HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

This Eyewitness Travel Guide helps you get the most from your stay in Rome with the minimum of practical difficulty. The opening section, Introducing Rome, locates the city geographically, sets modern Rome in its historical context, and explains how Roman life changes through the year. Rome at a Glance is an overview of the city's attractions. The main sightseeing section, Rome Area by Area, starts on page 62.

This Eyewitness Travel Guide It describes all the important sights helps you get the most from your stay in Rome with the mum of practical difficulty. The ing section. Introducing Rome, might otherwise miss.

> Carefully researched tips for hotels, shops and markets, restaurants and cafés, sports and entertainment are found in Travelers' Needs, and the Survival Guide has advice on everything from posting a letter to catching the Metro.

FINDING YOUR WAY AROUND THE SIGHTSEEING SECTION

Each of the sixteen sightseeing areas in the city is color-coded for easy reference. Every chapter opens with an introduction to the part of Rome it covers, describing its history and character, followed by a Street by Street map illustrating the heart of the area. Finding your way around each chapter is made simple by the numbering system used throughout. The most important sights are covered in detail in two or more full pages.

ROME AREA MAP

The colored areas shown on this map (see inside front cover) are the sixteen main sightseeing areas of Rome – each covered in a full chapter in Rome Area by Area (pp62–255). They are highlighted on other maps throughout the book. In Rome at a Glance (pp42–57), for example, they help locate the top sights. They are also used to help you find the position of the nine guided walks (p273).

Numbers refer to each sight's position on the area map and its place in the chapter.

The visitors' checklist gives all the practical information needed to plan your visit.

Detailed information

S All the important sights in Rome are described individually. They are listed in order following the numbering on the area map at the start of the section. Practical information includes a map reference, opening bours, and telephone numbers. The key to the symbols is on the back flap.

4Rome's major sights Historic buildings are dissected to reveal their interiors; museums and galleries have color-coded floorplans to help you find the most important exhibits.

ANCIENT ROME

- Explore the Republic
- Lunch in medieval ambience
- Absorb Imperial grandeur
- See how the Caesars lived

TWO ADULTS allow at least €150

Morning

Cram highlights of the 1.000year history of ancient Rome's Republic and Empire into one very full day. Start at its heart, the Roman Forum (see pp76-91), then spend an hour or so perusing some of its treasures inside the Capitoline Museums (see pp70-3). Stroll over to Largo della Torre Argentina to gaze upon the remains of three Republican-era temples and the crumbling brick steps of the 55 BC Baths of Pompey, where Julius Caesar was murdered, ending the Republican era. The Baths of Pompey complex included a theater that has now vanished but some of its vaults survive in the foundations of the Campo de' Fiori area's medieval buildings - including the basement rooms of Ristorante Da Pancrazio (see p320), which serves excellent pasta.

Afternoon

Return to the core of ancient Rome past the Teatro di Marcello - model for the Colosseum - and the two tinv Temples of the Forum Boarium (see p203) in Piazza della Bocca della Verità. Nip up Via del Velabro to the Forum's back entrance and cut through to Via dei Fori Imperiali to explore the ruins of Rome's Imperial era - the Market and Forum of Trajan (see pp88-9), and the Forums of Caesar, Augustus, and Nerva (see pp90–91). At the end, you can admire the Domus Aurea (Nero's Golden House) (see p175; closed at present) and the nearby Colosseum (see pp92-3), built over Nero's former artificial lake. Stroll up the Via Sacra to roam the Palatine Hill (see pp97-101; entry included on Colosseum ticket), peppered with original palatial homes.

CHRISTIAN ROME

- The Vatican Museums
- Picnic on the Piazza
- Mosaics and a Mithraic temnle
- Holv (dinner) orders

Morning

Exploring the Vatican

Museums (see pp234-47) can easily occupy a full morning. When you're hungry, leave the museum and walk four streets up Via Tunisi to shop for goodies at the outdoor market on Via Andrea Doria. Take them back to picnic on Piazza San Pietro

Afternoon

Pop into St. Peter's Basilica (see pp230-33) to marvel at this capital of Christendom. then head to admire the glittering mosaics of Santa Maria Maggiore (see pp172-3). Afterward, visit San Clemente (see pp186-7), a gorgeous 12th-century church built atop a 4thcentury one, which stands on an ancient Mithraic temple. You will find important works by Raphael,

Detail of the mosaics in Santa Maria Maggiore

Bernini, Caravaggio, and Bramante in the church of Santa Maria del Popolo (see pp138–9). Enjoy the evening passeggiata – Rome's seeand-be-seen stroll along the Via del Corso – with a drink at one of the busy cafés flanking the piazza. Round off by eating in one of two restaurants run by nuns: the simple, family-style Fraterna Domus (see p317), or the exotic but priccy L'Eau Vive (see p316).

ART AND SHOPPING

- Fountains and piazzas
- National Gallery treasures
- Temples and boutiques
- Spanish Steps and the Trevi

TWO ADULTS allow at least €25

Morning

Start at the fruit and flower market of Campo de' Fiori (see pp143-53), located around a statue of Giordano Bruno, who was burned at the stake in the Middle Ages. Piazza Navona (see p116-27), with its Baroque fountains and excellent cafés, owes its oval shape to the ancient stadium beneath (a fragment is visible at its north end). Visit the collections of the National Gallery in the Palazzo Altemps (see p127). Peek into the church of San Luigi dei Francesi (see p122) for the early Caravaggios, then duck into Corso del Rinascimento 40 to see the hidden fantasy facade on Sant'Ivo alla Sapienza (see p122). Do not miss Rome's Pantheon (see pp110–11), an ancient temple (now church), and Santa Maria sopra Minerva (see p108), for its art. Try the cappuccinos at Caffe Sant'Eustachio (see p330).

Afternoon

Cross the Via del Corso, and enjoy an afternoon's shopping in the chic boutiques of Via Condotti (see p133) and its tributaries fanning out from the base of the Spanish Steps (see p134–5). To end the day treat yourself to one of Rome's best ice creams at San Crispino (see p330), and wander over to the nearby Trevi Fountain (see p159) before it melts.

A FAMILY DAY

- Cycle in Villa Borghese park
- See puppets, creatures, and creepy crypts
- Cross the Tiber for medieval alleys and panoramic views

FAMILY OF 4 allow at least €185

Morning

Rent bikes in Villa Borghese park (see pp258–9) where, as well as exploring, you can visit the Etruscan Museum in Villa Giulia (see pp262–3) or the excellent Galleria  Borghese (see pp260–61; book ahead). If the kids need less art and more fun, take in Rome's zoo, the Bioparco (see p259). If it's a Sunday, stop at Pincio Gardens (see pp136–7) for an open air carousel and the San Carlino, one of Rome's few remaining puppet theaters that puts on Pulcinella shows from 11am.

Afternoon

Return the bikes and stroll past the top of the Spanish Steps (see bb134-5) down Via Gregoriana, looking out for the Palazzetto Zuccari at number 28, whose windows and doors are shaped into hideous creatures. Below Via Veneto's Santa Maria della Concezione (see p254) lies the creepy Capuchin Crypts, which are covered in mosaics made from the bones of monks (Cappuccino coffee was named after the color of these friars' robes.)

At Piazza della Bocca della Verità, on the porch of Santa Maria in Cosmedin (see p202), sits the Mouth of Truth an ancient drain cover carved as a monstrous face. The story goes that if you tell a lie with your fingers in the mouth it will bite them off Head across the river to Trastevere (see pp207-13), an area of twisting medieval alleys. Climb Janiculum hill (see pp215-17) to enjoy the sweeping views of the city. Descend to Trastevere for a pizza at Pizzeria lvo (see p.328).

Rome is in southern Europe, on the same line of latitude as New York. It bas two airports and is about 2½ bours' flying time from London. Rome is also linked to the rest of Europe by road and rail. It is about 15 hours from Paris by train. It is also at the center of Italy's main road network, parts of which follow the routes of ancient Roman roads.

Central Rome

This book divides central Rome into 16 areas and has further sections for sights on the outskirts of the city, including some day trips, as well as some suggested walks. Each of the main areas has its own chapter and contains a selection of sights that convey some of its history and distinctive character. The Forum will give you a glimpse of ancient Rome, while the Capitol, Piazza della Rotonda, and Piazza Navona represent the historic center. If you are interested in Renaissance palaces, make a point of visiting the fine examples in Campo de' Fiori. In Piazza di Spagna, you can find designer stores and hints of the Grand Tour. A stop at the Vatican will reveal the impressive St. Peter's and the heart of Roman Catholicism.

Pantheon

Fronted by lofty granite columns, the Pantheon was built as a Roman temple of "all the gods" (see pp110–11).

> > Popolo

Colosseum

One of Rome's most famous landmarks, the Colosseum (see pp92–5) was the venue for gladiatorial and animal fights. These provided a gory spectacle for Rome's citizens, up to 55,000 of whom would cram into the amphitheater at one time.

THE HISTORY OF ROME

ne of the most ancient cities in Europe, Rome was founded over 2,750 years ago. Since then it has been continuously inhabited, and, as the headquarters first of the Roman Empire and then of the Catholic Church, it has had an immense impact on the world.

