations on O'ahu, sinking or severely damaging 18 battleships at rest in Pearl Harbor, destroying or disabling nearly 200 aircraft, and killing 2,390 officers and men. The U.S. officially entered World War II after this event.

TOP 10 Bishop Museum and Planetarium

The State Museum for Natural and Cultural History is a family-friendly center for scientific and cultural experience and study. It also hosts traveling exhibitions and is home to the Jhamandus Watumull planetarium. Almost every weekend, and on many weeknights, there are lectures, workshops, and openings. The museum also has a fascinating interactive science center.

Main entrance

1 The museum's shop, Pacifica, is a wonderful gift emporium – one of the island's best. The quality of its souvenirs is excellent, and the wide-ranging book selection runs from history to science, and archaeology to anthropology.

Two floors of the museum are devoted to Pacific cultures other than Hawai'i's. The artifacts give an insight into rituals and religion, daily life, warfare, clothing, music, and dance, and include carved figures (below).

Richard T. Mamiya Science Center

2 Hawaiian Hall

The koa-paneled Hawaiian Hall, built in Victorian architectural style, is the heart of the museum. It is home to a vast collection of Hawaiian and Pacific area artifacts. The hall presents its stunning collections in a modern interpretation of Hawai'i's history and culture.

3 Picture Gallery

Considered the world's finest collection of 19th-century Hawaiian art, the museum's extraordinary collection of oil paintings, watercolors, rare books, and collectibles are on display here.

4 Kāhili Room
Beloved by the Hawaiian people, this collection honors Hawaiian royalty through portraiture and displays of royal belongings, including the fragile feather standards called kāhili (above).

5 Hawai'i Sports Hall of Fame
This is an unusual installation (above) for a cultural museum, but islanders are crazy about sports, which are a primary form of community-building.

6 Library
This extensive library includes a database of published diaries, narratives, and memoirs, all with an emphasis on Hawai'i and Pacific culture.

7 Richard T. Mamiya Science Center
Interactive experiences, including erupting volcanoes and deep ocean exploration, are offered at this state-of-the-art center.

The Ahupua'a

Ahupua'a – the wedge-shaped units of land shown in the museum's Science Garden – were overseen by konohiki (governors), who funneled taxes to royalty. The ahupua'a encompassed various farming regions and fishing grounds in order to meet the subsistence needs of their inhabitants.

9 Joseph M. Long Gallery
This gallery serves as Bishop Museum's venue for showcasing contemporary Hawaiian art alongside other items from the museum's collections. This grass sculpture (above) is an example of some of the native Hawaiian art pieces on display.

8 Castle Memorial Building
Dinosaurs, robots, spiders, chocolate, and volcanoes have been the subjects of visiting exhibitions. Most are interactive and aim to pull in youngsters.

10 Planetarium
The exceptionally active planetarium stages interactive shows, night-viewing sessions, and the "Science on a Sphere" exhibit in the lobby (below).

TOP 10 Capitol District

If you had but one day to spend in Honolulu, there's an argument to be made for spending it right here. Concentrated within a few misshapen blocks is a clutch of historic landmarks, a toothsome Asian marketplace, a neighborhood of fragrant lei stands, and alluring shops, galleries, and restaurants. And when it's time to sit and contemplate, there's also an ample store of shady mini-parks and cool retreats on hand.

2 Hawai'i State Capitol

The airy structure of 1969 is imbued with symbolic references to Hawai'i. Pools represent the sea, the columns reach up like tall trees, and the conical roofline recalls the volcanoes that formed these islands.

In front of the building is a statue of Queen Lili'uokalani (left).

3 Hawai'i State Art Museum

In 1967, Hawai'i became the first U.S. state to have an annual budget for art purchases. But it wasn't until 2002 that the collection found its permanent home to showcase solely the work of island artists.

1 Washington Place

This elegant mansion has been turned into a museum for Hawai'i's last queen, Lili'uokalani, the abode's most famous resident. It is home to the current governor.

Hawai'i State Art Museum

4 Coronation Pavilion

On the grounds of 'Iolani Palace (see pp14-15) is an ornate pavilion, erected especially for the coronation of King Kalākaua and Queen Kapi'olani in 1883. The octagonal, copper-roofed structure, which is emblazoned with the Hawaiian royal seal, serves as a bandstand for the Royal Hawaiian Band. They perform free concerts at noon each Friday and for gubernatorial inaugurations.

5 King Kamehameha Statue

During King Kamehameha Day celebrations each June (see p36), the King Street statue (left) is decorated with thousands of flowers, strung into exuberant lei (garlands).

6 Ali'iōlani Hale

The "House of Heavenly Royalty" is the site of the Hawai'i Supreme Court, and it also houses the free Judiciary History Center. Here, there are exhibits and multimedia presentations on Hawai'i's legal history and landmark cases.

7 Hawai'i State Library

The Hawai'i State Library building, with its colonnaded façade and mulioned windows, is a cool oasis amid the bustle of downtown. The Pacific section is especially worth a visit, as is the attractive enclosed courtyard.

8 Mission Houses Museum

This living history museum (above) includes one of the earliest examples of American domestic architecture, the coral-block Chamberlain House (1830), as well as two other missionary buildings. There is an excellent gift shop.

9 Kawaiaha'o Church

Built by volunteers out of 14,000 hand-cut coral blocks, "Hawai'i's Westminster" offers religious services in Hawaiian and English. Its name has a double meaning, referring to a legend about a sacred chiefess who caused water to flow here so she could bathe, and also to a Biblical reference about "living waters".

Queen Lili'uokalani

Washington House was the home of Lili'uokalani, the last queen of Hawai'i, who ruled from 1891 until she was deposed by the advocates of a Republic for Hawai'i in 1893. She was married to John Dominis, who owned Washington House, and later inherited the house from her husband's family.

10 Chinatown

This 15-block historic district should more properly be called Southeast Asia town. Cohabiting amicably are food purveyors (above), farmers' markets, gift shops, lei stands, and an area of art galleries and eateries.

10 'Iolani Palace

A National Historic Landmark, this is the only state residence of royalty in the U.S. It was built for King David Kalākaua and his queen, Kapi'olani, and was the home of his sister, Queen Lili'uokalani, until her reign ended in 1893. From 1893 to 1968 'Iolani was the seat of the Hawaiian government. Heavily restored, it includes priceless objects and gorgeous decorative touches.

1 Gates and Coat of Arms

The Kauikeaouli Gate, which opens onto King Street, was the ceremonial entrance, used only on state occasions. Mounted on its bars is the Hawaiian coat of arms (above), popular with islanders today in the form of medallions or amulets.

2 Burial Mound

Although the chiefly burials were moved to the Royal Mausoleum in Nu'uano in 1865, this mound to one side of the palace remains an object of respect, as some bones may remain.

Inner courtyard

Palace façade

3 'Iolani Barracks

The diminutive but historic barracks (below) for the King's guard now house the palace shop, ticket office, and video theater. The shop specializes in one-of-a-kind designs based on palace ornaments, such as book-marks derived from the ornate carving on the palace door hinges.

4 Central Hall and Staircase

This capacious and distinctive hall has doors to the front and back for light and ventilation, and is hung with royal portraits. The impressive staircase (above) is the work of royal advisor Walter Murray Gibson.

5 Blue Room

In this first-floor room, the King received guests informally. A portrait of King Louis Philippe of France dominates; the French were among several countries that considered a closer alliance with (or even a take-over of) the Hawaiian kingdom.

6 Queen Lili'uokalani's Room

On the second floor is the room where Lili'uokalani (below) was confined for eight months after the overthrow of the monarchy.

She was charged with being involved in an insurrection.

7 King's Suite

Kalākaua slept in a state bedroom with heavy Victorian furnishings, while in the library he conducted business and played cards. One of the islands' first telephones is found here.

8 Throne Room

The king and queen would sit in state and receive their visitors here (right). In 1895, however, in less happy times for the monarchy, Queen Lili'uokalani was put on trial in these august surroundings.

9 Dining Room

Formerly the Senate's meeting place, this much-restored room now contains custom-made sideboards, a commodious dining table, and an array of portraits depicting European heads of state.

10 Palace Galleries

This 50-room basement complex, with its chamberlain's offices, servants' quarters, and kitchens, was the heart of the palace. Today, royal treasures are presented here in state-of-the-art displays.

The Queen Composer

Lili'uokalani, arguably Hawai'i's best-loved queen (see pp13 & 31), was also one of Hawai'i's most prolific composers. Born Lydia Kamake'eha Pahi and known to her friends as Lili'u, she was already an accomplished musician and singer by the age of 15. While her best-known piece is surely the haunting Aloha 'Oe, she composed over 100 songs, many of which she had published.

TOP 10 Hawai'i Maritime Center

This busy port, maritime museum, and the neighboring Aloha Tower Marketplace recall the days when Hawai'i's primary link to the world was by water. Hawaiians arrived by extraordinary voyaging canoes; Westerners followed in ships with billowing sails. For decades, the ports were paramount, the subject of constant news reports, and a source of income for dockworkers, lei sellers, and coin-divers.

1 King Kalākaua Boathouse Museum

The central museum building is named in honor of the Royal Boathouse where King David Kalākaua kept his canoes and hosted private parties. (His soirées were the source of considerable gossip.) There's a reproduction of a Matson liner stateroom and a replica of a South Pacific atoll complete with (stuffed) wildlife.

2 History of Surfing

California and the Beach Boys may have popularized surfing, but Hawai'i invented the art of he'e nalu (literally, "flowing over the waves"). Displays chronicle the evolution from huge, heavy wooden boards to today's sharp shooters.

View of Honolulu Harbor and Maritime Museum

3 Whaling Exhibits

When whale oil fueled the lanterns of America and Europe, Hawai'i was the world's whaling capital – a provisioning and R&R stop for whaling fleets. Exhibits include equipment at the sharp end of whaling, and awesome skeletons (below).

4 History of Tattooing

Tattoos, so fashionable and readily acquired today, are steeped in spiritual meaning and tradition to Polynesians. Genealogical lines, chiefly standing, and personal behavior all determined which, if any, tattoos an individual could receive.

5 Falls of Clyde

The late Bob Krauss of the Honolulu Advertiser campaigned to save the Falls (above), the world's only remaining fully rigged, four-masted ship, now moored by the Boathouse.

6 Hōkūle'a

This double-hulled voyaging canoe (below) was built in the 1970s in proof that Hawaiians could sail the high seas. It is often on the water, taking its message of Hawaiian renaissance around Polynesia.

7 Aloha Tower Marketplace

This well-designed, history-conscious shopping complex on Pier 9 has not been a great commercial success for its shops. The real life of the place is in the restaurants, nightlife, and free noontime entertainment.

9 Aloha Tower

This 184-ft structure (right), once the tallest building in the islands, says "home" to many islanders. Built in 1926, the 10-story tower offers a stunning 360-degree view.

8 Honolulu Harbor

Almost all of the state's overseas waterborne traffic passes through Honolulu Harbor, and 98 percent of imports come to the islands by water. Masted ships visit from time to time; the fireboats spout fountains on special occasions, and the pilot boats zip about. A great vantage point for watching the life of the harbor is the patio of the Gordon Biersch brewpub at Aloha Tower Marketplace (see p68).

10 Piers 10 and 11

At these Marketplace piers on a Sunday evening, Norwegian Cruise Line ships weigh anchor for their around-the-islands cruises. A Hawaiian band plays, hula dancers sway, and passengers watch the city lights fade.

Hōkūle'a Project

The hōkūle'a canoe (see entry above) was the first voyaging canoe built in Hawai'i for more than 600 years. Since 1973, the Polynesian Voyaging Society's first vessel has sailed more than 100,000 miles to every corner of the Polynesian triangle. Traditional navigation, carving, and plaiting are some of the skills revived along the way.

TOP 10 Honolulu Academy of Arts

Hawai'i's only general art museum, comprising 30 galleries, was founded in 1927 by the eclectic collector Anna Rice Cooke, whose home had become crammed with more than 4,500 pieces of artwork. The gracious stucco-and-tile building in the style islanders call "Territorial" was erected on the site of her original house.

1 Western Collection

Based initially on Cooke's gifts, this collection has grown to over 15,000 pieces. It is particularly strong in American works in all media and French 19th- and 20th-century painting, such as the Polynesian themes painted by Gauguin (above).

Oceania collection

2 East Meets West

This group of objects is the product of a concept to which the Academy is deeply committed: the meeting of cultures. It is particularly apt since Hawai'i is one of those meeting places. Exhibits include trade goods and furnishings made in the East for Western use.

3 Asian Paintings

A centerpiece of the academy's Asian holdings is the James Michener Collection of ukiyo-e paintings (such as the example below), which also includes some of Hokusai's Thirty-six Views of Mt. Fuji. The Asian Collection is equally strong in Japanese scrolls and Ming-dynasty Chinese paintings.

4 Southeast Asian & Indian Collections

A gallery of Indian art, mostly collected by a wealthy Indian family who live in Honolulu, has everything from a magnificent carved door to wedding attire. Southeast Asian items range from shrouds to head-dresses, and sculptures to ceramics. Indonesian pieces appear in both the Asian and Islamic collections.

5 Art of the Pacific, Americas, & Africa

Masks, effigies, figurines, statuary, everyday tools, religious artifacts, and other pieces from the Americas, Oceania, and Africa are displayed in separate galleries and in periodic special exhibits.

6 The Art of Hawai'i

This group, made up primarily of paintings, graphic arts, decorative arts, and sculpture, includes many of the most recognized images in the islands, such as Theodore Wores' The Lei Maker (1902, below).

7 Textiles Collection

The Academy's textile collection is immense, with only a small selection on display at any time. While the focus is on Asia, there are also fine examples of Pacific tapa cloth. Japanese kabuki costumes, an emperor's jifu (robe), saris, and everyday clothing are well represented.

9 Arts of the Islamic World

In conjunction with the Doris Duke Foundation for Islamic Art, this gallery is made up primarily of pieces from Duke's broad-reaching collection – furnishings, woven objects, decorative pottery, and printed papers. Tours of Shangri La begin here.

8 Henry R. Luce Gallery

This area of the Academy incorporates a large space for changing exhibits, the Hawaiian art collection, workshops, and the Academy's offices.

Orientation

The Academy is arranged around a series of sun-splashed courtyards. Facing the central courtyard as you enter, the European and East-Meets-West collections are to the right; Asian artwork is on the left. The Henry R. Luce Pavilion, Art of the Americas, and the comprehensive Islamic and Indian galleries are at the rear.

Tours of Doris Duke's 1930s-era seaside mansion at Black Point begin at the Academy with a film, followed by a van ride to her home (right).

TOP 10 Kalākaua Avenue

Waikīkī's two-mile-long oceanfront street, running from Ala Wai bridge to the magnificent Diamond Head, epitomizes the dream of Hawai'i – gentle surf and vibrant nightlife. Named for Hawai'i's playful last king, the street is lined with storied hotels, parks, and a host of attractions. The city has spruced up the street at Waikīkī Beach with plantings, seating areas, and a waterfall that's a favorite "photo op" spot.

Take a picnic to the Waikīkī Shell, where you can sprawl on grassy areas behind the seating while the music plays.

The "Pink Lady" (right) retains her cache. Even if you're not staying at this most famous of Waikīkī hotels (see p116), you can take afternoon tea on the veranda or visit the famed Mai Tai Bar.

2 Sheraton Moana Surfrider Hotel

The porticoed "White Lady" (see p116) turned 100 in 2001. The Sunday champagne brunch on the veranda is legendary; an evening at the Beach Bar an absolute must.

3 Waikīkī Beach

It's all happening here just as it has for more than a century – beachboys giving surf lessons; old-timers playing checkers in the pavilions; canoe teams practicing; locals mingling with tourists in the gentle waves. The whole beach is open (left), including the areas in front of the Royal and Moana hotels (see also pp46 & 72).

4 Duke Kahanamoku

At Kūhiō Beach, the figure hung with lei (left) is Duke Pa'oa Kahanamoku, a pioneer surfer and Hawai'i's "Ambassador of Aloha" in the 1960s.

5 Kapi'olani Park

This 170-acre parcel was dedicated by King Kalākaua in 1877. It was a military encampment in World War II, but today is a place for families, music, and festivals (right).

6 Honolulu Zoo

A compact zoo with a number of warm habitats (below; see also p40). Check out the Komodo dragon. If time permits, take a backstage zookeeper tour, moonlight walk, or overnight campout.

7 Waikīkī Shell

A very popular concert venue. Acts range from the Honolulu Symphony to a traditional May Day (Lei Day) concert by contemporary Hawaiian music favorites The Brothers Cazimero.

8 Waikīkī Aquarium

Popular with youngsters for its sharks and Hawaiian monk seals, the aquarium (right) is involved in conservation projects, and hosts reef walks and excursions.

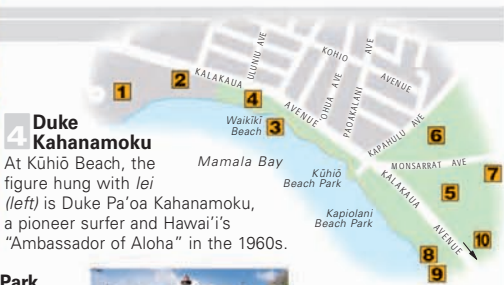

9 War Memorial Natatorium

This 1920s Beaux Arts saltwater pool was intended as a living memorial to World War I servicemen. It fell into disrepair, however, and though it has been partially restored, its future is uncertain.

10 Diamond Head

The crater at the end of Kalākaua Avenue is two-thirds of a mile across; its brow is 761 feet high, and its summit circumference is two miles. Take the 1.5-mile trail to its top for sweeping views (see also pp42 & 73).

Part 10 South Shore

O'ahu's south shore changes rapidly from suburb to barely touched landscapes of azure bays, botanical gardens, and a shoreline from which whales can be seen in the winter surf. Though close to the city's action, the coast has almost no services – no stores and few restrooms. An occasional lunchwagon at Sandy Beach and a snack stand at Hanauma Bay provide respite.

Drifting aquatic plantlife, delicate coral, vibrant fish, green sea turtles, and rays can be seen in Hanauma Bay. A visit to this center is worthwhile and compelling to better understand the area's dangers and ecological fragility.

Hanauma Bay

Hanauma Bay

2 Hanauma Bay Beach

Though it remains a beautiful, palm-shaded beach (left), Hanauma's popularity makes a visit worthwhile only if you also plan to experience the underwater park.

3 Hanauma Bay Underwater Park

Waders, novice snorkelers, and more experienced divers can all enjoy this extraordinary preserve equally. The central area of the park is the safest; strong currents exist three quarters of the way to either side, ready to surprise non-attentive snorkelers.

4 Toilet Bowl

A rocky pool, known for its exciting churning action as waves wash in and out. Folks love to bob up and down in the maelstrom, but be warned: there have been injuries.

5 Koko Head Trail

This trail involves a ramble along a steep, paved road, followed by a scramble along the spine of Koko Head, then a downhill path for views of the shoreline and the sea (see p38).

6 Koko Crater Trail

Buffeted by wind and strewn with crumbly rocks, this exposed trail to the 1,200-ft crater is one you should approach with caution, good shoes, and a hat.

7 Koko Crater Botanical Garden

The magnificent scent of plumeria flowers (also known as frangipani, above) is the lasting impression to take away from this dry-land garden right inside Koko Crater.

8 Hālonā Blow Hole

This lava tube sucks up water from below, then sends it shooting up (above; see also p39). You can climb down close to the blow hole, but it is very dangerous to go near the opening.

Koko Head

The peninsula by Hanauma Bay is formed out of two volcanic landmarks: Koko Crater and the peak at Koko Head. Koko was the traditional name of a canoe landing at the Wai'ālae side of Koko Head. The crater is also called Kohelepelepe. Today, the area is part of a regional park.

9 Sandy Beach

Locals love this beach (above), and on weekends it's busy with body and boogie boarders. Just be aware that waves slam into the sloping sand beach with great force, resulting in many a broken bone.

10 Wawāmalu & Kaloko

These two beaches are fine for shoreline pleasures, such as sunbathing or flying a kite, but don't even think of taking on the killing shore break and swift currents.

10 Kāne'ōhe District

The area loosely known as Kāne'ōhe is both commuting distance from Honolulu and a world away, the gateway to the North Shore and its country-style life. Many Native Hawaiians live here and the area is peppered with historic sites. You notice the difference at once – more pickup trucks, parked vehicles selling fresh fish and Hawaiian foods, and a slower pace.

Horseback riding, Kāhala'u

Kāhala'u Regional Park Beach

The three most direct routes to Kāne'ōhe from town offer beautiful views. On the Pali Highway (H61), stop at the lookout. Likeli Highway (H63) is the quickest route, with spectacular scenery as you emerge from the tunnel. From H3, the newest freeway, the entire Kāne'ōhe area is laid out before you.

2 Ha'ikū Gardens

Planted by an Englishman, this park has a small lake, groves of ginger and bamboo, a well-kept lawn, a gazebo, and a pavilion. It is a popular venue for wedding ceremonies.

Byodo-in Temple

3 Valley of the Temples Memorial Park

Yes, it's a cemetery but it's also a place to take in the islands' cultural diversity and the beauty of the Ko'olau mountains. It's not uncommon to see entire families picnicking near the graves of loved ones; graves of Buddhists are equipped with food and incense to honor the spirits.

4 Byodo-in Temple

At the rear of the memorial park, against the mountains, this other-worldly structure is worth the park admission alone. It's a scale replica of the 900-year-old temple at Uji in Japan, watched over by an immense incense-wreathed Buddha. Enjoy feeding the swans and banging the deep-toned gong.

5 Mōkapu Peninsula
Visible throughout the district, this peninsula is, alas, out of bounds because it's home to a military base. Despite the hum of aircraft, it's a beautiful sight (above).

6 Moku O Lo'e (Coconut Island)
This islet has a varied history and is now the site of a biological research facility, famous for its study of marine life, especially coral.

8 Kahalu'u Fishpond
The 80-acre Kahalu'u Fishpond (right) is one of a handful of working ponds that date from a time when traditional Hawaiians farmed fish using rock walls fitted with mākaha – slatted gates that let fingerlings out but denied escape to larger fish.

9 Kahalu'u
Bordering Waihe'e Stream and straddling Kamehameha Highway, Kahalu'u Regional Park has created a new focus in the Kahalu'u area. Its many activities include ball-fields, a gym and swimming pool, a beach park, boat launch, and canoe house.

10 Mokoli'i (Chinaman's Hat)
A lopsided conical island (below), visible from He'eia to Kualoa, Mokoli'i is oft-visited by kayakers. It is said to be the remains of a giant mo'o (lizard god).

7 He'eia State Park
Perched on a hillside, this interpretive park hosts educational activities aimed at explaining the area's use as both an aquaculture center and a sacred site where spirits entered the afterlife.

Marine Corps Base Hawai'i

Kāne'ohe Bay is home to more than 10,000 U.S. Navy and Marine Corps personnel. The base's mid-Pacific location makes it ideal for deployment to the Far East. Historically, this same place – Moku-kapu to ancient Hawaiians – was called "sacred district" because Kamehameha I met his chiefs here.

TOP 10 Polynesian Cultural Center

Covering 42 acres on O'ahu's scenic north shore, the Polynesian Cultural Center provides an unparalleled opportunity to experience seven Pacific Island nations in one place on a single day. Though undeniably kitsch in places, the center has been immensely popular since the 1970s and welcomes around one million guests annually.

Tongan dancers/musicians

It's recommended that visitors arrive before 1:30pm for an optimum experience of the entire center.

2 Tahitian Village
A French territory since 1842, Tahiti is known for, among other things, its incredibly fast, hip-shaking dance, the tamure. You can learn the dance at the village, but if your hips aren't up to it, you can opt for the coconut bread-making instead.

3 Marquesan Exhibit
Made famous by artist Paul Gauguin, who spent his last years in the Marquesas, the culture of these islands is represented at the center through weaving and carving, tattoos, and Marquesan songs and dance.

1 Tongan Village
The only remaining kingdom in the Pacific, Tonga has been ruled by the Tupou family since 950. The center's Tongan Village features drumming, tapa cloth making, and a nose flute demonstration. And you can throw a spear on the village green!

House of the Gods, Fijian Village

4 Hawaiian Village
There is nothing more representative of Hawaiian culture than hula. And this is the place to try the dance for yourself and learn about the symbolism of the moves. You can also play Hawaiian versions of checkers and bowling at the village (left).

5 Fijian Village

Fiji represents a cross-cultural mix of Polynesia and Melanesia. The center's Fijian Village features a tribal meeting house and an outrigger canoe, while the House of the Gods is the landmark for the whole center.

9 IMAX Theater

The theater shows one film daily. The well-executed Coral Reef Adventure highlights the declining health of the world's oceans and the importance of the ocean to the Polynesian people.

6 Maori Village

Wall carvings conveying ancient stories about these great navigators are on display here, and you can also learn about the fierce-looking Maori facial tattoos and see the famous haka war dance.

7 Samoan Village

Robert Louis Stevenson, known in Samoa as Tusi-tala (story-teller), loved the people so much that he settled on Western Samoa to live out his days. You can find out how to climb coconut trees and open their husks at the Samoan village (left).

8 Rainbows of Paradise

Each day at 2:30pm, the quiet lagoons come alive. Dozens of Polynesians in traditional costume present an interpretation of 5,000 years of Pacific Island cultural lore in a rousing pageant (above).

10 Hā: Breath of Life and the Ali'i Lū'au

The former is an exuberant Polynesian song and dance revue, featuring more than 100 performers; the latter a feast of traditional foods and contemporary entertainment.

The Mormon Connection

The center was established in 1963 by the Mormon Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints – there is a relatively high Mormon demographic in Hawai'i. The center's mission is twofold: to help preserve the cultural heritage of Polynesia and to provide jobs and scholarships for students at Brigham Young University. The school's Hawai'i campus is located next door.

TOP 10 Moments in History

1 Formation of the Islands

Each of the islands in the Hawaiian archipelago is actually the top of an underwater volcano. The oldest of the seven major islands (formed some 70 million years ago) is Kaua'i; the youngest Hawai'i, where the active Kilauea volcano adds more landmass daily. A new island, Lō'ihi, is forming far below the ocean's surface, southeast of Hawai'i.

2 Polynesian Migration

Scholars believe that Marquesan voyagers first came to Hawai'i as early as the 4th century, with Tahitians arriving later, in the 13th. It was these two great waves of migration by skilled Polynesian seafarers that first populated the Hawaiian islands.

3 Western Contact

The landing of British explorer Captain James Cook at Kealakekua Bay on the island of Hawai'i in 1778 is generally acknowledged to be the first time Hawaiians had contact with westerners. There is evidence that Spanish ships sailed into island waters in the 16th century, but there are no records of any contact being made with the islanders.

4 King Kamehameha I Unites the Islands

An accomplished warrior chief from the island of Hawai'i, Kamehameha I waged war to conquer O'ahu and Maui, then forced the island of Kaua'i to cede to his dominion. Thus the islands were unified into the Kingdom of Hawai'i in 1809.

5 Missionaries Arrive

April 19, 1820 is a momentous (some would say notorious) date, when the first American missionaries arrived in Hawai'i.

The first group was made up of 23 New England Congregationalists, and they landed at Kailua on Hawai'i. Over the next 20 years, many more Christian missionaries would follow, taking up residence on all the major islands.

6 The Plantation Era

Beginning in the mid-1800s, the American businessmen who first set up sugar cane production on the Hawaiian islands started importing contract laborers to work the plantations. Chinese workers were followed by Portuguese, Japanese, Latin American, Korean, and Filipino immigrants. The immigration of those groups led to the diverse ethnic mix found in the islands today.

7 The Overthrow of the Hawaiian Monarchy

On January 17, 1893, Hawai'i's last queen, Lili'uokalani, was removed from her throne and placed under house arrest in 'Iolani Palace. The coup was the work of American businessmen based in Hawai'i, though it was not supported by U.S. President Grover Cleveland, a Democrat. He was unable to persuade the provisional government, led by Republican Sanford P. Dole, to restore the monarchy.

8 Pearl Harbor Attacked

It was a quiet, overcast Sunday morning when Japanese warplanes attacked the U.S. fleet anchored at Pearl Harbor. This shocking and stunning attack on December 7, 1941 marked the official entry of the United States into World War II (see also pp8-9).