Many European languages are based on Latin; many political and legal systems follow the ancient Roman model; and buildings all round the world utilize styles and techniques perfected in ancient Rome. The city itself retains layers of buildings spanning over two millennia. Not surprisingly, all this history can seem a little overwhelming.

Rome began as an Iron Age hut village, founded in the mid-8th century BC. In 616, the Romans' sophisticated Etruscan neighbors seized power, but were ousted in 509, when Rome became a Republic. It conguered most of the rest of Italy, then turned its attentions overseas, and by the 1st century BC ruled Spain, North Africa, and Greece. The expansion of the Empire provided opportunities for power-hungry individuals, and the clashing of egos led to the collapse of democracy. Julius Caesar ruled for a time as dictator, and his nephew Octavian became Rome's first and became Rome's Hist emperor, assuming the title Augustus. During the reign of Augustus, Christ was born, and though Christians were persecuted until the 4th century AD, the new religion took hold and Rome became its main center.

Even though it was the seat of the papacy, during the Middle Ages Rome went into decline. The city recovered spectacularly in the mid-15th century, and for over 200 years was embellished by the greatest artists of the Renaissance and the Baroque. Finally, in 1870, Rome became the capital of the newly unified Italy.

Rome's Early Development

According to the historian Livy, Romulus founded Rome in 753 BC. Sometime later, realizing his tribe was short of females he invited the neighboring Sabines to a festival, and orchestrated the mass abduction of their women. Although Livy's account is pure legend, there is evidence that Rome was founded around the middle of the 8th century BC, and that the Romans and Sabines united shortly afterward. Historical evidence also gives some support to Livv's claim that after Romulus's death Rome was ruled by a series of kings, and that in the 7th century BC it was conquered by the Etruscans and ruled by the Tarquin family. Last of the dynasty was Tarquinius Superbus (Tarquin the Proud). His despotic rule led to the Etruscans being expelled and the founding of a Republic run by two annually elected consuls. The uprising was led by Lucius Junius Brutus, the model of the stern, patriotic Roman Republican.

The Seven Hills of Rome

By the 8th century BC, shepherds and farmers lived on four of Rome's seven hills. As the population grew, huts were built in the marshy valley later occupied by the Forum.

WHERE TO SEE ETRUSCAN ROME

The Cloaca Maxima sewer still functions but there are few other traces of Etruscan Rome. Most finds come from Etruscan sites outside Rome like Tarquinia, with its tomb paintings of sumptuous banquets (see  $p_2^{71}$ ), but there are major collections in the Villa Giulia (pp262-3) and Vatican Museums (b238). The most famous object. however, is a bronze statue of the legendary she-wolf in the Capitoline Museums (p73). The Antiquarium Forense (p87) displays objects from the necropolis which once occupied the site of the Roman Forum

Funeral urns shaped like huts were used for cremation from the mid-8th century BC.

The Roman Republic

By the mid-2nd century BC, Rome controlled the western Mediterranean policing and defending it with massive armies. The troops had more lovalty to the generals than to distant politicians. giving men like Marius, Sulla, Pompey, and Caesar the muscle to seize political power. Meanwhile, peasants, whose land had been destroyed during the invasion of Hannibal in 219 BC, had flooded into Rome. They were followed by slaves and freedmen from conquered lands such as Greece, swelling the population to half a million. There was plenty of work for immigrants, constructing roads, aqueducts, markets, and temples, financed by taxes on Rome's expanding trade.

Rome owed much of its prosperity to its skilled civil engineers. When the city's wells were no longer sufficient, aqueducts were built to bring water from surrounding bills. Some were over 50 miles (80 km) long.

The Temple of Saturn, first built in 497 BC, now consists of eight majestic columns overlooking the Forum at the end of the Via Sacra (see p83).

Rome's loveliest Republican buildings are the two Temples of the Forum Boarium (see b203). Four more temples can be seen in the Area Sacra of Largo Argentina (p150). Most monuments from this period, however, lie underground. Only a few, like the Tomb of the Scipios (p195), have been excavated. One of the bridges leading to Tiber Island (p153), the Ponte Fabricio, dates from the 1st century BC and is still used by pedestrians.

Imperial Rome

In 44 BC Caesar became dictator for life, only to be assassinated a month later. The result was 17 years of civil war, which ended only in 27 BC when Augustus became Rome's first emperor. The Empire expanded in fits and starts, but by the late 3rd century hus, was so huge that Diocletian decided to Rome was the most magnificent city in the world, studded with the lavish buildings of emperors keen to advertise their civic munificence and military triumphs.

WHERE TO SEE IMPERIAL ROME

There are relics of Imperial Rome throughout the city center, some hidden below churches and palazzi, others like the Forum (see pp 76-87), the Palatine (*bb*97–101). and the Imperial Fora (pp88-91), fully excavated. The magnificence of the era. however, is best conveyed by the Pantheon (pp110-11) and the Colosseum (bb92-5).

Early Christian Rome

Crucifixion in Santa Maria Antiqua

In the 1st century AD, during the reign of Tiberius, a rebellious pacifist was crucified in a distant corner of the Empire. This was nothing unusual, but within a few years Jesus Christ and his teachings became notorious in Rome, his followers were perceived as a threat to public order, and many were executed. This was no deterrent, and the new religion spread through all levels of Roman society. When the apostles Peter and Paul arrived in Rome there was already a small Christian community, and in spite of continued persecution by the state, Christianity flourished. In AD313 the Emperor Constantine issued an edict granting freedom of worship to Christians, and soon after founded a shrine on the site of St. Peter's tomb. This secured Rome's position as a center of Christianity, but in the 5th century the political importance of Rome declined and the city fell to Goths and other invaders.

WHERE TO SEE EARLY CHRISTIAN ROME

There are traces of early Christianity all over Rome. Many ancient churches were built over early Christian meeting places and sites of martyrdoms: among them San Clemente (see bb186-7). Santa Pudenziana (p171) and Santa Cecilia (p211). Outside the walls of the old city are miles of underground catacombs (pp265-6), many decorated with Christian frescoes, while the Vatican's Pio-Christian Museum (b240) has the best collection of early Christian art.

The Papacy

The Pope is considered Christ's representative on earth, claiming his authority from St. Peter, the first Bishop of Rome. Though some popes have been great thinkers and reformers, the role has rarely been purely spiritual. In the Middle Ages, many popes were involved in power struggles with the Holy Roman Emperor. Renaissance popes like Julius II and Leo X, the patrons of Raphael and Michelangelo, lived as luxuriously as any secular prince. The popes listed here include all those who exercised significant political or religious influence, up as far as the end of the Counter-Reformation, when the power of the papacy began to wane.

Paul III Gives His Approval to the Capuchin Order by Sebastiano Ricci

Medieval Rome

Mosaic, San Clemente Supplanted by Constantinople as capital of the Empire in the 4th century, Rome was reduced to a few thousand inhabitants by the early Middle Ages, its power just a memory. In the 8th and 9th centuries, the growing importance of the papacy revived the city and made it once more a center of power. But continual conflicts between the pope and the Holy Roman Emperor soon weakened the papacy. The 10th, 11th, and 12th centuries were among the bleakest in Roman history: violent invaders left Rome poverty-stricken and the constantly warring local barons tore apart what remained of the city. Despite this, the first Holy Year was declared in 1300 and thousands of pilgrims arrived in Rome. But by 1309 the papacy was forced to move to Avignon, leaving Rome to slide into further squalor and strife.

WHERE TO SEE MEDIEVAL ROME

Among the most interesting churches of the period are San Clemente, with a fine apse mosaic and Cosmati floor (see pp186–7), Santa Maria in Trastevere (pp212– 13), and Santa Maria sopra Minerva, Rome's only Gothic church (p108). Santa Cecilia in Trastevere (p211) has a Cavallini fresco, and there is fine Cosmati work in Santa Maria in Cosmedin (p202).

Charlemagne's Dalmatic in the Treasury of St. Peter's (p232) was supposedly worn by the emperor at his coronation in 800. In fact the richly embroidered vestment probably dates from the 14th century.

Renaissance Rome

Detail of Botticelli's Youth of Moses (1480s) Pope Nicholas V came to the throne in 1447 determined to make Rome a city fit for the papacy. Among his successors, men like Julius II and Leo X eagerly followed his lead, and the city's appearance was transformed. The Classical ideals of the Renaissance inspired artists, architects, and craftsmen, such as Michelangelo, Bramante, Raphael, and Cellini, to build and decorate the churches and palaces of a newly confident Rome.

WHERE TO SEE RENAISSANCE ROME

The Campo de' Fiori area (see pp142-53) is full of grand Renaissance palazzi, especially along Via Giulia (bb276-7). Across the river stands the delightful Villa Farnesina (bb220-21). The most typical church of the period is Santa Maria del Popolo (pp138-9), and the best collection of Renaissance art is in the Vatican Museums (pp234-47). These include the Sistine Chapel (pp244-7) and the Raphael Rooms (pp242-3).

The Madonna di Foligno by Raphael (1511-12) is one of the fine Renaissance paintings in the Vatican Pinacoteca (p241).