9 Tourism

They came first by ship and then by airplane, and by the late 1950s tourists were coming in increasing numbers, seeking the warmth and exotic beauty of Hawai'i, a place within easy reach of the West Coast of the U.S. mainland. Today, the islands host more than seven million visitors each year, arriving from every corner of the globe.

10 Statehood

Following several failed attempts, Hawai'i became the 50th state in the Union on August 21, 1959. William F. Quinn and James K. Kealoha were sworn in as the first elected governor and lieutenant governor of the new state. The occasion is marked each year by a state holiday, Admission Day, celebrated on the third Friday in August.

Influential Leaders

1 King Kamehameha I

The ali'i (chief) who in 1809 united the islands into the Kingdom of Hawai'i, after defeating Maui's ali'i, Kahekili.

2 King David Kalākaua

Affectionately known as the Merrie Monarch, David Kalākaua became king in 1874 and is credited with the revival of hula.

3 Bernice Pauahi Bishop

Granddaughter of Kamehameha I, whose name lives on in the Bishop Museum.

4 James Campbell

An early sugar baron who died in 1900; his estate is valued at over $2 billion dollars.

5 Loren Thurston

Transplanted mainland U.S. businessman and leader of the "Bayonet Revolution" of 1887, which ended the monarchy.

6 Queen Lili'uokalani

Hawai'i's last and one of its most beloved monarchs (see also pp13 & 15). Her government was overthrown in 1893.

7 John Burns

A strong statehood advocate, John Burns was elected in 1962 to his first of three terms as governor of the State of Hawai'i.

8 Daniel Inouye

Hawai'i's first Congressman was elected to the Senate in 1962 and has since served seven consecutive terms.

9 John Waihe'e

The first governor of Hawaiian ancestry, he led the state from 1986 to 1990.

10 Nainoa Thompson

The navigator for the Polynesian Voyaging Society since the 1970s, he has revived traditional voyaging arts.

Left Hula dancers from the 1940s Right Chinese Lion Dance

TOP 10 Music & Dance Styles

1 Hula Kahiko
In this famous art form, hula dancers are accompanied by percussive instruments made from natural materials and the intonations of one or more chanters. Ancient hula began, it is believed, as a male preserve and as religious ritual.

Slack-key guitar playing

It is more flowing in style than hula kahiko, and dancers generally wear western clothes.

2 Traditional Hawaiian Chant
As an oral tradition, Hawaiian stories and family histories were related through chant (oli). Ranging greatly in style, oli are used for scores of reasons, from prayers and lamentations to requests for permission to gather flora.

3 Hula 'Auana
When the practice of hula was revived during the reign of the Merrie Monarch, King David Kalākaua, a new dance style took center stage. Known as hula 'auana (modern hula), it is accompanied by instruments like the 'ukulele, guitar, standing bass, and singing voices.

4 Slack-Key Guitar
The term slack-key refers to a style of playing the guitar in which the strings are loosened, producing a jangly sound. Gabby Pahinui was, perhaps, the most famous of Hawai'i's slack-key masters – others included Raymond Kane and Sonny Chillingworth.

5 Steel Guitar
The Hawaiian steel guitar was born in the islands around the turn of the 20th century, but exactly where, when, and how is still a point of discussion. The instrument is held horizontally on the player's lap, and a sliding steel bar is used instead of fingers on the fret board. The sound was particularly big during the Sweet Leilani era.

6 The Sweet Leilani Era
From 1900 to the early 1940s was the era when U.S. mainland composers were greatly influenced by Hawai'i, mostly as a result of the way the islands were portrayed by Hollywood. This era – when songs like Sweet Leilani, Yacka Hula Hickey Dula, and My Honolulu Lady were composed – is called the Hapa-Haole or Sweet Leilani era.

Hula dancers

7 Contemporary Hawaiian Music

The modern renaissance of the Hawaiian culture, which began in the late 1960s, continues to this day, with music playing a major role. The Brothers Cazimero, Ho'okena, the late Israel Kamakawiwo'ole, and Maui's own Keali'i Reichel have combined their astounding voices with modern instruments and classic Hawaiian poetic techniques to create a magnificent new sound.

8 O-Bon

O-Bon is a traditional Japanese religious observance but has evolved, as have so many cultural practices in the islands, into a more secular event. O-Bon dances honor deceased ancestors and are joyous occasions marked by drums, music, dances, and, nowadays, festival foods and fun activities.

9 Lion Dance

During February's Chinese New Year celebrations, the Lion Dance is performed all over Hawai'i. Acrobatic dancers don a lion costume and perform a dance to a steady – and very loud – drum beat designed to ward off evil and spread good fortune. Spectators fill red and gold envelopes with dollar bills and feed them to the lion to ensure future prosperity.

10 World Beat

As a miscellany of musical styles from around the world has made its way to the islands, so it is increasingly influencing musicians. Jawaiian describes a blend of reggae and Hawaiian music, and island rappers are now putting their own slant on hip-hop music.

Hawaiian Music and Dance Essentials

1 Pahu

Perhaps the most sacred of hula implements, pahu are drums, traditionally made using coconut tree trunk with a covering of sharkskin.

2 Ipu

A hollowed-out gourd that, in skilled hands, is used to keep the beat in hula.

3 'Ili'ili

Smooth stones – two are held in each hand and played by hula dancers in a style similar to Spanish castanets.

4 Pū'ili

Bamboo sticks, one end of each cut into a fringe so that they produce a rattling sound when played by hula dancers.

5 Kāla'au

Pairs of sticks of varying length that are struck against each other during dancing.

6 'Uli'uli

Gourd shakers that are filled with seeds and usually topped with feathers.

7 'Ukulele

A gift from the Portuguese that's now integral to modern Hawaiian music. "Jumping flea" was how Hawaiians first described the sound.

8 Guitar

Whether slack-key, steel, acoustic, or electric, the guitar is essential to Hawaiian music.

9 Standing Bass

As in jazz ensembles, the standing bass has found its way into a lot of contemporary Hawaiian music.

10 Falsetto Voice

Most easily described as male vocalists singing above their regular range, there is arguably no sweeter sound than the Hawaiian falsetto.

TOP 10 Craft Traditions

1 Weaving
Traditionally, women are the weavers in Hawai'i, and many of the old everyday objects they created from lau hala (leaves of the pandanus tree) and the minutely thin makaloa (sedge grass) are considered works of art today. Lau hala mats, hats, and handbags are easily found in craft shops, but makaloa is now something of a rarity.

Coconut frond hat

2 Lei Making
There's no more enduring symbol of Hawai'i than the lei (garland). In the past, permanent lei were made from shells, seeds, bone, and feathers, and temporary lei from vines and leaves. Today, colorful and fragrant flowers like plumeria and tuberose are most associated with this craft.

3 Featherwork
Cloaks, lei, headware, and kāhili (standards) for the ali'i (chief) were all once fashioned from feathers. The birds were trapped so that specific feathers could be plucked, and then the creatures were released. Yellow, red, and black were the colors most often used. Today, artisans still craft lei of feathers from pheasant and other introduced species.

Lei making

4 Kapa
Used throughout old Polynesia for clothing, blankets, and decoration, Hawaiian kapa is made from the bark of the wauke, or paper mulberry tree. The process, which is restricted to women, involves pounding the bark repeatedly into paper-thin sheets that are then decorated using bamboo tools and plant dyes.

5 Stonework
Stones are an important part of Hawaiian cultural life, used in practical situations (such as building) and for spiritual needs (such as the fertility and birthing stones found on all the islands). Because stones are so highly regarded, visitors are asked not to remove them from their setting.

6 Fishing Nets
Olonā fiber, derived from a native shrub, was commonly used in the old days to make fishing nets (a practice performed by men only). Strong and durable though it was, man-made materials such as nylon replaced olonā in the 20th century.

7 Canoe Building
As in all Hawaiian cultural practices, there is much ritual surrounding the building of a canoe, another of the

'Ukulele fabrication

men's arts. Traditionally, canoes are made of koa and always from one log, carefully selected by the boat builder. The craft is still very much alive today.

8 'Ukulele Making
A Portuguese import of the late 19th century, the 'ukulele quickly found its place in Hawaiian music. 'Ukulele making is still a respected art in Hawai'i, and companies like Kamaka on O'ahu and Mele 'Ukulele on Maui produce high-quality, hand-crafted instruments.

9 Hula Implements
The implements used by hula dancers and their accompanying chanters have changed little over hundreds of years. Though some enthusiasts still craft their own implements, hula supply shops on all the islands now allow dancers with busy 21st-century lives to purchase many of the items needed (though the materials used may not always be traditional these days).

10 Quilting
Among the many traditions brought by the missionaries was quilting. Not surprisingly, Hawaiian women took to the art form and made it their own, replacing New England designs with gorgeous renderings of local flora and fauna.

Top 10 Lei Styles

1 Haku
Flowers, leaves, or fruit are braided onto three strands of ti or other natural fiber. Haku lei are most often worn around the head or on a hat.

2 Hili
Hili are braided lei made from a single plant material such as ti leaf or maile.

3 Humupapa
Flowers are sewn onto plant material such as dried banana leaves (lau hala).

4 Kui
Today's most familiar lei – flowers strung together with needle and thread.

5 Kipu'u
Short lengths of vines or long-stemmed leaves are knotted together.

6 Wili
Plant materials are attached to a natural backing by winding fiber around them. Wili lei have no knots until the very end.

7 Lei Hulu (Feather Lei)
Traditionally made of feathers from now mostly extinct or endangered native birds, the art continues using feathers from common birds.

8 Lei Pūpū (Shell Lei)
These range from puka-shell lei, wildly popular in the 1970s, to museum-quality Ni'ihau-shell lei, worth many thousands of dollars.

9 Seed Lei
Simple, single-stranded Job's Tears and intricately crafted wiliwili-seed lei are popular examples of this type.

10 Contemporary Lei

Park. Other activities include concerts, a Folklife Festival and an international hula competition.

2 Cherry Blossom Festival
This long-running springtime festival perpetuates the rich heritage of Japanese culture through activities like the Heritage Fair and the Hawai'i International Taiko (Drum) Festival. The celebration culminates with the Festival Ball where a Cherry Blossom Queen and her Court are chosen.

3 Lei Day
"May Day is Lei Day" say the lyrics of a popular Hawaiian song. Not that anyone in the islands needs an excuse to make, wear, or give a lei, but May 1st is the day when master lei makers showcase their amazing skills.

4 King Kamehameha Day Celebration
The highlight of the June events marking the King's birthday is O'ahu's colorful Floral Parade, which wends its way through Honolulu and Waikiki, ending at Kapi'olani

5 Taste of Honolulu
An annual benefit for Easter Seals Hawai'i, this three-day culinary extravaganza attracts more than 50,000 guests and a powerhouse of local chefs. There's plenty of entertainment, wine tastings, and cooking demonstrations, too. It's held at the end of June.

6 Prince Lot Hula Festival
Held annually on the third Saturday in July at lovely Moanalua Gardens, the festival is the largest and oldest non-competitive hula event in Hawai'i. It is named for Prince Lot, who reigned briefly as King Kamehameha V and was known for his commitment to the perpetuation of the Hawaiian culture.

7 Hawai'i State Farm Fair

Sponsored by the Hawai'i Farm Bureau Federation, this county-style fair is held in mid-July to the delight of locals and visitors alike. Perennial favorites are the Country Market, which sells fresh produce from Island farms, the 4-H Livestock Exhibition, and the Plant Sale.

8 Aloha Festivals

Contemporary Hawai'i is celebrated from mid-September to mid-October every year. The festivities begin on O'ahu and move through the island chain with at least a week-long celebration at every stop. A "royal court" is chosen on each island, and there are floral parades, concerts, and craft fairs.

9 Hawai'i International Film Festival

The fact that renowned Chicago-based film critic Roger Ebert attends regularly is enough to give HIFF some well-deserved national weight. Started in 1981 as a project of the East-West Center when seven films from six countries were screened, today HIFF screens approximately 100 international films at two-dozen locations on six islands.

10 Honolulu City Lights

Children of all ages look forward anxiously to the evening in early December when the switch is flipped that lights up the city Christmas tree, signals the start of the Honolulu City Lights Electric Light Parade, illuminates the entire civic center area, and, of course, marks the beginning of the holiday season. The light displays, which adorn all city department buildings, are truly magical.

TOP 10 Natural Features

1 Punchbowl
The 150,000-year-old cone above the city of Honolulu has three identities. Its Hawaiian name, Pūowaina, means “hill of sacrifice” – it was an ancient place of ritual and royal burial. Punchbowl, its English name, refers to its shape. Today it is also the final resting place for more than 35,000 veterans of American wars in Asia and the Pacific.

3 Koko Head
Not the most impressive peak on O'ahu, but its homely bulk is a landmark. Nearby, Koko Crater rises to 1,200 ft. A panoramic two-mile hike is reached through a botanical park – the trail is wind-swept, narrow, and crumbly. 📍 Map F6

5 Hālonā Blow Hole
A lava tube that funnels geysers of sea water high into the air, this dramatic feature is one to observe with care, preferably from the scenic pullout above it. Many who have hazarded too near have been injured or killed. From November through March, watch for spouting whales out to sea, as well as spouting water. 🗺 Map F5

6 Ko'olau Mountain Range
The wind- and water-cut Ko'olaus are the subject of countless Hawaiian chants and songs. This Windward-side mountain range (the name means "windward"), so green and dramatic, forms O'ahu's spine from southeast to northwest. 🗺 Map C2–F4

7 Wai'anae Mountain Range
Composed of the remnants of the Wai'anae volcano, said to have grown quiescent 2.5 million years ago, this range is the higher of the two on O'ahu, reaching above 4,000 ft. The mountains here have a distinct wet (east) and dry side (west). 🗺 Map B3–4

8 Mount Ka'ala
This, the tallest peak on O'ahu at 4,020 ft, is a preserve where indigenous birds and boggy plants prosper in the mist. On its slopes and at its feet, sandalwood once prospered, before the forests were decimated by Hawaiian royalty greedy for Chinese silks and other trade goods. 🗺 Map B3

9 Sacred Falls, Kaliuwa'a
Unfortunately, one of the most beautiful and beloved landmarks on O'ahu, located in Punalu'u, is off-limits for the foreseeable future. A tragic landslide in 1999 that killed eight people forced closure of the park. The state has found no practical way to assure safety in this narrow, cliff-lined defile. 🗺 Map D2

10 Banzai Pipeline
Just off the beach once known as Paumalu, the Banzai Pipeline is the name given to a spectacular winter surf break, the result of a shallow coral reef that serves as a sudden stopping point for deep water currents sweeping inland. The name Banzai comes from the battle cry of Japanese warriors, and was first applied to the waves here during the narration of the late 1950s film Surf Safari. (See p77.) 🗺 Map C1

This preserve is alongside a military reservation and readily reached by road. However, the paved route is off-limits to civilians, who must climb challenging trails to reach the misty bog in a bowl-like hollow atop O'ahu's highest peak. The area has become a safe haven for native plants and wildlife; a boardwalk allows viewing without causing damage to the fragile ecosystems. TOP 10 Beaches

Ala Moana

1 Ala Moana
The most popular beach park in urban Honolulu offers 76 acres of activities, though most folks simply swim, wade and sunbathe on the man-made sandy beach. If you do swim here, you must take care, as the channel is deep and, at low tide, you don't have to venture far to be caught in strong currents. Facilities onshore include food concessions, tennis courts, lifeguard towers, and softball fields. Map B6

2 Waikiki
Possibly the most famous beach in the world, Waikiki has had a facelift, with the installation of lush, grassy berms to block street noise, and an eye-catching waterfall feature. The beach remains prime people-watching territory, as well as being a gentle and safe place for swimming and learning to surf. Map L7

3 Sans Souci
Grown up around a small resort where Robert Louis Stevenson stayed in the 1880s, Sans Souci is good for swimming, bodysurfing, and boogie boarding. Safe, calm, and shallow, it's popular with families and also with the gay community. Map E6

4 Ka'alāwai Beach
Reached from a public right of way at the end of Kulamanu Place off Kāhala Avenue and Diamond Head Road, this narrow, white sand beach is protected by a reef and is safe for swimming and snorkeling. It's also used for diving, pole fishing and throw-netting, while surfers make spectacular use of breaks in the reef. Map E6

5 Wai'alaie Beach County Park
More popular for picnics and weddings than swimming, this Kāhala beach is hemmed in by coral but offers access to coveted windsurfing areas and fishing holes. Watch out for – and keep small children away from – the deep, sometimes fast-flowing channel cut by Wai'alaie Stream as it enters the sea.

6 Bellows Field Beach

Open to the public on weekends and national holidays, this beach park within a military reservation is prized for its broad shelf of powder-fine white sand, turquoise waters and ironwood-shaded campgrounds. Perfect for novice surfers, but watch out for stinging Portuguese man o'war jellyfish.

7 Lanikai Beach

Frequently voted one of the world's best beaches, Lanikai is reached through beach access trails in the ritzy Lanikai neighborhood along Mokulua Drive. It's flat and sandy, quite narrow in spots, and popular for swimming, boating, diving, and snorkeling.

📍 Map F4

8 Kailua Beach

Two miles of golden sand fringe Kailua Bay, which is divided into three sections. The northernmost beaches, Oneawa (with roadside parking) and Kalama (which has a parking lot), are accessed through Kailua neighborhoods. Kailua Beach Park has parking lots, food concessions, a volleyball court, picnic tables, and lifeguard towers. You can surf, windsurf, swim, boat, kayak, canoe, snorkel, and dive here, and the view of Nā Mokulua ("the mokes," as locals call these tiny islets) is the icing on the cake. 📍 Map F4

9 Hale'iwa Ali'i

10 Pōka'i Bay Beach

This beautiful beach is the calmest and safest place for swimming in Wai'anae, so it's no surprise to find it frequently thronged. It also has an unfortunate but deserved reputation as a place where car break-ins and beach burglaries occur, so take extra care with your belongings. 📍 Map A4

TOP 10 Surfing Beaches

1 Kaka'ako Waterfront Park/Point Panic

Unless you're highly skilled on a board and ready to join the elite who paddle out to Point Panic every day, this park is strictly for spectators. There's no beach, swimming is dangerous because the break crashes into the retaining wall, and sharks haunt the area. However, a broad pathway extends the length of the park offering great views, and picnic pavilions are clustered along it. This is also a favorite spot for watching celebratory firework displays over Waikiki. Map B6

2 Ala Moana Beach

This area is popular for surfing because it offers a range of challenges from easy and slow Canoes to the more frisky Queen's, Paradise, and Populars areas. Locals who work in Waikiki hit the waves before and after work. Map B6

3 Sandy Beach

"Sandy's" is the bodyboarding capital of O'ahu. Unfortunately, it is also the site of a lot of serious accidents and frequent rescues. A steep drop-off at the sand's edge means that waves are always pounding here, so only the most experienced should take on this surf, and everyone should take care of the treacherous backwash, which frequently catches waders off-guard. Map F5

4 Makapu'u

The slow rolling shoulders of the waves and the lack of a reef below make this spot ideal for bodysurfing, plus board surfing is prohibited to prevent collisions. But watch out during high winter surf, and take heed of flag warnings from the lifeguards. Map F5

5 Sunset Beach

In winter, this wide, golden strand is piled high, forming a steep, natural amphitheater for watching surfers attack the awesome waves. In summer, changing tides flatten the beach out, making it more sunbathing-friendly. All year long, though, dangerous currents make swimming risky. There are park facilities across the street.

'Ehukai

6 'Ehukai
 'Ehukai ("sea spray" in Hawaiian) is safe for swimming during spring and summer, but during the fall and winter the board surfers take over and it becomes the unofficial viewing stand for observing the action at the world-famous Banzai Pipeline (see below) just to the left of the beach park. Map C1

7 Banzai Pipeline
 A shallow coral reef extending out from the beach fronting Ke Nui Road throws up waves of tremendous power and steepness – so powerful that no one thought they could be ridden until the 1960s. Injuries from wiping out on the reef are numerous, but surfers can't resist these monsters. "Banzai," by the way, was the final cry of Japanese kamikaze pilots. Map C1

8 Waimea Bay
 A beach with two personalities. Calm as a bathtub in summer, it's ideal for swimming, kayaking, and snorkeling. Come October and on until April, this beach (where Captain Cook first landed on O'ahu) is crowded with open-mouthed visitors watching surfers from around the world ride the wild surf. Map B1

9 Ka'ena Point State Park

Until the introduction of tow-in surfing, the mammoth waves of Ka'ena Point remained tantalizingly off limits to surfers because of the impossibility of paddling out from the rock-fringed, current-tossed shore. A north swell at Lae o Ka'ena results in 30–40-ft waves and brings out the most daring sorts.

Map A2 • Reached via a 2.5 mile walk

10 Mākaha
 Site of the Mākaha International Surfing Contest, the beach here is steep-sloped and wide, with lots of golden sand and deep waters close to shore. The well-formed waves range from medium in the off-season to VERY large in the winter. Stray boards can be a hazard to swimmers. Map A3

Top 10 Health and Beauty Treatments

1 Steam/Sauna

The steam room is wet, the sauna dry, and either one will open the body's pores in readiness for other treatments.

2 Botanical Baths

Aromatherapy oils, herbs, and seaweeds are added to whirlpool tubs to either calm or re-energize the body.

3 Herbal Scrubs

Scrubs use ingredients such as native red clay and island sea salts to exfoliate, detoxify, and soften the skin.

4 Herbal Wraps

Wraps use herbs and the application of heat to draw out impurities from the skin.

5 Massage

Shiatsu, Swedish, and Thai styles are available, but why not try Hawai'i's traditional lomilomi or the newer Pōhaku (stone) massage.

6 Facials

Designed to clean and rehydrate the face; choices depend on skin type and individual needs.

7 Aromatherapy

Integrated into many spa treatments, natural fragrances are used to invoke a specific mood or feeling.

8 Manicure/Pedicure

The perfect way to end a day at the spa, manicures and pedicures always include a short hand and/or foot massage.

9 Makeup

Every salon has experts on hand for a professional application of makeup.

10 Fitness

All gyms and many spas have work-out machines, free weights, pools, and fitness classes.

TOP 10 Local Dishes

1 Poi
The staple of the Hawaiian diet, poi is made by pounding to a paste the corm of the taro or kalo plant – a task that is strictly a male preserve. Traditional Hawaiians believe their culture to be descended from a kalo plant, signifying the symbolic importance of this food.

2 Kālua Pork
The centerpiece of any lū'au, or feast, is the whole pig, slow-roasted (kālua) in an underground oven – an imu. The meat literally falls from the bones. The same cooking method works equally well with turkey, squash, and sweet potatoes.

3 Plate Lunch
Meat, two scoops of rice, and macaroni salad. Those are the three essential elements of the plate lunch. Sold on every street corner in Hawai'i, it represents the melding of cultures, and the

Lū'au (feast)

Sushi

meat comes in many varieties, from teriyaki beef to pork and variously prepared chicken.

4 Sushi, Sashimi, and Poke
The primary Japanese culinary influences are sashimi (sliced raw fish) and sushi

(raw fish, shellfish, or vegetables, served on top of, or rolled with, rice). Poke, the Hawaiian word for diced or chopped, is Hawai'i's version of Tahitian poisson cru and Latin American ceviche. These delicious raw fish-based dishes are available everywhere from fine dining restaurants to local supermarkets.

5 Noodles and Rice
Few meals in Hawai'i are served without rice, and those that are usually come with noodles. Indeed, noodles in hot broth with pork and green onions is a common dish for breakfast, lunch, or dinner, and leftover dinner rice often reappears as fried rice for the next day's breakfast.

6 Portuguese Sweet Bread and Bean Soup
Fresh from the oven and slathered with creamy butter is the best way to enjoy this wonderful bread, brought by Hawai'i's Portuguese immigrants. Originally baked in outdoor brick ovens, it is now available at markets throughout the islands. Every family in Hawai'i, whether of Portuguese heritage or not, has its own Portuguese bean soup recipe. Brimming with beans, meat, and vegetables, it can be a hearty meal unto itself, especially when accompanied by a thick slice of sweet bread.

7 Kim Chee
Brought by Hawai'i's Korean immigrants, kim chee is simply pickled cabbage, but for those who love hot – that is, VERY HOT – flavors, it is a “must try.” Traditionally, the cabbage is stored in tightly sealed jars and buried in the ground, then dug up as and when needed.

8 Tropical Fruit
Mango, papaya, guava, liliko'i (passion fruit), bananas, and, of course, pineapple. Pure and simple right off the tree, blended into a delicious fruit smoothie, or transformed into an amazing dessert, these are truly paradisiacal flavors.

9 Shave Ice
It has other names in other places – snow cone is one – but it is simply small chips of ice, flavored with one or more of myriad syrups, served in a paper cone. Cool and refreshing on a hot summer day, the rainbow variety shave ice has become a virtual symbol of Hawai'i.

10 Spam
Yes, it's true. One of the most maligned foods in history is one of Hawai'i's most popular and beloved. Canned Spiced Ham (SPAM) was originally known as a military staple since it's easy to keep for long periods of time. It is, perhaps, the large military presence in Hawai'i that first accounted for its curious popularity in the islands.

Top 10 Regional Ingredients

1 Local Greens

Small farms grow dozens of varieties of lettuce and greens for Hawai'i's restaurants.

2 Vine-Ripened Tomatoes

Much juicier and tastier than their mainland cousins. Growers on all the islands now nurture this important ingredient.

3 Moi

Once enjoyed exclusively by ali'i (royalty), this small, delicate fish is now on menus throughout the islands.

4 Tropical Fruit

Chefs make excellent use of pineapple, papaya, guava, liiiko'i, and lychee in salsas, sauces, and desserts.

5 Local Fishes

A myriad variety of local fishes – like mahimahi, ahi, opakapaka, onaga – forms the foundation of Hawai'i cuisine.

6 Moloka'i Sweet Potatoes

With their brilliant purple flesh, these wonderful potatoes add color as well as flavor to dishes.

7 Corn

Chefs delight in using sweet, locally grown corn – both white and yellow corn is cultivated in the islands.

8 Slipper Lobster

Smaller than their Maine cousins; it is the sweet tail meat that is prized most.

9 Pohole

These bright green, crunchy, and delicious ferns grow in East Maui and are often served with tomatoes.

HONOLULU SOMETIMES GETS A BAD RAP for being overcrowded, traffic-bound, parking-starved, and noisy. It is all of those things, but in an island kind of way, which is to say, it's not nearly as busy as almost any other major U.S. city. Honolulu's civic role is both that of state capital and seat of the City and County of Honolulu government, but, above all, this is a cosmopolitan center. Full of historic interest, the city is a great jumping-off point for all kinds of tourism, from guided walks to inter-island cruises. Though downtown tends to go dark after 5pm, its daytime life is all you could ask for, while the port and Chinatown districts stay lively into the small hours.

In her hand she holds a copy of her evocative composition Aloha 'Oe, the 1893 Constitution, and the Kumu Lipo, Hawai'i's creation story. Ho'okupu (gift offerings) are often left here by sovereignty activists who revere this queen, who was forced to give up the monarchy under protest. 📍 Map J3

The mausoleum is overseen by Hawai'i's only hereditary state office because the sacred duty to look after the graves is based on genealogy. It contains the bones of post-contact Hawaiian royalty, except for Kamehameha Nui, who was interred in an unknown Hawai'i Island location in accordance with custom, and Liholiho, whose grave is at Kawaiaha'o. Famous as much for its hair-flying winds as for its blood-soaked history, this vantage point is where Kamehameha the Conqueror did final battle with O'ahu warriors (see p30). This atmospheric site is sometimes cold and misty, but always spectacular and spooky. 📍 Off Pali Highway

6 Queen Emma Summer Palace

Hānaiakamalama, a modest white, wood-frame house with high ceilings and deep porches, was the perfect warm-weather retreat, just far enough up the Nu'uuanu Heights from Honolulu to catch chilly breezes. Queen Emma (née Rooke), who married King Kamehameha IV in 1856, inherited the home from her uncle. It was slated for destruction in the early 1900s, but saved by the Daughters of Hawai'i organization, who now operate it as a historical museum. 📍 2913 Pali Highway • Map C6 • 595 3167 • 9am–4pm daily • Adm

Morning in Chinatown

Early Morning

📍 Chinatown is best enjoyed right after breakfast, when the stands overflow with locally grown fruits and vegetables, imported Asian goods, Pacific fish, freshly made noodles, and every possible part of the chicken and pig. Wear comfortable shoes, dress for sunshine, and park at one of the less expensive municipal lots on Smith or Maunakea Streets.