Baroque Rome

By the 16th century, the Catholic Church had become immensely rich – one of the chief criticisms of the Protestant reformers. The display of grandeur and extravagance by the papal court contrasted sharply with the poverty of the people, and wealthy Roman society was characterized by sumptuous luxury and a ceaseless round of entertainment. To make the Catholic faith more appealing than Protestantism, scores of churches were built and monuments and fountains were erected to glorify the Holy See. The finest architects in the ornate, dramatic style of the Barooue were Bernini and Borromini.

Understanding Rome's Architecture

The architecture of Imperial Rome kept alive the Classical styles of ancient Greece, at the same time developing new, uniquely Roman forms based on the arch, the vault, and the dome. The next important period was the 12th century, when many Romanesque churches were built. The Renaissance saw a return to Classical ideals, inspired by the example of Florence, but in the 17th century Rome found a style of its own again in the flambovance of the Baroque.

e entablature above these columns has both straight and arched sections (Hadrian's Villa).

CLASSICAL ROME

Most Roman buildings were of concrete faced with brick. but from the 1st century BC. the Romans started to imitate earlier Greek models, using marble to decorate temples and other public buildings.

Carvatids were sculpted columns. usually in the form of a female figure. Roman carvatids, like this one in the Forum of Augustus, were often copied in detail from earlier Greek examples.

Roman temples were usually built on a raised dais or podium, to make them prominent. Many were fronted by a portico, a roofed porch with columns.

Cella (inner sanctuary) Colonnade enclosing portico

The orders of Classical architecture were building styles, each based on a different column design. The three major orders were borrowed by the Romans from the Greeks.

Doric order

Ionic order

Corinthian order

Aedicules were small shrines. framed by two pillars, usually

EARLY CHRISTIAN AND MEDIEVAL ROME

The first Christian churches in Rome were based on the basilica: oblong, with three naves, each usually ending in an apse. From the 10th through the 13th centuries, most churches were built in the Romanesque style, which used the rounded arches of ancient Rome.

The triumphal arch divides the nave of a church from the apse. Here, in San Paolo fuori le Mura, it is decorated with mosaics.

A tabernacle is used to house the Sacrament for the mass. This 13th-century Gothic wall tabernacle is in San Clemente.

Basilicas in Rome have, in most cases, kept their original rectangular shape. The nave of San Giovanni in Laterano retains its 4th-century floorplan.

RENAISSANCE AND BAROQUE ROME

Renaissance architecture (15tb–16th centuries) drew its inspiration directly from Classical models. It revived the use of strict geometric proportions. The Baroque age (late 16tb–17th centuries) broke many established rules, favoring grandiose decoration over pure Classical forms.

A baldacchino is a canopy, supported on columns, rising over the main altar. This Baroque example is in St. Peter's.

Putti were a popular decorative feature in the Baroque. A putto is a painting or a sculpture of a child like a Cupid or cherub.

A loggia is an open-sided gallery or arcade. It may be a separate structure or part of a building, as here at San Saba.

COSMATESQUE SCULPTURE AND MOSAICS

The Cosmati family, active in Rome during the 12th and 13th centuries, have given their name to a particularly Roman style of to a particularly Roman style of decoration. They worked in marble, producing all kinds of fittings for churches, including cloisters, episcopal thrones, tombs, pulpits, fonts, and candlesticks. These were often decorated with bands of colorful mosaic. They also left many fine floor mosaics, usually of white marble with an inlay of red and green porphyry. Ancient Roman columns were cut up to provide the materials. Several other families of stonemasons used a similar style, and their work is also described as Cosmatesque.

Rome during Unification

Under Napoleon. Italy had a brief taste of unity, but by 1815 it was once more divided into many small states and papal rule was restored in Rome. Over the next 50 years, patriots, led by Mazzini, Garibaldi, and others. struggled to create an independent. unified Italy. In 1848 Rome was briefly declared a Republic, but Garibaldi's forces were driven out by French troops. The French continued to protect the pope, while the rest of Italy was united as a kingdom under Vittorio Emanuele of Savoy. In 1870, troops stormed the city, and Rome became capital of Italy.

Modern Rome

The Fascist dictator Mussolini dreamed of recreating the immensity, order, and power of the old Roman Empire: "Rome," he said, "must appear wonderful to the whole world." He began to build a grandiose new complex, EUR, in the suburbs, and razed 15 churches and many medieval houses to create space for wide new roads. Fortunately most of the old center has survived, leaving the city with one of Europe's most picturesque historic cores. To mark the Holy Year and the new millennium, many crumbling churches, buildings, and monuments were given a thorough facelift.

Rome's Best: Churches and Temples

As the center of Christianity, Rome has a vast wealth of beautiful and interesting churches. These range from magnificent great basilicas, built to assert the importance of the medieval and Renaissance Catholic church, to smaller, humbler buildings where the first Christians gathered, often in secret. Among the most fascinating early churches are those converted from ancient Roman temples. Additions to these over the years have resulted in some intriguing, manylayered buildings. A more detailed historical overview of Rome's churches is on pages 46–7.

Exploring Churches and Temples

There are more churches in Rome than there are days of the year, so you'll have to be selective. Catholic pilgrims have always been drawn to the seven major basilicas: St. Peter's, the heart of the Roman Catholic church. San Giovanni in Laterano (St. John Lateran). San Paolo fuori le Mura Santa Maria Maggiore Santa Croce in Gerusalemme. San Lorenzo fuori le Mura. and San Sebastiano. These have a wealth of relics, tombs, and magnificent works of art from many different periods. Smaller churches can be equally fascinating, especially those that have preserved their original character.

ANCIENT TEMPLES

One pagan temple survives virtually unaltered since it was erected in the 2nd century AD. The Pantheon. "Temple of all the Gods." has a domed interior quite different in structure from any other church in Rome. It was reconsecrated as a Christian church in the 7th century.

Other Roman temples have been incorporated into Christian churches at various times. Two of these are in the Forum: Santi Cosma e Damiano was established in the Temple of Romulus in 526 while San Lorenzo in Miranda was built on to the ruins of the Temple of Antoninus and Faustina in the 11th century. The Baroque facade, built in 1602, looms behind the columns of the temple.

Another church that clearly shows its ancient Roman origins is Santa Costanza, built as a mausoleum for Constantine's daughter. It is a round church with some splendid 4th-century mosaics.

EARLY CHRISTIAN AND MEDIEVAL CHURCHES

Some early basilicas - the 5thcentury Santa Maria Maggiore and Santa Sabina for example - retain much of their original structure. Other, even earlier, churches such as the 4th-century San Paolo fuori le Mura and San Giovanni in Laterano still preserve their original basilica shape. San Paolo was rebuilt after a fire in 1823 destroyed the original building, and the San Giovanni of today dates from a 1646 reconstruction by Borromini. Both these churches still have their medieval cloisters.

13th-century fresco by Pietro Cavallini in Santa Cecilia

Santa Maria in Trastevere and Santa Cecilia in Trastevere were built over houses where the earliest Christian communities met and worshiped in secret to avoid persecution. One church where the different lavers of earlier structures can clearly be seen is San Clemente At its lowest level, it has a Mithraic temple of the 3rd century AD. Other early churches include Santa Maria in Cosmedin. with its impressive Romanesque bell tower. and the fortified convent of Santi Ouattro Coronati. Many Roman churches, most notably Santa Prassede. contain fine early Christian Cloister of San and medieval mosaics.

Giovanni in Laterano

UNUSUAL FLOORPLANS

The design of Rome's first churches was based on the ancient basilica, a rectangular building divided into three naves. Since then there have been many bold departures from this plan, including round churches, square churches based on the shape of the Greek cross, as in Bramante's plan for St. Peter's, and, in the Baroque period, even oval and hexagonal ones.

Pantheon (2nd century)

RENAISSANCE

The greatest undertaking of the Renaissance popes was the rebuilding of St. Peter's. Disagreements on the form it should take meant that, although work started in 1506, it was not completed until well into the 17th century. Fortunately, this did not prevent the building of Michelangelo's great dome. As well as working on St. Peter's, Michelangelo also provided the Sistine Chapel with its magnificent frescoes.

On a completely different scale, another key work of Renaissance architecture is Bramante's tiny Tempietto (1499) on the Janiculum. Santa Maria della Pace has a Bramante cloister, some frescoes by Raphael and a charming portico by Pietro da Cortona. Also of interest is Michelangelo's imaginative use of the great vaults of the Roman Baths of Diocletian in the church of Santa Maria degli Angeli

There are other churches worth visiting for the sake of

their outstanding paintings and sculptures. Santa Maria del Popolo, for example, has two great paintings by Caravaggio the Chigi Chapel designed by Raphael, and a series of 15th-century frescoes by Pinturicchio San Pietro in Vincoli, besides having the chains with which St. Peter was bound in prison, also has Michelangelo's awe-inspiring statue of Moses, while San Luigi dei Francesi has three Caravaggios depicting St. Matthew and frescoes by Domenichino

BAROQUE

Interior of Rosati's dome in San Carlo ai Catinari (1620)

The Counter-Reformation inspired the exuberant lavish style of churches such as the Gesù and Sant' Ignazio di Lovola. The best-loved examples of Roman Baroque are the later works associated with Bernini, such as the great colonnade and baldacchino he built for St. Peter's. Of the smaller churches he designed, perhaps the finest is Sant Andrea al Ouirinale, while Santa Maria della Vittoria houses his truly astonishing Cornaro Chapel with its sculpture of the Ecstasy of St. Teresa. The late Baroque was not all Bernini, however. You should also look out for churches such as San Carlo ai Catinari with its beautiful dome by Rosato Rosati and the many churches by Bernini's rival, Borromini. Sant'Agnese in Agone and San Carlo alle Quattro Fontane are famed for the dramatic concave surfaces of their facades, while the complex structure of Sant'Ivo alla Sapienza makes it one of the miniature masterworks of the Baroque.