📍 The area between River and Nu'uau, Beretania and King is great for small gifts — sandalwood soap, painted fans, kitchen tools, Chinese pottery, dried persimmons, and red-and-gold good luck banners. You can watch the butchers chop char siu (barbecue pork) so fast it looks like sleight of hand. Buy some fresh fruit to take back to the hotel.

Late Morning

When you've had enough, head mauka (toward the mountains) on River Street until you meet up with North Vineyard Street. There you'll find the gorgeously arrayed Kuan Yin Temple (see p66) and cool, green Foster Botanical Gardens (see p40). Explore a bit before turning back toward Chinatown for lunch.

📍 Try one of the popular restaurants in Chinatown, such as A Little Bit of Saigon (Vietnamese, on Nu'uau), Mei Sum (dim sum on Smith), Little Village Noodle House (Chinese on Smith), To Chau (pho soup on River), or the stuffed French bread sandwiches at Ba-Le (on King).

Waikīkī

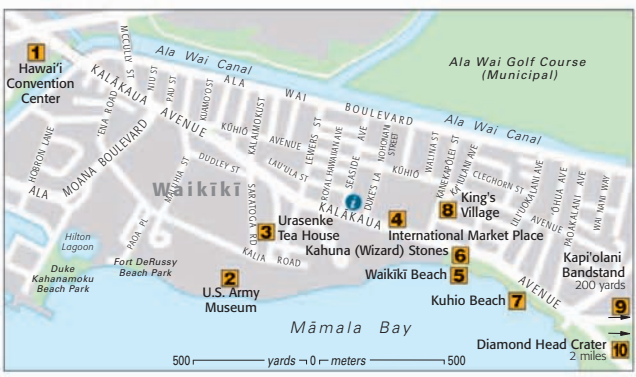

WAIKĪKĪ, the famous resort area containing the most sought-after real estate in an island chain full of sought-after real estate, has been undergoing a facelift in recent years. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been plowed into renovations. Numerous hotels are upgrading; the International Market Place is returning to its romantic origins; the grassy walks along Waikīkī Beach now bloom with plantings; statuary has been erected commemorating historic figures; and the Kapi'olani Park Bandstand has been rebuilt. All the more reason the inhabitants say, "E komo mai!", or "Welcome!", to visitors.

The Waikīkī Trail

Morning

Don't waste your time wandering around with a map on your first day in Waikīkī. Instead, take the highly regarded tour along the Waikīkī Historic Trail, led by members of the Native Hawaiian Hospitality Association, who will introduce you to sites of importance to the host culture. The tour is available by appointment only, for a fee. The meeting point is by the waterfall at Royal Hawaiian Shopping Center (call 628 6370 for more details).

The trail was the brainchild of the late visionary George S. Kanahale, a pioneer of cultural tourism. It's marked by a series of sculpted surfboards imprinted with photographs, maps, and information at 23 locations around the neighborhood.

Stopping points include a former residence of Queen Lili'uokalani; the villa of Chun Afong, who was Hawai'i's first Chinese millionaire; the vast coconut grove of Helumoa; and a war camp of Kamehameha the Great.

Late Morning

The tour lasts about an hour-and-a-half, after which you have plenty of time to stroll some more or do some shopping.

Stop for lunch at the Hau Tree Lanai at the east end of Waikīkī (see p74). Here you can sit right where Robert Louis Stevenson did in 1893 as he penned stories about the South Pacific.

North Shore

THE NORTH SHORE IS MANY THINGS to many people. For big wave riders, it is the peak of their craft – the navel, the source. For Honoluluans, it's the far, far country, and turning around point for Sunday drives. And for those who appreciate fresh, flavorful food, it's fast becoming an important source of superb produce, ranging from tropical fruits to coffee, corn to free-range beef. The coastline itself displays a split personality during the course of the year. From April to October, the beaches are playgrounds, broad and golden, visited by gentle waves, and smiled on by the sun. From October through March, however, high surf robs the beaches of sand, or piles it high into dunes, and the potential danger of swimming here cannot be overstated.

Surfers on the Banzai Pipeline

1 Banzai Pipeline
 Banzai Beach encompasses the shoreline between Ke Waena and Ke Nui Roads off Kamehameha Highway. Here, broad expanses of sand fringe a rocky shore, over which the surf boils. The most famous of the wild surfing breaks is the tubular Banzai Pipeline, which attracts the greatest risk-taking surfers. Lifeguards are kept very busy here because of the steeply sloping ocean bottom and the irresistible allure of huge winter surf. 📍 Map C1

2 Pūpūkea Beach Park
 The 80 narrow acres of Pūpūkea Beach Park include two very popular snorkeling and skin diving areas. Shark's Cove is a rocky inlet, often used by scuba diving operators for training. Three Tables is a network of shallow coral reefs and ponds. The Pūpūkea Foodland store, across the highway, is an excellent stop for provisions, and the Sunset Beach Fire Station offers aid and information. 📍 Map B1

3 Pu'uumahuka Heiau

This luakini heiau (sacrificial temple), honoring the war god Kū, is the largest on the island. It encompasses an expansive network of three enclosures that command panoramic views of Waimea Bay and the surrounding countryside. An altar has been restored at which you may see (but not touch) personal offerings.

These parks flank each other on either side of the Anahulu River, and if they look familiar it's because they were a primary set for Baywatch Hawai'i. Ali'i Park features a boat ramp and is popular for fishing and surfing. Across the river, Hale'iwa Beach offers safe swimming and is an excellent place for a family party or picnic. 🗺 Map B2

6 Hale'iwa Town

Plan your day to allow a couple of hours exploring historic Hale'iwa Town – the touristy top layer is built on a genuine base of community, made up of an eclectic mix of surfers, characters, and families who have lived in “the house of the ‘iwa bird” for generations. Once a gracious retreat for wealthy summer visitors, the place has a certain timelessness. To get a feel for it, park at either end of town and walk, poking into shops and lingering on the Anahulu River Bridge to watch the water flow by. 🗺 Map B2

Queen Lili'uokalani was part of this congregation when she visited her summer home in Hale'iwa. Though the present structure dates only from 1961, a century-old moon-phase clock she gave to the church is proudly displayed. The church is famed for its annual fundraising lū'au feast each

10 Ka'ena Point

This sprawling state park begins at the abrupt and muddy end of Farrington Highway and takes you along a wild, boulder-strewn shoreline to the dunes at O'ahu's westernmost tip. This is said to be where the souls of the dead leapt into the afterlife. It's a broiling hot 2.5-hour hike (Ka'ena means "the heat"), but worth it for the beauty of the landscape and the whales you can spot in season. Take sunscreen, water, hat, and sturdy walking shoes. ☎ Map A2

North Shore Excursion

Morning

Begin with this premise: it's too far to drive in one day. Granted, a 50-mile round trip from Waikīki may not seem like much, but remember that most of the route is on two-lane highways, so you can't rush, and there's a lot to see. So, if possible, check in at the Turtle Bay Resort in Kahuku (see p117), which offers hotel rooms and suites recently renovated in Plantation style, as well as condos and cottages with full kitchens and multiple bedrooms.

From there, you can easily run into Hale'iwa for a morning's shopping – there's LOTS of it and some items are actually cheaper than in the city, notably pareau wraps. Have lunch at Kua'aina or Hale'iwa Joe's Seafood Grill (see p81).

Afternoon

For the afternoon, you can keep going north and take a heart-thrilling glider ride at Dillingham Airfield or rent a water bicycle from Surf & Sea (p80) in Hale'iwa Town. Alternatively, head back toward the resort, stopping to sun or snorkel along the way.

Try to plan your excursion around an event (check www.gohawaii.com for an events calendar). Highly recommended are the rare Toro Nogashi lantern ceremony, hosted by Hale'iwa Shingon Mission in August, the Waialua Taro Festival in September, and, of course, the winter championship surf meets, which aren't easy to predict as they're wave-dependent.

5 Hawaiian Railway Line

The Hawaiian Railway Line is six restored miles of what were once 70-plus miles of track delivering people and supplies from 'Ewa to Honolulu. It operates Sundays, offering 90-minute round trips to the coast at Ko Olina and back. Take the train, then later drive back to Ko Olina to swim in the man-made lagoons in the shade of coco-palms. You can also have lunch or dinner at the JW Marriott Ihilani Resort & Spa (see Azul, p89). ☎ Catch the train from 91-1001 Renton Road, 'Ewa • Map C5 • 681 5461 • www.hawaiianrailway.com • Fare

Though most folks come to Ka'ena Point from the Mokulē'ia side, the 5-mile trek from the Wai'anae direction offers a sandier section of the old Farrington Highway. En route, watch for yellow 'ilima, purple pā'ū o hi'iaka and white naupaka flowers.

6 Pōka'i Bay

Beautiful, tranquil Pōka'i Beach County Park is the most welcoming swimming and snorkeling beach along the Wai'anae Coast. It's safe year round because of the protection of a long breakwater. The bay's name, "night of the great one," is rooted in the story of a voyager from the south, Pōka'i, who is said to have planted the first coconut grove on the island on this site. ☎ 85-037 Wai'anae Valley Rd • Map A4

8 Mākaha Beach
 Mākaha ("fierce" in Hawaiian) lives up to its name, with high surf and a runoff pond behind the beach that periodically breaks through the sand bar and rushes into the bay. In the old days, it was infamous for a group of bandits who terrorized the area. Today, with the exception of when the surf is high, this is a safe beach for swimming.

9 Kāne'ākī Heiau
 Located in a lush, park-like setting at the back of Mākaha Valley, this superbly preserved and restored sacred site was once a benign agricultural temple for the god Lono. It became a luakini (temple of human sacrifice) when Kamehameha I used the area as a gathering point for his troops while preparing for battle with Kaua'i.

10 Yokohama Bay
 So-called because of its popularity with Japanese pole fishermen, this is the last sandy shore on the northwestern coast of O'ahu. It's also part of a large but undeveloped park complex that stretches around the end of the island to Ka'ena. Though known as a popular surfing site, it is also a place where you can enjoy the beach in relative isolation. 📍 Map A3

A Day with Dolphins

Morning

📍 Schools of spinner and bottlenose dolphins, and, from November to March, pods of humpback whales are readily seen just off the Wai'anae Coast. Several cruise companies offer dolphin-watching excursions in various craft, usually with small numbers of passengers. The excursions depart from Wai'anae Boat Harbor or Ko Olina Marina. Most offer transport from Waikīkī hotels, though you can choose to pick up the tour at the harbor. You will have to get up early, because the boats usually depart promptly at 7am.

Wild Side Specialty Tours

(www.sailhawaii.com, 306 7273) offers a whale- and dolphin-watching cruise aboard a 42-foot catamaran. It is operated by marine researchers who believe that sail-powered vessels are less disruptive to the animals. The boat accommodates an intimate 4 to 15 passengers and the four-hour morning excursions include refreshments.

Afternoon

📍 For a Mediterranean-style lunch after your cruise, try Azul in Ko Olina (see p89).

📍 If you're traveling with kids who want to emulate the dolphins, you can spend the rest of the day at Hawaiian Waters Adventure Park (see p85). Less energetic members of the party can relax in the café or lie in shallow water away from the screaming action.

4 He'eia State Park and Fishponds

North on Kamehameha Highway from Kāne'ohe, surrounded by mangrove swamp, this grassy, well-maintained state park offers a view of the 80-acre He'eia fishpond, the largest intact aquaculture zone in the islands. When in use, fingerlings of the prized 'ama'ama (mullet) and 'ahole (Hawaiian flagtail) would swim into the rock-walled ponds through vertical gates called kahala, but would be unable to swim out. In this way, the fish were successfully farmed. 📍 Map E4

Shrimp Shacks

Northbound on Kamehameha Highway between Kāne'ohe and Kahuku, you'll encounter a string of shrimp shacks, some in lunchwagons, others in roadside stands. It all began with a single shrimp aquaculture operation, which sparked a North Shore love affair with crustaceans. If you stop, be sure to ask if the shrimp you're getting are locally grown (some aren't) or previously frozen.

6 Kualoa Regional Park

South Shore

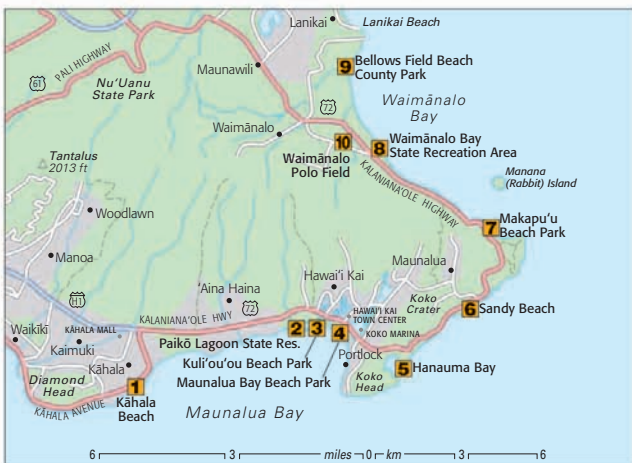

IT'S AN EASY HOUR'S DRIVE around the South Shore of O'ahu from Waikīkī to the rural village of Waimānalo. But in the course of those dozen miles, you experience the multi-dimensional nature of an island whose Hawaiian name means "the gathering place." Beginning with the exclusive bedroom community of Kāhala, you next come to a series of densely populated, valley neighborhoods. Each of these climbs from a coral-fringed beach to the apex of a deep valley in the classic Hawaiian land division known as an ahupua'a (see p11). At the island's edge, the wave- and wind-tossed coast provides an ecologically fragile landscape, before giving way to mile upon mile of golden sand, bordering the horse country.

Kāhala Beach

1 Kāhala Beach
 This secretive mile and a half of golden sand, hidden by the ritzy homes of suburban Kāhala, offers wading, snorkeling, reef-fishing, and sunbathing. To get here from Waikīkī, take Diamond Head Road until it becomes Kāhala Avenue. In the 4,400 to 4,800 blocks of Kāhala Avenue, watch out for seven narrow paths, marked by blue beach access signs (you'll need to park on the street). The bigger stretch of Wai'ālae Beach Park (with restrooms and picnic tables) is just beyond Kapakahi Stream bridge. 📍 Map E6

2 Paikō Lagoon State Reserve
 Its name deriving from a Portuguese former resident called

Maunalua Bay Beach Park

Pico, the virtually unknown Paikō Peninsula offers birdwatching, fishing, snorkeling, and unprecedented seclusion. From Kalaniana'ole, turn right onto narrow Paikō Drive, park on the street and take the beach access trail to the water. Turn left (east) and find your spot past the second to last house. You'll need to bring food and water with you, as it's a remote area. 📍 Map F5

3 Kuli'ou'ou Beach Park
 This family-friendly park on Maunalua Bay offers perfect picnic sites, restrooms, views and, at low tide, the opportunity for novice kayakers to take to the water. From Kalaniana'ole, turn right on Kuli'ou'ou Road, left on Summer Street and right again on Bay, which comes to a dead end in a parking lot. 📍 Map F6

5 Hanauma Bay

Keyhole-shaped Hanauma Bay is one of the most spectacular sights in the islands, and highly recommended for swimming and snorkeling. Kite Flying

On any windy day at Sandy Beach, the sky is bright with kites. Flyers from age 6 to 60 play out the lines, straining against the wind. Traditionally, Hawaiian kites were made from hau wood, covered with kappa or woven lauhala, with olona cord used for the string. Skill was needed both to make and fly them.

Park, south of town, and the recreation area to the north. Both offer prime picnic areas, camp sites, restrooms, and showers. The park is right on the road but the recreation area is secluded in an ironwood grove (known as Sherwood Forest, alas, in part because car burglaries are a problem). Map F5

9 Bellows Field Beach County Park

Though located on a military installation that includes an army reserve camp, an area where Marines practice amphibious landings, this sprawling beach and campsite with ample parking is a public facility on weekends and holidays. Many consider it the best of the Waimānalo beaches; bodyboarding, boogieboarding, and surfing are prime. Camping here is by permit only. Map F4

10 Waimānalo Polo Field Polo, favored by Hawaiian royalty, has a 200-year history here. Honolulu Polo Club matches are held at 2:30pm each Sunday from June through October (adults $3, children under 12 free). There is a shaded grandstand, food for sale, and you'll find lots of aloha (warmth) for visitors – who have included the UK's Prince Charles, who played a match here in 1974.

Morning

A South Shore circular driving tour makes for a wonderful all-day itinerary. From Waikīkī, take H1 to the Wai'ālae exit and start the morning with croissants at the Patisserie and shopping at Kāhala Mall; shorts and sandals are just fine even at this ritzy mall.

Continue south, and finish off the morning with a water adventure at Maunalua Bay (see p97), such as water-skiing or diving. (Reserve ahead at water activity shops at Hawai'i Kai Towne Center or Koko Marina Center.) Alternatively, for a more sedate pursuit, take the binoculars and go birdwatching on the edge of the Paikō Lagoon State Reserve (p97).

Back on Kalaniana'ole, grab a quick lunch at Kona Brewing Co. (p101) or one of a dozen inexpensive, interesting eateries at Koko Marina Center (p100).

Afternoon

Cruise slowly around the island's edge, stopping to view the Hālonā Blow Hole (see p39) and watch the bodysurfers and kite-fliers at Sandy Beach.

At Makapu'u Wayside, park and make the easy hour-long, two-mile trek up and down the old lighthouse road; the views will stay with you long after you return home.

Afterward, stop for a drink or bite to eat at Zippy's (p101) and refresh yourself with a swim at one of the Waimānalo beach parks before heading home via the Pali Highway.

TOP 10 Planning Your Visit

1 When to Visit

In terms of weather, Hawai'i is good to visit year round. May, June, September, and October are traditionally a bit slower than the height of winter and summer seasons, so better travel deals are often available.

2 Passport and Visa Requirements for Foreign Visitors

Visitors from the U.K., most Western European countries, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and South Korea need a valid passport and must also register online with ESTA (<https://esta.cbp.dhs.gov>) in advance of travel to Hawai'i. Canadians must show a valid passport. Other foreign nationals need a valid passport and a tourist visa, obtainable from a U.S. consulate or embassy.

3 Customs/Agricultural Inspection

Foreign visitors may not bring food or plants of any kind into Hawai'i and luggage or cargo leaving the islands is subject to an agricultural search. Only certain fruits and flowers may be taken out, so ask about this when purchasing such items.

4 Climate

Contrary to popular belief, Hawai'i does have seasons. Rain is common Oct–Jan, and summer is much warmer than winter. Big surf arrives on north shores in winter; south swells delight surfers in summer. At sea level, temperatures average high 70s/low 80s in the daytime most of the year; nighttime temperatures can go down to the 60s, occasionally the 50s in winter.

5 Electricity

Standard U.S. current is 110–120 volts. Non-U.S. appliances need a converter and plug adapter with two flat pins, but bear in mind many hotels provide coffee makers, irons, and hair dryers.

6 Clothing

Hawai'i is a relaxed place. Shorts, T-shirts, swimsuits, and casual evening wear are all that's needed. Only a handful of restaurants require men to wear jackets. A sweater or jacket is a good idea for cool evenings.

7 Insurance

The cost of medical care is high everywhere in the U.S., including Hawai'i. Travel insurance is highly recommended. If you have a mainland health insurance plan, you should check to see if it's accepted in Hawai'i.

8 Major Airlines

The airline industry is facing difficult times and flight schedules and routes change frequently. At the time of writing, all major U.S. airlines, most Asian and Pacific lines, and some European carriers fly directly into Honolulu International Airport.

9 Enhanced Security

Although Hawai'i is a safe place, in the aftermath of 9/11, airport security has been enhanced, and items like pocketknives, scissors, nail files, and tweezers must be packed in checked luggage. Those arriving on a visa may also have their photograph and fingerprints taken. When traveling inter-island, you should get to the airport one hour before your scheduled flight.

10 Cruise Lines

Crystal Cruises, Princess Cruises, and Royal Caribbean have ships that stop in Hawai'i as part of wider itineraries. Norwegian Cruise Lines operates vessels through the Hawaiian islands.

TOP 10 Sources of Information

1 Visitors Bureaus

The Hawai'i Visitors and Conventions Bureau (HVCB) is the "mother" of all the individual island bureaus. The HVCB serves as the official source of information for individual travelers, groups and conventioners. The O'ahu Visitors Bureau is the island's chapter of HVCB.

2 Magazines

Hana Hou!, Hawaiian Airlines in-flight magazine is published 6 times a year. HONOLULU is Hawai'i's only major regional magazine and a great source of insider information. All can be accessed online.

3 Newspapers

Hawai'i has two big dailies. Both the Honolulu Advertiser and the Honolulu Star-Bulletin have morning and afternoon versions, and are available statewide. There are also several more locally-oriented papers, most notably the "alternative" Honolulu Weekly, MidWeek, and the Downtown Planet.

4 Websites

Virtually all hotel chains, activities sellers, and even most restaurants now have their own websites. They are easily accessed via any search engine. The O'ahu Visitors Bureau site also offers links to many visitor attractions.

5 Suggested Reading

James Michener's Hawai'i is considered by many a "must-read" for visitors. It is certainly epic in scope and an entertaining, if not precisely accurate, historical novel. Shoal of Time by Gavan Daws, Hawai'i's History by Hawai'i's Queen by Queen Liliu'okalani, and Hawaiian Mythology by Martha Beckwith are all excellent choices.

6 Free Visitor Publications

You will be deluged by dozens of free visitor publications as soon as you arrive at any airport in Hawai'i. Many are chock full of discount coupons and free offers. Bear in mind that most publications cover only the places that advertise with them.

7 Concierge

Your hotel concierge is potentially one of the very best sources of insider information. They are, of course, island residents, and many know every nook and cranny of O'ahu – where to get the best noodles and find that vintage piece of Hawaiiana you're after. Remember to tip them well if the advice is good.

8 Talk to Locals

Hawai'i is known for having some of the world's friendliest locals, and most love to share their knowledge of their hometown. Talk to waiters and waitresses, the bartender, the supermarket cashier, and the person who sells you your very first aloha shirt. You're sure to learn secrets not available in any guidebook!

9 Local TV

Oceanic Cable TV Channel 16 is a treasure trove of entertaining local information. Check it out, even if the pidgin (the local slang) proves a little difficult to decipher.

10 Yellow Pages

There's a Yellow Pages phone book in every hotel room. Besides helping to identify the closest Japanese restaurant or the nearest surf shop, flipping through the book will give you an idea of the local way of life. Keep in mind that the large display listings are paid advertising.

TOP 10 Arriving in O'ahu

1 Domestic Airlines

All major U.S. airlines as well as Hawai'i's own Hawaiian and Island Air Airlines fly directly into Honolulu International Airport from many U.S. cities. Several North American charter companies also bring visitors to O'ahu daily.

2 Foreign Airlines

Many foreign carriers – most notably the Pacific and Asian companies like Qantas, Air New Zealand, Air Pacific, Japan Airlines, China Airlines, Korean Air, and Philippine Airlines – land at Honolulu International Airport. Air Canada, Lufthansa, Sabena, and Swissair are some others offering flights into Honolulu.

3 Inter-Island Airlines

Hawaiian Airlines, and go! Airlines fly between all the major islands from early morning until evening every day. Schedules change often; weekend, non-stop, and first and last flights of the day fill up quickly.

4 Information at the Airport

Information booths can be found in the baggage claim areas, outside the foreign arrivals area, in the Inter-island Terminal, near Gate 22, and at both ends of the airport's main lobby. There are also many racks of free visitor publications.

5 Airport Shuttles

The WikiWiki Shuttle buses (wikiwiki means "quick") connect the terminals at the airport. Airport Island Shuttles take you from the airport to all parts of O'ahu.

6 Cruise Ships

Crystal Cruises, Carnival Cruises, Celebrity Cruises, Radisson, Princess, and Royal Caribbean include Honolulu on some of their cruises. Norwegian Cruise Lines offers weekly cruises around Hawai'i.

7 Maps

Free maps come in virtually every drive guide for rental vehicles and in visitor publications. For more detailed maps, look in the bookstores Borders and Barnes & Noble, or ask for a photocopy of the one in the front of the phone book.

8 Directions

Folks in Hawai'i don't give directions in terms of east, west, north, south. Instead, you will hear the words " 'ewa" (toward 'Ewa), "diamond head" (toward Diamond Head), "mauka" (toward the mountains), and "makai" (toward the ocean).

9 Greeters

Contrary to what you may see in old movies, lei greeters do not welcome every new arrival. If, however, you are on a package tour, you will likely be greeted with a lei and a peck on the cheek from a company employee. And if you're visiting friends or family, you will surely receive a garland upon arrival.

10 Passports/Visas

Visitors from the U.K., most Western European countries, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and South Korea need a valid passport and must also register with ESTA (see p104). Canadians are required to show a valid passport. Other foreign nationals need a valid passport and tourist visa.

TOP 10 Getting Around O'ahu

1 Rental Cars

Virtually every major national rental car company is represented in Honolulu. Local companies are less expensive but may be less reliable.

2 Trolleys

The cute open-air trolleys you'll spot rolling around Honolulu have been carrying visitors since the mid-1980s. Today, the Waikiki Trolley covers attractions with something for everyone, from the city's historical sites to shopping centers all over the island. The four main routes are the Honolulu City Line (red); Ocean Coast Line (blue); Shopping & Dining Line (yellow); and Ala Moana Shopping Shuttle Line (pink). Other trolleys include one specially for visitors interested in duty-free shopping, and a guided tour of Waikale. It is also possible to charter a trolley.

3 TheBus

You can get just about anywhere on O'ahu by TheBus. You can purchase one-way tickets or a visitor's pass. The pass lets you ride all you want on any four consecutive days and is sold at all ABC Stores in Waikiki and the one at Ala Moana Shopping Center. Convenience stores in Honolulu stock the bus map, which also has a handy guide to Honolulu attractions.

4 Shuttles and Taxis

For short, in-town trips you can always get a taxi in front of any major hotel, and restaurants are happy to call a taxi for you after your meal. Many hotels also provide shuttle service – usually to shopping destinations, sometimes to sights.

5 Motorcycles and Mopeds

Not for the faint of heart, motorcycles are a fun way to tour the island; mopeds do well on city streets. Be aware: motorcycle rentals are much more expensive than a car or even a van.

6 Rules of the Road

Seatbelts for everyone and approved car seats for children under three are mandatory. Pedestrians always have the right of way. Right turns are permitted – unless otherwise noted – after a full stop at a stop sign or red light.

7 Refueling

It's a good idea to keep your car's gas tank at least half full as distances between gas stations may be long.

8 Local Etiquette on the Road

Like any big city, Honolulu has its traffic challenges, especially when work-day commuters come in and go out of town. Outside the metropolis, local people are rarely in a hurry, so allow plenty of time for any driving trip. Residents will never sound their car horns except in a case of imminent danger; thus you should check your rear-view mirror often to see if someone wants to pass you.

9 Guided Tours

By land, by sea, by air, even under the sea – every variety of guided tour is available on O'ahu (see pp42 & 114). There are even tours that specialize in shopping! You can do some advance research on the internet (try www.top-10-hawaii.com as a starting point). You'll also be inundated with information about tours at the airport.

10 Beach Access

All Hawaiian beaches are public. The problem, sometimes, is not being able to get to them without trespassing. Look out for public beach access signs, which are prominently displayed, and follow the paths.

TOP 10 Banking & Communications

1 Banks

Bank of Hawai'i and First Hawaiian Bank are Hawai'i's largest, with branches throughout the islands, some of them inside supermarkets. In general, all banks are open: Mon–Thu 8:30am–3pm or 4pm, Fri 8:30am–6pm. Some branches have Saturday hours.

2 Credit Cards

VISA and MasterCard are accepted almost universally except by the smallest stores and roadside stands. American Express, Discover, Diner's Club, and JCB (a Japanese card) are accepted at most places but check first.

3 Travelers' Checks

By far the safest form of money, travelers' checks in U.S. currency are accepted virtually everywhere. Change is given in cash. Lost or stolen travelers' checks are easily replaced.

4 Telephone Calls

With the extraordinary proliferation of cell phones, public phones are fast disappearing. If you can find one, a local call will cost 50 cents, much cheaper than using a hotel phone. Inter-island calls are deemed long distance, and numbers must be preceded by dialing 1 808.