Rome's Best: Museums and Galleries

The museums of Rome are among the richest in the world; the Vatican alone contains incomparable collections of Egyptian, Etruscan, Greek, Roman, and Early Christian artifacts, as well as frescoes by Michelangelo and Raphael, priceless manuscripts, and jewels. Excavations in the 19th century added treasures from ancient Rome which are now on show in museums throughout the city. The finest Etruscan collections in the world can be enjoyed in the Villa Giulia. More details of Rome's museums and galleries are given on pages 50–51.

Rome's museums and galleries have two major strengths: Greek and Roman archaeological treasures, and paintings and sculptures of the Renaissance and the Baroque. The Vatican Museums have superb collections of both, as do, on a smaller scale, the Capitoline Museums. Fine paintings can

ETRUSCAN ARTIFACTS

5th-century BC Etruscan gold plate with inscription, Villa Giulia

The Etruscans inhabited an area stretching from Florence to Rome from the 8th century BC, and ruled Rome from the late 7th century BC (see pp18-19). It was the Etruscan custom to bury the dead along with their possessions, and as a result Etruscan artifacts have been excavated from tombs all over central Italy. Three main collections can be seen in Rome. The Villa Giulia has been the home of the Museo Nazionale Etrusco since 1889. The villa, designed by Vignola for Pope Julius III for summer outings, is one of Rome's prettiest Renaissance buildings. Its gardens contain a reconstructed Etruscan temple. Not all objects here are Etruscan, however; some of the pottery, statuettes, and artifacts are relics of the Faliscans, Latins, and other tribes who inhabited central Italy before the Romans.

The Gregorian Etruscan Museum in the Vatican Museums was opened in 1837 to house Etruscan finds from tombs on Church-owned land. The Museo Barracco in the Piccola Farnesina has statues from the much older civilizations of ancient Egypt and Assyria.

ANCIENT ROMAN ART

The archaeological zone in Rome forms a huge openair museum of evidence of ancient Roman life, while the porticoes and cloisters of the city's churches are filled with ancient sarcophagi and fragments of statuary. The largest important collection can be seen in the Museo Nazionale

Romano at the Baths of Diocletian and its new branch Palazzo Massimo. The museum's many ancient artifacts include. most notably, a sarcophagus from Livia's Villa at Prima Porta just north of Rome. Also on display are some wonderfully wellpreserved mosaics. The museum's great collection of Roman statues is now housed in the recently restored Palazzo Altemps. The most important statues are in the Vatican Museums, which also have the best of the great Greek works, such as Victory banner, Museo della Civiltà Romana the Laocoön, brought to Rome around the 1st century AD. It had tremendous influence on the subsequent development of Roman art. Splendid copies of Greek originals can be seen in the Capitoline Museums

ART GALLERIES

Muses in Raphael's Parnassus (1508–11), Vatican Museums

In the past, many of Rome's great aristocratic families owned magnificent private collections of paintings and sculpture. Some of these are still housed in ancestral palazzi, which are open to the public. One is the Galleria Doria Pamphili, which has the greatest concentration of paintings of any palazzo in Rome. It's well worth searching through the various rooms to find the pearls of the collection, which include works by Filippo Lippi, Raphael, Titian, Caravaggio, and Claude Lorrain, and portrait of Pope Innocent X Pamphilj by the Spanish artist Velázquez. The Galleria Spada collection, begun by Bernardino Spada in 1632, is still housed in the fine original include works by Rubens, Guido Reni, Guercino, and Jan Brueghel the Elder. The Galleria Colonna contains a collection of art dating from the same period.

Other old family residences are now showcases for state art collections. The Galleria Nazionale d'Arte Antica is divided between Palazzo Barberini and Palazzo Corsini. Palazzo Barberini. built between 1625 and 1633 by Bernini and others for the Barberini family, houses paintings from the 13th to the 16th centuries. It also has objets d'art acquired by the state from various private collections. At some future date, the 17th- and 18thcentury paintings exhibited in the Palazzo Corsini, on the south side of the Tiber, will be transferred to join the Palazzo Barberini collection. Another wonderful private collection was that of the Borghese family also now managed by the state. The Museo e Galleria Borghese contains a sculpture collection, including the technically amazing Apollo and Dathne by the vouthful genius Bernini and Canova's famous statue of Pauline Borghese. On the second floor is the picture collection with works by Titian. Correggio, and others.

The Capitoline Museums hold collections that were gifts of the popes to the people of Rome. The Pinacoteca (art gallery) in the Palazzo dei Conservatori contains works by Titian, Guercino, and Van Dyck. There is an art gallery at the Vatican Museums, but lovers of Renaissance art will head straight for the Sistine Chapel and the Raphael Rooms. Rome's main modern art collection is in the Galleria Nazionale d'Arte Moderna.

SMALLER MUSEUMS

The most important of the smaller collections is the beautifully laid-out medieval museum in Palazzo Venezia, with exhibits ranging from ceramics to sculpture. Rome has a wealth of specialist museums like the Museum of Musical Instruments, the Museo di Roma in Trastevere, with tableaux showing life in Rome during the last century, and the Burcardo Theater Museum

For those with an interest in the English Romantic poets who lived in Rome in the 19th century, there is the Keats-Shelley Memorial House, a museum in the house where John Keats died. Focusing on the French Empire, the Museo Napoleonico has relics and paintings

Rome's Best: Fountains and Obelisks

Rome has some of the loveliest fountains in the world. Many of them are the work of the greatest sculptors of the Renaissance and Baroque. Some fountains are flamboyant displays, others restful trickles of water. Many are simply drinking fountains, while a few cascade from the sides of buildings. Obelisks date from far earlier in the city's history. Although some of them were commissioned by Roman emperors, many are even older and were brought to Rome by triumphant, conquering armies. A more detailed overview of Rome's fountains and obelisks is on pages 54–5.

Piazza San Pietro

Twin fountains give life to the splendid monumental piazza of St. Peter's. Maderno designed the one on the Vatican side in 1614; the other was later built to match.

Exploring Fountains and Obelisks

Fountain of the Amphorae (1920s) The popes who restored the ancient Roman aqueducts used to build fountains to commemorate their deeds of munificence. As a result, fountains of all sizes and shapes punctuate the city, drawing grateful crowds on hot summer days. Ancient obelisks provide powerful reminders of the debt Roman civilization owed to the Egyptians. Architects have learnt to incorporate them into Roman piazzas in fascinating ways.

FOUNTAINS

The Trevi fountain is one of the most famous of all. It is a mostra, a monumental fountain built to mark the end of an aqueduct - in this case the Acqua Vergine, built by Marcus Agrippa in 19 BC, although the Trevi itself was only completed in 1762. Other mostre are the Fontana dell'Acqua Paola, built for Pope Paul V in 1612 on the Janiculum, and the Moses Fountain, commemorating the opening of the Acqua Felice by Pope Sixtus V in 1587.

Almost all Rome's famous piazzas have fountains. In Piazza San Pietro there is a matching pair of powerful fountains. Piazza Navona has Bernini's wonderful Baroque Fontana dei Ouattro Fiumi (fountain of the four rivers) as its main attraction. The fountain's four figures each represent one of the principal rivers of the four continents then known. To the south of this is the smaller Fontana del Moro (the Moor), also by Bernini, showing an Ethiopian struggling with a dolphin. At the north end, Neptune wrestles with an octopus on a 19th-century fountain. In Piazza Barberini is the magnificent Bernini creation of 1642–3: the Fontana del Tritone with its sea god blowing through a shell.

More recently, large piazzas have been redesigned around fountains. Valadier's great design for Piazza del Popolo (1816–20) has marble lions and fountains surrounding the central obelisk plus two more fountains on the east and west sides of the square. The early 20th centiury saw the opening of the Fontana delle Naiadi (nymphs) in Piazza della Repubblica: its earthy figures caused great scandal at the time. The highly original Fountain of the Amphorae (map 8 D2) was erected in Piazza dell'Emporio during the 1920s. The same designer. Pietro Lombardi, also created the Fountain of the Four Tiaras (map 3 C3) behind the colonnade of St. Peter's.

Fountain of the four tiaras located behind St. Peter's

The city also has a number of smaller, and often very charming, fountains. At the foot of the Spanish Steps is the Fontana della Barcaccia (the leaking boat) of 1627; the Fontana delle Tartarughe

THE TREVI FOUNTAIN

Appropriately for a fountain resembling a stage set, the theatrical Trevi has been the star of many movies set in Rome. including romantic films like Three Coins in a Fountain and Roman Holiday, but also La Dolce Vita. Fellini's satirical portrait of Rome in the 1950s. Whatever liberties Anita Ekberg took then, paddling in the fountains of Rome is now forbidden, however tempting it could be in the summer heat.