5 Postal Services

Posting a letter costs the same as on the mainland, but mail

sometimes takes longer to reach its destination. Hotels will often post mail for you, but otherwise there are post offices in every town. Opening hours are generally: 8:30am–4:30pm Mon–Fri, with short morning hours at some branches on Saturdays.

6 Newspapers and Magazines

The best place to buy mainland newspapers and a wide array of magazines is Borders Books & Music (locations at both Ward Centre and Waikalele) and Barnes & Noble (Kāhala Mall). The Honolulu Advertiser and Honolulu Star-Bulletin (both published twice daily) are the state's large dailies. For more on newspapers and magazines, see p105.

7 Television and Radio

In addition to the myriad U.S. television stations on the dial, Oceanic Cable Channel 16 provides the most local programming imaginable. All the major hotels have their own closed-circuit visitor channels with programming that provides an overview of the island, activities, shopping, and restaurants. Fans of every music genre, from rock to country to Hawaiian, will find something on the radio dial to satisfy them. If you want to listen like the locals do, try KINE, 101.5 FM for the best in island sounds.

8 "Coconut Wireless"

This is Hawai'i's version of "hearing it through the grapevine." Talk to as many locals as you can; you'll be pleasantly surprised at how willing most are to share the island's secrets.

9 Internet Access

Most hotel rooms and condos are wired for dial-up internet access. Most large hotels have business centers where you can stay in touch with the office. Internet service is also available at several cafés.

10 Hawai'i Time

Unlike the U.S. mainland, Hawai'i does not subscribe to Daylight Savings Time – island time remains constant throughout the year. From October to April, Hawai'i is two hours behind the U.S. West Coast (10 behind G.M.T.); from April to October three hours (11 G.M.T.).

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Sunburn

Everyone is at risk of sunburn in the tropics. It's important to apply sunscreen often, including after swimming. A hat and sunglasses are good accessories, too. If you're especially fair, you should wear light, long-sleeved shirts and long pants when you're in the sun. Parents should be particularly careful with young children. Be vigilant on cloudy days, too – those ultraviolet rays get through the clouds.

2 Flash Floods

During heavy rains, Hawai'i's rivers are occasionally susceptible to flash floods. It's best not to venture out on hikes or unfamiliar drives during heavy rains. Hawai'i radio and television stations always announce flash flood watches and warnings; you can also check recorded national weather forecasts by calling 973 5286.

3 Heat Stroke

Although Hawai'i is blessed with cooling trade winds most days of the year, temperatures can easily reach into the 90s, especially in summer. It's always advisable to stay out of the sun from 11am until 2pm when, obviously, the sun is at its highest point over the islands. Wearing light-colored clothing and drinking lots of water are also recommended.

4 Dehydration

With heat and sun comes the possibility of dehydration. Always carry water with you, whether you're going for a drive, venturing out on a hike, or just relaxing at the beach. Drink often and drink plenty.

5 Bites and Stings

Scorpions and centipedes are Hawai'i's most troublesome insect pests. It is unlikely that you will run into either but, if you do get stung, get medical attention as quickly as possible. Mosquitoes are more bothersome than dangerous, and can be controlled with commercial repellants.

6 Trespassing

It's not difficult to accidentally wander onto private property, especially when hiking or going to the beach. Watch for No Trespassing signs, and always use the proper public beach accesses. You may see the word Kapu on signs, which is loosely translated as "forbidden."

7 Littering

The physical beauty of the islands is most certainly one of the main reasons visitors are so drawn to them. Nothing is more jarring to that beauty than litter strewn along beaches, hiking paths, and streets. There's no shortage of litter bins for food wrappers, cigarette stubs etc., so make use of them. (Mahalo, often printed on the bins, means thank you.)

8 Removing Natural Objects

Traditional Hawaiians believe that everything – every stone, every shell, every plant – has both a life and a place of its own. So feel free to look, enjoy, and touch natural objects, but refrain from removing anything from its home.

9 Jellyfish

Hawaiian waters are susceptible to invasions of jellyfish – both box jellyfish and Portuguese man-of-war – usually about a week after a full moon. Local radio and television stations are very reliable in reporting these incursions. Jellyfish stings can be painful and, if one is allergic, quite dangerous. The best way to treat them is with meat tenderizer (available at any supermarket) or, indeed, urine.

10 Sharp Coral

The islands are surrounded by reefs of coral, much of it very sharp. It can cause nasty cuts that are susceptible to infection, as coral is a living organism. Clean out a coral cut quickly and completely, treat it with an antiseptic, and keep it covered up. If a coral cut does get infected, it should be treated by a medical practitioner.

TOP 10 Shopping & Dining Tips

1 Opening Times

Large shopping centers are open, in general, Mon–Sat 9am–9pm; Sunday hours are usually shorter. Some supermarkets and convenience stores stay open 24 hours. Most retail stores are open on U.S. holidays (with the possible exception of Christmas Day and New Year's Day) and Hawai'i state holidays, such as Prince Kūhiō Day (Mar 26) and King Kamehameha Day (Jun 11).

2 Alcohol and Smoking Laws

The legal drinking age in Hawai'i is 21. The age limit applies, as well, to buying alcoholic drinks – including beer and wine – at retail outlets. Since July 2003, smoking has been prohibited in all O'ahu restaurants, including bars and outdoor dining areas.

3 Early Bird Specials

Not surprisingly, everyone wants to dine at sunset. In order to encourage pre-sunset dinner reservations, many restaurants offer “early bird” specials (see entry 3 opposite).

4 Sales Tax

There's general excise tax – 4.167% at the time of writing – on everything, without exception, in Hawai'i. That includes food – be it a restaurant meal or groceries from the market – all retail goods (even medicine), and all services.

5 Evening Dining Hours

“Early to bed, early to rise” is the credo throughout the Aloha State. Don't be surprised if the restaurant on which you have your romantic heart set for a late night dinner stops serving at 8:30 or 9pm. The same is true of breakfast and lunch – many local folks take their lunch break at 11 or even 10:30am.

6 Casual and Formal Dining

There are few restaurants on O'ahu that require anything fancier than a shirt with a collar and footwear of some kind; there are only a handful that would frown on shorts and sandals.

7 Tipping

Those who work in the visitor industry – everyone from the hard-working hotel housekeepers to the handsome young men who park cars – depend on tips to supplement their wages, so generosity is greatly appreciated. Restaurant tips should be at least 15% of the total bill. Parking valets should be tipped $1–$2; luggage handlers at least $2 per bag. And if you avail yourself of the service, you should tip your hotel concierge.

8 Shop at the Local Stores

You'll save money on souvenirs, resort wear, even groceries if you shop where the locals do. Local favorite Long's Drugs has locations all over O'ahu and is a great source for macadamia nuts, coffee, and lots more. There are farmers' markets dotted around the island, and there's a big weekend swap meet at Aloha Stadium for excellent buys on flowers, local produce, and crafts.

9 Cheap Eats

Hawai'i's ethnic restaurants serve delicious food at low prices. You'll find Vietnamese, Chinese, Japanese, Mexican, and local-style food all over O'ahu – best bets are Chinatown and Honolulu's suburbs. At more expensive restaurants, ordering several appetizers and sharing them is an inexpensive way to sample dishes.

10 Check When Buying Souvenirs

Unfortunately, much of what passes for Made in Hawai'i goods is actually manufactured in China, Taiwan, or the Philippines. A “Made-in-Hawai'i” label may, indeed, be fake. Always ask to be sure you're getting the genuine article, and stick to places like museum gift shops and local art and craft galleries.

TOP 10 Budget Tips

1 Rent a Condo

Condominiums tend to be less expensive than hotel rooms. Rentals are readily available on O'ahu – get out of Honolulu and the expensive areas of Diamond Head, Koko Head, Kahala, Hawai'i Kai and Kailua for the best deals. Condos range from studios to three bedroom apartments. They're almost universally well maintained and equipped.

2 Eat In

The cost of dining out can easily rack up, so eating in is the obvious alternative, especially if you're renting a condo. Throughout O'ahu, there are lots of supermarkets, grocery stores, and farmers' markets where the fixings for a great meal can be easily found.

3 Ask about Discounts

Hotels, restaurants, and activity desks often offer discounts, especially during the slower months (May, June, September, October). Restaurants routinely offer "early bird" specials for folks who like to dine before the prime 6:30–8pm slot. Late night specials are common, but less well advertised.

4 Plan Well Before You Travel

Virtually every airline, many hotels, and even some car rental companies offer better prices to travelers who book well in advance.

It's also a good idea to check out restaurants and activities – many have websites – before arriving to avoid price surprises. Some advance research also allows you to comparison shop for things like whale watching and other costly activities.

5 Use Visitor Coupons

When you arrive at any airport in Hawai'i, you will see racks and racks of free visitor publications. Every one of them has coupons for discounts on restaurant meals and activities. If you have the time and the inclination to peruse the pages, the savings can be substantial.

6 Frequent Flyer and Corporate Discounts

Frequent flyer miles can be used for both free or upgraded air travel on all the major U.S. airlines. If you are a member of a national organization such as AARP (for the over 50s) or work for a large corporation, ask about discounts. You may find that your company ID card can save you money!

7 Book a Package Tour

Package tours are always less expensive than purchasing air and ground transportation and accommodations separately; any good travel agent will have lots to choose from. But even if you do choose to book your own trip, inter-island package tours (from local companies like Pleasant Island Holidays and Roberts Hawai'i) are a great and affordable way to experience another island.

8 Shop the Internet

The internet has become a fantastic resource for excellent travel deals. The big, discount travel sites (Orbitz, Expedia, Hotels.com) always have discounted prices on air fares and hotel rooms. Many of the major airlines also offer special internet fares.

9 Travel Off-Season

Hawai'i is most expensive during the winter months when travelers from cold climes swoop down upon these sun-drenched, tropical islands. The summer months (July and August) are family travel time, since children are out of school. This leaves May, June, September, and October for the bargain hunters.

10 Book a Non-Ocean View Room

Oceanfront rooms are the most expensive accommodations in Hawai'i. Next come ocean view rooms and then partial ocean view rooms. In high-rise hotels, the upper floors are also priced at a premium. Booking a mountain or garden room view could save you hundreds of dollars on your bill.

TOP 10 Outdoor Activities

1 Cruises/Sailing

From small, close-to-the-ocean-action Zodiacs to Navatek's 140-foot SWATH (Small Waterplane Area Twin Hull), every manner of sailing and cruising adventure is available in Hawai'i. Excursions depart from all areas of the island; during the winter months most cruises combine whale-watching with other activities.

2 Hiking

With more than 30 major trails covering terrain of every description, it's no wonder that hiking is as popular an activity with locals as it is with visitors. You can get a free map that will point you to all of O'ahu's most popular hikes from the State Department of Land and Natural Resources (587 0166, www.hawaii.gov/dlnr).

3 Surfing/Windsurfing

Whether you've always wanted to learn to surf or you're already an expert, many feel there's no better place on Earth to catch a wave than the Island of O'ahu. From the gentle rolling waves at Waikiki to the monster winter sets of Waimea Bay, instruction at your level is available. There are plenty of places to rent equipment, too. For windsurfing, head to — where else? — the Windward side.

4 Snorkeling

Hawai'i's most famous snorkeling spot — Hanauma Bay — is also the most popular. While this is perfect for beginners, more experienced snorkelers probably won't enjoy the crowds. There are other good snorkeling locations around the island, most notably Maunalua Bay, east of Diamond Head.

5 Scuba

In addition to a myriad variety of reef fish and other sea creatures, O'ahu is a great location for divers to explore shipwrecks. One of the most notable wrecks is the 150+-foot Mahi which was purposely sunk in 1982 off the leeward side (south of Wai'anae) to create an artificial reef. While the diving off the North Shore is good, it is best left to experienced divers and only in summer months, at that.

6 Air Tours

Sailplanes, seaplanes, and helicopters offer aerial tours of O'ahu. Any of these will provide you with an excellent panorama of the island from a unique perspective and a chance to observe inaccessible natural areas.

7 Fishing

Fishing is good year round in the waters surrounding O'ahu as well as all the neighboring islands. Sportfishing charters can be quite costly but can provide the thrill of a lifetime for anglers who've never had a deep-sea fishing experience before. Half- and full-day charters are available.

8 Walking Tours

Chinatown and downtown are good places to discover on foot. Other walking tours focus on Honolulu's historical and cultural sites, or the city's unique architecture. The National Geographic Society offers a walking tour of historic temples and archaeological sites.

9 Tennis

More than 180 public courts on the island cater to tennis enthusiasts. You can get a free listing of all of them from the City and County of Honolulu Department of Parks and Recreation (768 3003). The larger resort hotels have tennis courts for use by their guests; some welcome non-guests for a fee.

10 Bicycling

Honolulu is a major metropolitan area and unless you enjoy dodging traffic, city bicycling may not be the best idea. Mountain bikes can be rented for excursions outside the city and North Shore guided bike tours are available, too.

TOP 10 Safety Tips

1 Ocean Safety

With care and common sense, it's easy to enjoy the Pacific waters, but remember that strong currents, big waves, undertow, sharp coral, and potentially dangerous sea creatures are all natural parts of Hawai'i's environment. Also, many beaches are not staffed by lifeguards. A red flag on the beach indicates strong currents, and posted signs will alert you to other dangers.

2 Medical Emergencies

As in the rest of the U.S., dialing 911 in Hawai'i will put you in touch with the emergency services. There are several major medical centers in Honolulu – Queen's, Kapi'olani, and St. Francis, to name a few. There are clinics all over the island too, and resort hotels mostly have doctors on call.

3 Climate and Quakes

Blessed with a near perfect climate all year round, Hawai'i is, however, susceptible to extreme weather and natural disasters, most notably hurricanes (from June to November), tidal waves, and earthquakes (usually benign). O'ahu's Upcountry districts are cool throughout the year and can be very cold at the higher elevations, especially in the winter.

4 Smart Hiking

Good shoes are recommended, especially for serious hikers; rain forest trails can get very muddy and slick. Carry plenty of water and snacks and be absolutely sure of your route before you begin. Never hike alone and make sure someone knows where you're going and what time you're expected back.

5 Sun Sense

The sun in the tropics is stronger than anywhere else, even when it doesn't feel that way and even when the sky is overcast. Using sunscreen is an absolute must, as is re-application throughout the day. Fair-skinned people should wear a hat and light-colored, long-sleeved clothing where possible. And remember to drink water throughout the day.