Anita Ekberg in La Dolce Vita (1960)

(the tortoise fountain) has been in the tiny Piazza Mattei since 1581, and by Santa Maria in Domnica is the Fontana della Navicella (little boat) created out of an ancient Roman sculpture in the 16th century. In the forecourt of Santa Sabina (map 8 D2) water gushes from a huge mask set in an ancient basin. The Pantheon Fountain (map 4 F4), from 1575, is by Iacopo della Porta. Le Ouattro Fontane (four fountains) have stood at the Ouirinal hill crossroads since 1593.

Fountains in parks and gardens include the Galleon Fountain (1620–21) at the Vatican, and the Fontana dei Cavalli Marini (seahorses), of 1791, at Villa Borghese. The somewhat decayed 16thcentury terraced gardens of the Villa d'Este, with their display of over 500 fountains, are still worth the journey.

OBELISKS

The most ancient and tallest of Rome's obelisks is the Obelisk of Piazza di San Giovanni in Laterano. Built of red granite, 100 ft (31 m) high, it came from the Temple of Amun at Thebes, erected in the 14th century BC. It was brought to Rome in AD 357 by the order of Constantine II and put up in the Circus Maximus. In 1587 it was rediscovered, broken into three pieces, and was re-erected in the following year. Next in age is the obelisk in Piazza del Popolo, from the 13th or 12th century BC. It was brought to Rome in the time of Augustus and also erected in the Circus Maximus. The slightly smaller Obelisk of Piaza Montecitorio was another of Augustus's trophies. The bronze ball and spike at the top recall its past use as a gnomon for a sundial of vast proportions.

> Other obelisks. such as the one at the top of the Spanish Steps, are Roman imitations of Egyptian originals The Obelisk of Piazza dell' Esquilino and the one in Piazza del Ouirinale (map 5 B4) first stood at the entrance to the Mausoleum of Augustus. When re-erected.

most obelisks were mounted on decorative bases, often with statues and fountains at their foot. Others became parts of sculptures. Bernini was the creator of the marble elephant balancing the Egyptian Obelisk of Santa Maria sopra Minerva on its back, and the Fontana dei Fiumi, with an obelisk from the Circus of Maxentius. Another obelisk was added to the remodeled Pantheon Fountain in 1711. The obelisk in Piazza San Pietro is Egyptian but does not have the usual hieroglyphics.

Artists and Writers Inspired by Rome

Artists and writers have been attracted to Rome since Classical times. Many came to work for the emperors; the poets Horace, Virgil, and Ovid, for example, all enjoyed the patronage of Emperor Augustus. Later on, especially in the Renaissance and Baroque periods, the greatest artists and architects came to Rome to compete for commissions from the popes. However, patronage was not the only magnet. Since the Renaissance, Rome's Classical past and its picturesque ruins have drawn artists, architects, and writers from all over Italy and abroad.

PAINTERS, SCULPTORS, AND ARCHITECTS

Diego Velázquez, one of many great 17th-century artists to visit Rome

In the early 16th century, artists and architects were summoned from all parts of Italy to realize the grandiose building projects of the popes. From Urbino came Bramante (1444-1514) and Raphael (1483-1520); from Perugia Perugino (1450-1523); from Florence, Michelangelo (1475-1564) and many others. They worked in the Vatican, on the new St. Peter's and the decoration of the Sistine Chapel. Artists were often well rewarded, but they also lived in dangerous times. Florentine sculptor and goldsmith Benvenuto Cellini (1500-71) helped defend Castel Sant'Angelo (see pp248-9) during the Sack of Rome (1527), but was later imprisoned there and made a dramatic escape. His memoirs tell the story.

Toward the end of the 16th century Church patronage was generous to the Milanese-born Caravaggio (1571–1610) despite his violent character and unruly life. The Carracci family from Bologna also flourished – especially brothers Annibale (1560–1609) and Agostino (1557–1602).

The work of Gian Lorenzo Bernini (1598–1680) can be seen all over Rome. He succeeded Carlo Maderno (1556-1629) as architect of St. Peter's, and created its great bronze baldacchino, the splendid colonnade (see pp230-31) and numerous fountains, churches, and sculptures. His rival for the title of leading architect of the Roman Baroque was Francesco Borromini (1599-1667). whose highly original genius can be appreciated in many Roman churches and palazzi.

In the 17th century it became more common for artists from outside Italy to come and work in Rome. Diego Velázquez (1599–1660), King Philip IV of Spain's court painter, came in 1628 to study the art treasures of the Vatican. Rubens (1577–1640) came from Antwerp to study, and carried out various commissions. The French artists Nicolas Poussin (1594–1665) and Claude Lorrain (1600–82) lived here for many vears.

The Classical revival of the 18th century attracted artists to Rome in unprecedented numbers. From Britain came the Scottish architect Robert Adam (1728-92) and the Swiss artist Angelica Kauffmann (1741-1807), who settled here and was buried with great honor in Sant'Andrea delle Fratte After the excesses of the Baroque, sculpture also turned to the simplicity of Neo-Classicism. A leading exponent of this movement was Antonio Canova (1757-1821). Sculptors from all over Europe were influenced by him, including the Dane Bertel Thorvaldsen (1770-1844) who lived in Rome for many years.

WRITERS

Dante (1262-1321) visited Rome during his exile from Florence and in the Inferno describes the great influx of pilgrims for the first Holv Year (1300). The poet Petrarch (1304–74), born in Arezzo, came to the city in much happier circumstances to be crowned with laurels on the Capitol in 1341. The poet Torquato Tasso (1544-95), from Sorrento, was invited to receive a similar honor but died soon after his arrival. He is buried in Sant'Onofrio (see p219) on the Janiculum.

Two of the first writers from abroad to visit Rome were the French essavist Montaigne (1533 - 92)and English poet John Milton (1608-74). Then, by the early 18th century, writers seemed to flock to Rome Edward Gibbon (1737-94) was inspired to write Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire when he heard the monks singing the Angelus outside Santa Maria in Aracoeli (see p69). German visitors included I. I. Winckelmann (1717–68).

ROMAN CINEMA

The Cinecittà studios, built in 1937 just outside Rome, are most famous for the movies made here in the 1940s - classics of Italian Neo-Realism such as Roberto Rossellini's Roma Città Aperta and Vittorio De Sica's Sciuscia and Ladri di Biciclette. The director most often linked with Roman cinema is Federico Fellini. through movies like La Dolce Vita (1960) and Roma (1972). However, perhaps the most famous artist associated with Rome is the controversial writer-turned-moviemaker Pier Paolo Pasolini (1922-75), widely known for his movies Teorema (1968) and Il Decamerone (1971). Since the 1950s, Rome and Cinecittà have also been much used for foreign movies: from Ben-Hur and Spartacus in the 1950s through Gladiator and Scorsese's Gangs of New York.

In the Romantic period Rome teemed with English writers: poets Keats. Shelley. and Byron, followed by the Brownings and the novelist Charles Dickens Travel writers in the 19th centurv included Augustus Hare (1834-1903) and the German historian Ferdinand Gregorovius (1821–91) Much of The Portrait of a Lady by American Henry James (1843-1916) is set in Rome.

MUSICIANS

Giovanni Luigi da Palestrina (1525–94), from the town of that name became choirmaster and organist to the Vatican and composed some of the greatest unaccompanied choral music ever written. In 1770 the 14-year-old Mozart heard Gregorio Allegri's unpublished Miserere in the Sistine Chapel and wrote it down from memory. Arcangelo

Corelli (1653-1713), the great violinist and composer of the Baroque age, worked in Rome under the patronage of Cardinal Ottoboni. One of his first commissions was to provide a festival of music for Queen Christina of Sweden.

During the 19th century the Prix de Rome brought many French musicians to study here at the Villa Medici (see *p*135). Hector Berlioz (1803– 69) owed the inspiration for his popular Roman Carnival, the overture to his opera

Giacomo Puccini

Benvenuto Cellini, to his twovear stav in Rome. Georges Bizet (1838-75) and Claude Debussy (1862-1918) were also Prix de Rome winners. Franz Liszt (1811-86), after his 50th year, settled in Rome, took minor orders and became known as Abbé Liszt. He wrote Fountains of the Villa d'Este while staving at the villa in Tivoli.

Twentieth-century musical associations with Rome include the popular works by Ottorino Respighi (1870-1936): The Fountains of Rome and The Pines of Rome, while Giacomo Puccini (1858-1924) used Roman settings when creating his dramatic, tragic opera Tosca.

SUMMER

In June a season of concerts begins, with performances in some of the city's most beautiful palaces, churches, and courtyards. In July and August opera and drama are staged at Ostia Antica (see pp270-71) and in various outdoor locations. During the summer there are also contemporary cultural events - movies, music of all kinds, dance, and theater. On midsummer evenings there are stalls and amusements on the Tiber embankments by Castel Sant'Angelo, while in the last two weeks of July Trastevere becomes an open-air party as the Noantri festival is celebrated with trinket stalls, dining in the street, and fireworks.

The sales (saldi) begin in mid-July, and the relatively new Alta Moda Fashion Show is usually held mid- to late July at the Spanish Steps.