6 Theft and Valuables

Unfortunately, even in Paradise, theft is a problem and tourists' rental cars are often the targets. Always lock your car, even if leaving it for just a few moments. Never leave anything of value in view. A locked trunk may not be a deterrent so, if possible, take anything of value with you. Make use of your hotel's safes, or lock boxes in rental properties, to store cash, jewelry, traveler's checks, and other treasures.

7 Water

All hotels and most other accommodations have filtration systems so the tap water is perfectly safe unless otherwise indicated. Bottled water is handy for carrying with you on day trips. Never drink from streams, ponds, rivers, waterfalls, or freshwater pools.

8 Lock Your Doors

Hawai'i is a very casual and, in general, an extremely safe place. All the same, you should lock your hotel room or condo – that includes balcony doors, too.

9 Safe Neighborhoods

Crime is not nearly the problem it is in some other U.S. cities, but Honolulu IS a big city, and, as such, has its share of less salubrious neighborhoods. Check with your hotel concierge about neighborhoods to avoid, especially at night.

10 Snorkeling and Scuba Safety

The buddy system ensures that you never dive alone and that you share responsibility for your safety. Full scuba instruction is widely available, but even if you're already a certified diver, familiarize yourself with the underwater terrain before any excursion.

TOP 10 Specialist Tours

1 Polynesian Adventure Tours

This company offers circle island tours, city sightseeing, even outlet shopping tours. Small groups, especially, will enjoy the mini-vans and mini-coaches.

2 Roberts Hawai'i

Roberts has been around for a long time and is reliable for guided land tours, sightseeing cruises, lū'au, and dinner shows. Their "overnighters" are all-inclusive, economical overnight trips to neighboring islands.

3 E Noa Tours

This company, which tends to lead smaller groups, employs certified tour guides for their itineraries including a circle-the-island tour, Pearl Harbor, and the shopping outlets at Waikēle. Mini-buses and trolleys are the modes of transport.

4 Native Hawaiian Hospitality Association

Visitors interested in the history and culture of the island can spend two glorious hours walking with the knowledgeable docents from NAHHA. There are two separate trails along the Waikēle Heritage Trail, both free.

5 Mauka Makai Excursions

Eco-tourism is this company's specialty. You'll journey to places even some residents have never seen. The focus is on archaeology and pre-contact history.

6 Honolulu Soaring Club

Soar above the island in a quiet sail plane and enjoy the views along the spectacular North Shore. Planes take off every 20 minutes from Dillingham Airfield in Mokolē'ia.

7 Island Seaplane Service

The planes take off and land on the water; tours are narrated, and include complimentary van transportation from your hotel.

8 Dolphin Excursions

You'll travel along the Leeward coast by Zodiac, a low-slung, motorized rubber boat that allows you to get up close to spinner dolphins and wintering whales. If conditions are right, you can even jump into the water with them! Book far in advance.

9 Honolulu Sailing Company

Luxury sail and power yachts are available by the hour, day or week. The company also offers group sail, snorkel and whale-watching tours.

10 Hawaiian Fire Surf School

You can learn to surf on a secluded beach with baby waves by instructors who also work as firefighters! What could be safer? Or more fun? Transportation from your hotel is provided.

TOP 10 Accommodations Tips

1 Traveling with Children

Hawai'i is a family-friendly place. Restaurants offer keiki (child) menus, and the resort hotels have keiki programs to keep the kids busy while the adults relax. In most hotels, small children can stay in their parents' room at no extra charge. Condos are a good, less expensive choice for families.

2 Visitors with Disabilities

Hawai'i extends a warm aloha to travelers with disabilities. Due in large part to the ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act), hotels, restaurants, and attractions provide wheelchair ramps, special parking places, and accessible restrooms. Braille translations of elevator button panels and other important signs are commonplace.

3 Hidden Extras

Accommodations are subject to a sales tax and room tax, so be prepared for an additional 15.5 percent on your bill. Most accommodations charge more than the standard rate for phone calls, faxes, and internet access. There may also be a daily parking charge.

4 Rates

At the low end of the spectrum are campsite permits, and at the high end are luxury resort suites, villas, and bungalows.

Mid-price range hotel rooms are about $250 a night, while one-bedroom condos are about $200. Inns and B&Bs often have lovely rooms for $100 to $150 a night.

5 Travel Packages

Travel packages typically include air and ground transportation and accommodations; some even include inter-island travel, activities, and some meals. The price usually depends on the accommodations and size of rental vehicle.

6 Deciphering Local Descriptions

The description "oceanfront" means you will have a panoramic and unobstructed view of the blue Pacific. And you will, of course, pay a premium for it. Other descriptions include "ocean view" and "partial ocean view." You will not be able to see the ocean from a "garden" or "mountain view room." Some rooms have no view at all.

7 Discounts

Frequent flier programs, corporate identification cards, and fraternal organization memberships are just a few of the ways you can avail yourself of discounted room rates. The websites of chain hotels will often offer these kinds of deals, and so will many travel agents.

8 Reservation Services

Most of the resort hotels are part of famous chains, and reservations can easily be made online. Travel agents can book most accommodations available. Many hotels, condos, inns, and B&Bs have their own websites and accept reservations directly. The O'ahu Visitors Bureau can also help.

9 Tips & Taxes

Tipping hotel personnel is usual – averages are $2 to $3 a day for housekeepers, $1 to $2 for parking valets, $1 to $2 per piece of luggage for baggage handlers, and 15% for room service servers. Most guests tip the concierge, as well, if they use their services. Everything in Hawai'i – all goods and services – is subject to 4.167% sales tax. Accommodations are taxed an additional 11.416%.

10 Laundry & Dry Cleaning

All the resort hotels offer laundry and dry cleaning services, but these are usually very expensive. Most condominium complexes have coin-operated laundries on the property; it will cost a few dollars per load to wash and dry. There are also coin-operated laundromats scattered around the island.

TOP 10 Budget Accommodations

1 Waikiki Sand Villa Hotel

A few blocks from the beach, this hotel has medium-size rooms and studio apartments, all with free internet access. Daily complimentary breakfast is served by the pool. ☎ 2375 Ala Wai Blvd. • Map K6 • 922 4744 • www.waikikisandvilla.com • $$

2 Hawaiiana Hotel

The most outstanding feature here is the very hospitable staff. The small courtyard pool surrounded by tropical gardens is where Kona coffee and pineapple juice are served each morning. ☎ 260 Beach Walk • Map J6 • 923 3811 • www.hawaiiana.hotelatwaikiki.com • $$

3 Mānoa Valley Inn

Built in 1919, this once-stately home is on the National Register of Historic Places. The grounds are positively gorgeous; the shady lanai is perfect for breakfast or afternoon tea. The rooms are showing signs of age but retain some charm. A few share a bath. Several episodes of ABC's Lost series have been shot here. ☎ 2001 Vancouver Dr. • Map C6 • 947 6019 • www.manoa.valleyinn.com • $$

4 Pagoda Hotel and Terrace

Popular with locals due to its proximity to the shopping at Ala Moana, the Pagoda offers a variety of rooms – standard, studios with kitchenettes, and suites. The floating restaurant and water gardens are notable. ☎ 1525 Rycroft St. • Map B6 • 941 6611 • www.pagodahotel.com • $$

5 Turtle Bay Condominiums

Self-contained one- and two-bedroom units all have full kitchens, making them perfect for families. They're on the golf courses within the Turtle Bay Resort, near famous surfing beaches and major North Shore attractions. ☎ Turtle Bay Resort, PO Box 366, Kahuku, 96731 • Map C1 • 293 0600 • www.turtle-bay-rentals.com • $$

6 Lanikai Bed & Breakfast

If a comfortable, attractive room in a chic O'ahu area is your cup of tea, this could be the B&B for you. The hosts are warm and knowledgeable; the location across from Lanikai Beach excellent. Each unit has kitchen facilities. ☎ 1277 Mokulua Dr. • Map F4 • 261 7895 • www.lanikai.beachrentals.com • $$

7 Ali'i Bluffs Windward Bed & Breakfast

On the windward shore of O'ahu, this European-style B&B is a short drive from O'ahu's best beaches. The wonderful hosts have filled their home with antiques and art.

☎ 46-251 'Iki'iki St., Kāne'ohe • Map E4 • 235 1124 • www.hawaii.scene.com/aliibluffs/ • $

8 North Shore Vacation Homes

You'll feel like a local when you rent a Hawaiian-style beach house in a quiet North Shore neighborhood. The rentals have large lanai (balconies), spectacular sunset views, and all the comforts of home. ☎ 59-229C Ke Nui Rd., Hale'iwa • Map C1 • 637 3507 • www.teamreal.estate.com • $$

9 Ke 'Ike Beach Bungalows

These modest yet clean, comfortable beach cottages occupy their own stretch of beach between the surfing beaches of Waimea Bay and Banzai Pipeline. Run by a local resident, they offer serene, family-style Hawai'i. ☎ 59-579 Ke 'Iki Rd, Hale'iwa • Map B1 • 638 8829 • www.keiki.beach.com • $$

10 Pat's Kailua Beach Properties

Groups of friends or families who'd like to try living like a local on O'ahu's windward side would do well to contact Pat's. The O'Malleys have fully furnished homes and cottages in beautiful residential areas of Kailua and Lanikai. ☎ 204 S. Kalaheo Ave., Kailua • Map F4 • 261 1653 • www.patskailua.com • $$

TOP 10 Inns and B&Bs

1 Schrader's Windward Marine Resort

In a rural setting on a peninsula 30 minutes from Waikīkī, these modest cottages include complimentary snorkeling and kayaking expeditions. Ask for a unit that opens onto Kāne'ōhe Bay if you'd like to catch dinner off your lanai! One-, two-, three-, and four-bedroom accommodations with kitchenettes are available. ☎ 47-039 Lihikai Dr., Kāne'ōhe • Map E4 • 239 5711 • www.schradersinn.com • $$

2 Hawai'i's Hidden Hideaway

A short walk from Lanikai and Kailua beaches, these privately owned units are comfortably furnished and well-equipped. All have views of the ocean or the landscaped gardens. ☎ 1369 Mokolea Dr., Kailua • Map F4 • 262 6560 • www.ahawaiibnb.com • $$

3 Holiday Inn Waikīkī

This 17-story high-rise hotel is at the gateway to Waikīkī and is a short two blocks from the beach. There's a pool and sundeck and a fitness facility; the Chinese Buffet Restaurant offers affordable, bountiful Asian fare. ☎ 1830 Ala Moana Blvd. • Map H6 • 955 1111 • www.waikikihi.holiday-inn.com • $$

4 J & B's Haven

Run by a mother/daughter team, this beautiful house has two comfortable rooms for guests. Floor-to-ceiling windows provide mountain views and two dogs add to the atmosphere. Smoking is not permitted. Breakfast is included. ☎ Kahena St., Hawaii Kai • Map F5 • 396 9462 • www.home.roadrunner.com/~jnbshaven • $$

5 The Breakers Hotel

A 1950s vintage, Hawaiian-style oasis amid towering neighbors, The Breakers prides itself on its Hawaiian-style hospitality. Tropical flowers and a patio surround the pool; there's a kitchenette in every room. And the beach is only a short walk away. ☎ 250 Beach Walk • Map J6 • 923 3181 • www.breakers-hawaii.com • $$

6 Diamond Head Bed & Breakfast

On the side of Kapi'olani Park farthest from Waikīkī, Joanne Trotter has been welcoming guests into her home for almost two decades. Her tasteful house with its big lanai and tropical gardens is filled with heirlooms and artwork. Breakfast included. ☎ 3240 Noela Drive • Map E6 • 923 3360 • www.diamondheadbnb.com • $$

7 Laie Inn

A two-story plantation-style hotel across the street from the beach is within walking distance of the Polynesian Cultural Center. The standard rooms include continental breakfast. ☎ 55-109 Laniloa St., Lā'ie • Map D1 • 293 9282 • www.laieinnhawaii.com • $

8 Beach Lane B&B and Cottages

Close to beautiful windward-side beaches and a short drive from activities, these Hawaiian-style accommodations offer a relaxing retreat near Kailua town. Beach supplies are provided. ☎ 111 Hekili St., Box 277, Kailua (mailing address) • Map F4 • 262 8286 • www.beachlane.com • $$

9 Aloha B&B

Comprised of three units with a shared bath in residential – and very upscale – Hawai'i Kai, this affordable B&B has panoramic ocean views. It's a 15-minute drive from Waikīkī and even closer to neighborhood dining and shopping. Rates include continental breakfast. ☎ 909 Kahauloa Place • Map E6 • 395 6694 • www.home.roadrunner.com/~alohaphyllis • $

10 Kailua Vacations House of Waterfalls

Four air-conditioned units sit in a lush tropical garden with a solar-heated pool and a waterfall, close to Kailua beach. The units can be rented separately or as one large rental. ☎ 1478 Akialoa Pl., Kailua • Map F4 • 262 7466 • www.kailuavacations.com • $$

Glossary of Useful Words & Terms

Hawaiian began as an oral language and was put into written form by missionaries who arrived in the 1820s. The teaching and speaking of Hawaiian was banned from the early 1900s, and by the time the native cultural renaissance began in 1978 the melodious language was almost totally lost. Immersion programs are beginning to produce a new generation of Hawaiian speakers, however, and you will hear Hawaiian words sprinkled in conversation and in the islands' music, as well as seeing it written on some signs.

SUMMARY OF PRONUNCIATION

The Hawaiian language has just 12 letters: the five vowels plus h, k, l, m, n, p, and w.

unstressed vowels:

a	as in "above"
e	as in "bet"
i	as y in "city"
o	as in "sole"
u	as in "full"

stressed vowels:

ā	as in "far"
ē	as in "pay"
ī	as in "see"
ō	as in "sole"
ū	as in "moon"

consonants:

h	as in "hat"
k	as in "kick"
l	as in "law"
m	as in "mow"
n	as in "now"
p	as in "pin"
w	as in "win" or "vine"

The 'okina (glottal stop) is found at the beginning of some words beginning with vowels or between vowels. It is pronounced like the sound between the syllables in the English "uh-oh."

ali'i	ahlee-ee
liliko'i	leeleekoh-ee
'ohana	oh-hahnah

The kahakō (macron) is a mark found only above vowels, indicating vowels should be stressed.