Many Romans leave the city at the end of June, when schools close, but as June and July are peak tourist months, hotels, cafés, restaurants, and all the main places of interest and other attractions are packed out. In August,

FALL

September and October are the best – and among the most popular – months to visit Rome. The fiery heat of July and August will have cooled a little, but midday can be very hot, and you can still eat and drink outside without feeling chilly until late at night. Visiting Rome in November is not recommended: it is the wettest month of the year and Roman rainstorms are often very strong and heavy.

At the beginning of October an artisans' fair is held on Via dell'Orso and adjacent streets. while nearby the antiques galleries of Via dei Coronari hold open house. There are also October antiques fairs in Orvieto and Perugia, two of the loveliest Umbrian hill towns, which are about an hour's drive north of Rome. In November, there's vet another prestigious antiques fair at the papal palace of Viterbo, 40 m (65 km) north of Rome (see p271).

Fall is the season of harvest festivals, so head out to the small towns around Rome to sample delicacies such as local cheeses, sausages, chestnuts, and mushrooms.

Another reason for taking a trip out of Rome is the wine festival in Marino, in the Castelli Romani, south of the city. There are many opportunities to sample the wines of this region that was once the home to luxurious 16th- and 17th-century country residences but now is renowned particularly for its white wines. Romans make pilgrimages to place chrysanthemums on the tombs of relatives who are buried in the two main cemeteries of Prima Porta and Verano. On a much happier note, the classical concert and opera seasons begin again in October and November.

Temperature Chart

The chart shows the average minimum and maximum monthly temperatures. July and August can be unbearably bot, making sightseeing a chore. The fresher days of spring and fall are ideal to visit Rome, but there are some dull and rainy shells.

WINTER

During the winter Rome is bracingly chilly but the temperature rarely drops below freezing. Not all buildings are centrally heated so if you are staying in a small hotel bring warm clothes and request extra blankets as soon as you arrive, as they can be in short supply. Warm up in cafés with hot chocolate and cappuccino.

The run-up to Christmas is great fun in Rome, especially if you have children. Manger scenes, presepi, are set up in many churches, piazzas, and public places and from mid-December to Twelfth Night

Market on Piazza Navona

Piazza Navona hosts a market where you can buy manger scenes, decorations, and toys. Unless you have friends in Rome, Christmas itself can be rather lonely, as it is very much a family event. On New Year's Eve, however, everyone is out on the street to drink sparkling wine and let off fireworks.

The temple of Jupiter on the Capitol, the southern summit of the Capitoline hill, was the center of the Roman world. Reached by a zig-zag path up from the Forum, the temple was the scene of all the most sacred religious and political ceremonies. The hill and its temple came to symbolize Rome's authority as caput mundi. head of the world, and the Capitol gave its name to the seat of the US Congress. When Emperor Charles V visited Rome in 1536, Pope Paul III Farnese was so embarrassed by the muddy state of the Capitol that he asked Michelangelo to draw up plans for repaving the piazza, and for renovating the facades of the Palazzo dei Conservatori and Palazzo Senatorio.

Michelangelo proposed adding the Palazzo Nuovo to form a piazza in the shape of a trapezium, embellished with Classical sculptures chosen for their relevance to Rome. Building started in 1546 but progressed so slowly that Michelangelo only lived to oversee the double flight of steps at the entrance of Palazzo Senatorio. The piazza was completed in the 17th century, the design remaining largely faithful to the original. Pilasters two stories high and balustrades interspersed with statues link the buildings thematically. The piazza faces west toward St. Peter's, the Christian equivalent of the Capitol. At its center stands a replica of a statue of Marcus Aurelius. The original is in the Palazzo dei Conservatori (see pp72–3).

The top of the ramp is guarded by restored Classical statues of the Dioscuri – Castor and Pollux.

Two thousand years ago the urban poor of Rome used to make their homes in insulae – apartment blocks. These were often badly maintained by landlords, and expensive to rent in a city where land costs were high. This 2nd-century AD tenement block, of barrel-vault construction, is the only survivor in Rome from that era. The fourth, fifth, and part of the sixth story remain above current ground level.

In the Middle Ages, a section of these upper stories was converted into a church; its bell tower and 14thcentury Madonna in a niche are visible from the street.

During the Fascist years, the area was cleared, and three lower floors emerged. Some 380 people may have lived in the tenement, in the squalid conditions described by the 1st-century AD satirical writers Martial and Juvenal. The latter mentions that he had to climb 200 steps to reach his garret.

This insula may once have had more stories. The higher you lived, the more dismal the conditions, as the poky spaces of the building's upper levels testify.

Aracoeli Staircase 6

Piazza d'Aracoeli. Map 5 A5 & 12 F4. Es See Getting There p65.

The Aracoeli Staircase numbers 124 marble steps (122 if you start from the right) and was completed in 1348, some say in thanks for the passing of the Black Death, but probably in view of the 1350 Holy Year.

The 14th-century tribuneturned-tyrant Cola di Rienzo used to harangue the masses from the Aracoeli Staircase; in the 17th century foreigners used to sleep on the steps, until Prince Caffarelli, who lived on the hill, scared them off by rolling barrels filled with stones down them.

Popular belief has it that by climbing the steps on your knees you can win the Italian national lottery. From the top there is a good view of Rome, with the domes of Sant' Andrea della Valle and St. Peter's slightly to the right.

Dating from at least the 6th century, the church of Santa Maria in Aracoeli, or St. Mary of the Altar in the Sky, stands on the northern summit of the Capitoline, on the site of the ancient temple to Juno. Its 22 columns were taken from various ancient buildings; the inscription on the third column to the left tells us that it comes "a cubiculo Augustorum" – from the bedroom of the emperors.

The church of the Roman senators and people, Santa Maria in Aracoeli has been used to celebrate many triumphs over adversity. Its ceiling, with naval motifs, commemorates the Battle of Lepanto (1571), and was built under Pope Gregory XIII Boncompagni, whose family crest, the dragon, can be seen toward the altar end.

Many other Roman families and individuals are honored by memorials in the church. To the right of the entrance door, the tombstone of archdeacon Giovanni Crivelli, rather than being set into the floor of the church, stands eternally to attention, partly so that the signature "Donatelli" (by Donatello) can be read at eve-level.

The frescoes in the first chapel on the right, painted by Pinturicchio in the 1480s in the beautifully clear style of the early Renaissance, depict St. Bernardino of Siena. On the left wall, the perspective of The Burial of the Saint slants to the right, taking into account the position of the viewer just outside the chapel. The church is most famous, however, for an icon with apparently miraculous powers, the Santo Bambino, a 15th-century olive-wood figure of the Christ Child which was carved out of a tree from the garden of Gethsemane. Its powers are said to include resurrecting the dead, and it is sometimes summoned to the bedsides of the gravely ill. The original figure was stolen in 1994 but has been replaced by a replica.

At Christmas the Christ Child takes its place in the center of a picturesque crib (second chapel to the left) but is usually to be found in the sacristy, as is the panel of the Holy Family from the workshop of Giulio Romano.

Capitoline Museums: Palazzo Nuovo

A collection of Classical statues has been kept on the Capitoline hill since the Renaissance. The first group of bronze sculptures was given to the city by Pope Sixtus IV in 1471 and more additions were made by Pope Pius V in 1566. The Palazzo Nuovo was designed by Michelangelo as part of the renovation of the Piazza del Campidoglio, and after its completion in 1655, a number of the statues were transferred here. In 1734 Pope Clement XII Corsini decreed that the building be turned into the world's first public museum.

★ Capitoline Venus

This marble statue of Venus, dating from around AD100–150, is a Roman copy of the original carved in the 4th century BC by the Greek sculptor Praxiteles. The statue is prized for its striking beauty.

MUSEUM GUIDE

The Palazzo Nuovo is devoted chiefly to sculpture, and most of its finest works, such as the Čapitoline Venus, are Roman copies of Greek masterworks. For visitors keen to identify the philosophers and poets of ancient Greece and the rulers of ancient Rome, there are collections of busts assembled in the 18th century. Admission price also includes entry to the Palazzo dei Conservatori opposite. A gallery below Piazza del Campidoglio links the two buildings.

The temple of Jupiter, the most important in ancient Rome, was founded in honor of the arch-god around 509 BC on the southern summit of the Capitoline hill. From the few traces that remain, archaeologists have been able to reconstruct the rectangular. Greek appearance of the temple as it once stood. In places vou can see remnants of its particularly Roman feature, the podium. Most of this lies beneath the Museo Nuovo wing of the Palazzo dei Conservatori (see pp 72-3).

By walking around the site, from the podium's southwestern corner in Via del Tempio di Giove to its southeastern corner in Piazzale Caffarelli, vou can see that the temple was about the same size as the Pantheon.

The southern tip of the Capitoline is called the Tarpeian Rock (Rupe Tarpea), after Tarpeia, the young daughter of Spurius Tarpeius, defender of the Capitol in the 8thcentury BC Sabine War.

The Sabines, bent on vengeance for the rape of their women by Romulus and Victor Emmanuel Monument in Piazza Venezia his men, bribed Tarpeia to let them up on to the Capitol. As the Augustan historian Livy records, the Sabines used to wear heavy gold bracelets and jeweled rings on their left hands, and Tarpeia's reward for her treachery was to be "what they wore on their shield-arms.

The Sabines kept to the letter of the bargain if not to its spirit - they repaid Tarpeia not with their jewelry but by crushing her to death between their shields. Tarpeia was possibly the only casualty of her act of treachery - as the invading warriors met the Roman defenders, the Sabine women leapt between the two opposing armies, forcing a reconciliation. Traitors and other condemned criminals were subsequently executed by being thrown over the sheer face of the rock.

The place has been considered dangerous and used to be fenced off, but restoration work is now under way.

The arched windows and doors of this Renaissance civic building are so harmonious that the facade was once attributed to the great Humanist architect Leon Battista Alberti (1404–72). It was more probably built by

Pope Paul II

Giuliano da Maiano, who is known to have carved the fine doorway on to the piazza.

Palazzo Venezia was built in 1455–64 for the Venetian cardinal Pietro Barbo, who later became Pope Paul II. It was at times a papal residence, but it also served as the Venetian Embassy to Rome before passing into French hands in 1797. Since 1916 it has belonged to the state; in the Fascist era Mussolini used it as his headquarters and addressed crowds from the central balcony.

The interior is best seen by visiting the Museo del Palazzo Venezia. Rome's most underrated museum. It holds first-class collections of early Renaissance painting; painted wood sculptures and Renaissance chests from Italy; tapestries from all of Europe; majolica; silver; Neapolitan ceramic figurines; Renaissance bronzes; arms and armor; Baroque terra-cotta sculptures by Bernini, Algardi, and others: and 17th- and 18thcentury Italian painting. There is a marble screen from the Aracoeli convent, destroved to make way for the Victor Emmanuel Monument, and a bust of Paul II, showing him to rank with Martin V and Leo X among the heaviest-ever popes. From there you can make out the Via Sacra (the Sacred Way), the route followed through the Forum by religious and triumphal processions toward the Capitol. Up until the 18th century when archaeological excavations began, the Arch of Septimius Severus and the columns of the Temple of Saturn lay half-buried underground. Excavation of the Forum continues, and the ruins uncovered date from many different periods of Roman history.

Basilica Aemilia 1

See Visitors' Checklist.

Originally this building was a rectangular colonnaded hall, with a multicolored marble floor and a bronze-tiled roof. It was built by the consuls Marcus Aemilius Lepidus and Marcus Fulvius Nobilor in 179 BC. The two consuls, who were elected annually, exercised supreme power over the Republic.

Basilicas in ancient Rome served no religious purpose; they were meeting halls for politicians, moneylenders, and publicani (businessmen contracted by the state to collect taxes). A consortium agreed to hand over a specified sum to the state, but its members were allowed to collect as much as they could and keep the difference. This is why tax-collectors in the Bible were so loathed.

The basilica was rebuilt many times; it was finally burned down when the Visigoths sacked Rome in AD 410. Business seems to have carried on until the last moment, for the pavement is splashed with tiny lumps of coins that melted in the fire.

Curia 🛛

See Visitors' Checklist.

A modern restoration now stands over the ruins of the hall where Rome's Senate (chief council of state) used to meet. The first Curia stood on the site now occupied by the church of Santi

Luca e Martina, but after the building was destroyed by fire in 52 BC, Julius Caesar built a new Curia at the edge of the Forum. This was restored by Domitian in AD 94 and, after another fire, rebuilt by Diocletian in the ard century. The building you see today is a 1937 restoration of Diocletian's Curia. Inside are two relief panels commissioned by Trajan to decorate the Rostra. One shows Trajan destroying records of unpaid taxes to free citizens from debt; in the other he sits on a throne receiving a mother and child.

Speeches were delivered from this dais, the most famous – thanks to Shakespeare – being Mark Antony's "Friends, Romans, Countrymen" oration after the assassination of Julius Caesar in 44 BC. Caesar himself had just reorganized the Forum and this speech was made from the newly

The dais took its name from the ships' prows (rostra) with which it was decorated. Sheathed in iron (for ramming enemy vessels), these came from ships captured at the Battle of Antium in 338 BC.

This triumphal arch, one of the most striking and best preserved monuments of the Forum was erected in AD 203 to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the accession of Septimius Severus. During the Middle Ages the central arch half buried in earth and debris was used to shelter a barber's shop.

Temple of Saturn 5

See Visitors' Checklist.

The most prominent of the ruins in the fenced-off area between the Forum and the Capitoline hill is the temple of Saturn. It consists of a high platform, eight columns and a section of entablature. There was a temple dedicated to

Ionic capitals on the surviving columns of the temple of Saturn

Saturn here as early as 497 BC. but it had to be rebuilt many times and the current remains date only from 42 BC

Saturn was the mythical god-king of Italy, said to have presided over a prosperous and peaceful Golden Age from which slavery, private property, crime, and war were absent. As such, he appealed particularly to the lower and slave classes. Every year. between December 17 and December 23. Saturn's reign was remembered in a week of sacrifices and feasting known as the Saturnalia.

As long as the revels lasted. the normal social order was turned upside down. Slaves were permitted to drink and dine with (and sometimes even be served by) their masters. Senators and other highranking Romans would abandon the aristocratic togas that they usually wore to distinguish themselves from the lower classes and wear more democratic, loose-fitting gowns. During the holidays, all the courts of law and schools in the city were closed. No prisoner could be punished, and no war could be declared.

People also celebrated the Saturnalia in their own homes: they exchanged gifts, in particular special wax dolls and wax tapers, and played light-hearted gambling games. the stakes usually being nuts, a symbol of fruitfulness. Much of the spirit and many of the rituals of the festival have been preserved in the Christian celebration of Christmas.

This column, 44 ft (13.5 m) high is one of the few to have remained upright since the day it was put up. Until 1816, when an inquisitive Englishwoman, Lady Elizabeth Foster, widow of the fifth duke of Devonshire, decided to excavate its pedestal. nobody knew what it was. It turned out to be the youngest of the Forum's monuments erected in AD 608 in honor of the Byzantine emperor. Phocas, who had just paid a visit to Rome. The column may have been placed here as a mark of gratitude to Phocas for giving the Pantheon to the Pope (see pp110-11).

The four courts were. however divided only by screens or curtains and the voices of lawyers and cheers and boos of spectators in the upper galleries echoed through the building. Lawyers used to hire crowds of spectators, who would applaud every time the lawyer who was paying them made a point and jeer at his opponents. # Temple of Castor and Pollux 0

See Visitors' Checklist, p82.

The three slender fluted columns of this temple form one of the Forum's most beautiful ruins. The first temple here was probably dedicated in 484 BC in honor of the mythical twins and patrons of horsemanship, Castor and Pollux. During the battle of Lake Regillus (499 BC) against the ousted Tarquin kings, the Roman dictator Postumius promised to build a temple to the twins if the Romans were victorious. Some said the twins appeared on the battlefield. helped the Romans to victory, and then materialized in the Forum - the temple marks the spot – to announce the news.

The temple, like most buildings in the Forum was rebuilt many times. The three surviving columns date from the last occasion on which it was rebuilt - by the future Emperor Tiberius after a fire in AD 6. For a long period the temple housed the city's office of weights and measures, and it was also used at times by a number of bankers

Temple of Vesta 9

See Visitors' Checklist, p82.

The Forum's most elegant temple, a circular building originally surrounded by a ring of 20 fine fluted columns, dates from the 4th century AD, though there had been a temple on the site for far longer. It was partially reconstructed in 1930.

The cult of the Vestals was one of the oldest in Rome and centered on six Vestal Virgins, who were required to keep alight the sacred flame of Vesta, the goddess of the hearth. This responsibility was originally entrusted to the daughters of the king but it then passed to the Vestals, the only group of women priests in Rome. It was no easy task as the flame was easily blown out Any Vestal who allowed the flame to die was whipped by the high priest (Pontifex Maximus) and dismissed.

The girls, who had to belong to noble families, were selected when they were between 6 and 10 years old. They served for 30 years: the first ten were spent learning their duties, the next ten performing them and the final ten teaching novices. They enjoyed high status and financial security, but had to remain virgins. The penalty for transgressing was to be buried alive, although only ten Vestals are recorded as ever having suffered this fate. The men concerned were whipped to death. When Vestals retired, they were free to live the rest of their lives as ordinary citizens. If they wished they could marry, but few ever did.

Another of the Vestals' duties was to guard the Palladium, a sacred statue of the goddess Pallas Athenae. The irreverent Emperor Heliogabalus burgled the temple in Honorary the 3rd century AD. He statue of a Vestal Virgin thought he had succeeded in stealing the Palladium, but the Vestals had been warned of his intention and had

House of the Vestal Virgins 🛛

See Visitors' Checklist. p82.

As soon as a girl became a Vestal she came to live in the House of the Vestal Virgins.

Originally this was an enormous complex with about 50 rooms on three stories. The only substantial remains today are some of the rooms around the central courtvard. This space is perhaps the most evocative part of the Forum. Overlooking ponds of water lilies and plump goldfish is a row of eroded, and mostly headless, statues of senior Vestals, dating from the 3rd and 4th centuries AD. The betterpreserved examples were transferred to the Museo Nazionale Romano (see p163). On one of the pedestals the inscription has been removed because the Vestal in question suffered some disgrace. It is thought she may have been a certain Claudia, known to have betraved the cult by converting to Christianity.

Though many of the rooms surrounding the courtvard are well preserved - some even retain flights of steps leading to an upper floor - you are not allowed inside them. If you peep into the series of rooms along the south side, however, you might be able to see the remains of a mill, used for grinding the grain with which the Vestals made a special sacrificial cake. The bakerv was next door.

Temple of Antoninus and Faustina 0

See Visitors' Checklist, p82.

One of the Forum's oddest sights is the Baroque facade of the church of San Lorenzo in Miranda rising above the porch of a Roman temple. First dedicated in AD 141 by the Emperor Antoninus Pius to his late wife Faustina, the temple was rededicated to them both on the death of the emperor. In the 11th century it was converted into a church because it was believed that San Lorenzo (St. Lawrence) had been condemned to death there. The current church dates from 1601.

Trajan's Markets 🛛

Originally considered among the wonders of the Classical world. Trajan's Markets now show only a hint of their former splendor. Emperor Trajan and his architect. Apollodorus of Damascus, built this visionary new complex of 150 shops and offices (probably used for administering the corn dole) in the early 2nd century AD. Detail of Trajan's Column

This elegant marble column was inaugurated by Trajan in AD 113, and celebrates his two campaigns in Dacia (Romania) in AD 101-3 and AD 107-8. The column, base and pedestal are 131 ft (40 m) tall - precisely the same height as the spur of the Ouirinal hill which was excavated to make room for Trajan's Forum. Spiraling up the column are minutely detailed scenes from the campaigns, beginning with the Romans preparing for war and ending with the Dacians being ousted from their homeland. The column is pierced with small windows to illuminate its internal spiral staircase (closed to the public). If you wish to see the reliefs in detail there is a complete set of casts in the Museo della Civiltà Romana at EUR (see p266).

When Trajan died in AD 117 his ashes, along with those of his wife Plotina, were placed in a golden urn in the column's hollow base. The column's survival was largely thanks to the intervention of Pope Gregory the Great (reigned 590–604). He was so moved by a relief showing Trajan helping a woman whose son had been killed that he begged God to release the emperor's soul from hell. God duly appeared to the Pope to say that Trajan had been rescued, but asked him not to pray for the souls of any more pagans.

According to legend, when Trajan's ashes were exhumed his skull and tongue were not only intact, but his tongue told of his release from hell. The land around the column was then declared sacred and the column itself was spared. The statue of Trajan remained on top of the column until 1587, when it was replaced with one of St. Peter.

The Forum of Augustus was built to celebrate Augustus's victory over Julius Caesar's assassins. Brutus and Cassius. at the Battle of Philippi in 41 BC. The temple in its center was dedicated to Mars the Avenger. The forum stretched from a high wall at the foot of the sleazy Suburra quarter to the edge of the Forum of Caesar At least half of it is now concealed below Mussolini's Via dei Fori Imperiali. The temple is easily identified with its cracked steps and four Corinthian columns. Originally it had a statue of Mars which looked verv like Augustus. The first of Rome's Imperial fora was built by Julius Caesar. He spent a fortune – most of it booty from his conquest of Gaul – buying up and demolishing houses on the site. Pride of place went to a temple dedicated in 46 BC to the goddess Venus Genetrix, from whom Caesar claimed descent. The temple contained statues of Caesar and Cleopatra as well as of Venus. All that remains of this temple to vanity is a platform and three Corinthian columns. The forum was enclosed by a double colonnade which sheltered a row of shops, but this burned down in AD 80 and was rebuilt by Domitian and Trajan. Below the 16th-century church of San Giuseppe dei Falegnami (St. Joseph of the Carpenters) is a dank dungeon in which, according to Christian legend, St. Peter was imprisoned. He is said to have caused a spring to bubble up into the cell, and used the water to baptize his guards.

The prison, also known as Tullianum, was in an old cistern with access to the city's main sewer (the Cloaca Maxima). The lower cell was used for executions and bodies were thrown into the sewer. Among the enemies of Rome to be executed here was the Gaulish leader Vercingetorix, defeated by Julius Caesar in 52 BC.

The Forum of Nerva was begun by his predecessor,

Domitian, and completed in AD 97. Little more than a long corridor with a colonnade along the sides and a temple of Minerva at one end, it was also known as the Forum Transitorium because it lay between the Forum of Peace built by the Emperor Vespasian in AD 70 and the Forum of Augustus. Vespasian's forum is almost completely covered by Via dei Fori Imperiali, as is much of the Forum of Nerva itself. Excavations have unearthed Renaissance shops and taverns, but only part of the forum can be seen, including the base of the temple and two columns that were part of the original colonnade. # How Fights were Staged in the Arena

The emperors held shows here which often began with animals performing circus tricks. Then on came the gladiators. who fought each other to the death. When one was killed attendants dressed as Charon, the mythical ferryman of the dead, carried his body off on a stretcher, and sand was raked over the blood ready for the next bout. A badly wounded gladiator would surrender his fate to the crowd. The "thumbs up" sign from the emperor meant he could live. "thumbs down" that he die and the victor became an instant hero. Animals were brought here from as far away as North Africa and the Middle East. #### SEA BATTLES IN THE ARENA

The historian Dion Cassius, writing in the 4th century AD, relates how, 150 years earlier, the Colosseum's arena was flooded to stage a mock sea battle. Scholars now believe that he was mistaken. The spectacle probably took place in the Naumachia of Augustus, a water-filled arena situated across the Tiber in Trastevere.

Marble pavement in the courtyard of the Domus Flavia

In AD 81 Domitian, the third of the Flavian dynasty of emperors, decided to build a splendid new palace on the Palatine hill. But the western peak, the Germalus, was covered with houses and temples, while the eastern peak, the Palatium, was very steep. So the emperor's architect, Rabirius, flattened the Palatium and used the soil to fill in the cleft between the two peaks, burying (and preserving) a number of Republican-era houses.

The palace had two wings – one official (the Domus Flavia), the other private (the Domus Augustana). It was the main Imperial palace for 300 years. At the front of the Domus Flavia, the surviving stubs of columns and fragments of walls trace the shapes of three adjoining rooms. In the first of these, the Basilica, Domitian dispensed his personal brand of justice. The central Aula Regia was a throne room decorated with 12 black basalt statues. The third room (now covered with corrugated plastic) was the Lararium, a shrine for the household gods known as Lares (usually the owner's ancestors). It may have been used for official ceremonies or by the palace guards.

Fearing assassination, Domitian had the walls of the courtyard covered with shiny marble slabs designed to act as mirrors so that he could see anyone lurking behind him. In the event, he was assassinated in his bedroom, possibly on the orders of his wife, Domitia. The courtyard is now a pleasant place to pause; the flower beds in the center follow the maze pattern of a sunken fountain pool.

Cryptoporticus 2

See Visitors' Checklist.

The Cryptoporticus, a series of underground corridors, was built by Nero to connect his Domus Aurea (see p175) with the palaces of earlier emperors on the Palatine. A further branch leading to the Palace of Domitian was added later. Its vaults are decorated with delicate stucco reliefs – copies of originals now kept in the Palatine's museum.

Domus Augustana 3

See Visitors' Checklist.

This part of Domitian's palace was called the Domus Augustana because it was the private residence of the "august" emperors. On the upper level a high brick wall remains, and you can make out the shape of its two courtyards. The far better-preserved lower level is closed to the public, though you can look down on its sunken courtyard with the geometric foundations of a fountain in its center. Sadly, you can't see the stairs linking the two levels (once lit by sunlight falling on a mirror-paved pool), nor the surrounding rooms, naved with colored marble

Stadium 🛛

Stadium viewed from the south

The Stadium on the Palatine was laid out at the same time as the palace of Domitian. It is not clear whether it was a public stadium, a private track for exercising horses, or simply a large garden. The alcove in the eastern wall looks as though it may have held a box from which the emperor could have watched races. It is, however, known that the Stadium was used for foot races by the Ostrogothic king, Theodoric, in the 6th century he added the small ovalshaped enclosure at the southern end of the site.

Fresco in the House of Livia

This house dating from the 1st century BC is one of the best preserved on the Palatine. It was probably part of the house in which the Emperor Augustus and his wife Livia lived. Compared with later Imperial palaces, it is a relatively modest home. According to Suetonius, the biographer of Rome's early emperors, Augustus slept in the same small bedroom for 40 years on a low bed which had "a very ordinary coverlet."

A flight of steps leads down to a mosaic-paved corridor into a courtyard. Its timitation-marble wall frescoes have been detached in order to preserve them, but they still hang in situ. They are faded, but you can still make out the veining patterns. Off the courtyard are three small reception rooms. The frescoes in the central one include a faded scene of Hermes coming to the rescue of Zeus's beloved Io, who is guarded by the 100-eyed Argos. In the left-hand room are frescoed griffins and other beasts, while the decor in the right-hand room includes landscapes and cityscapes.

In the nearby House of Augustus are four excavated rooms (entrance hall, dining room, bedroom, and study) of what is believed to have been Augustus' original home before becoming emperor. Dating from c. 30 BC, they are brilliantly frescoed with geometric designs and trompe l'oeil effects. Only five visitors at a time are allowed.

Temple of Cybele 6

Other than a platform with a few column stumps and capitals, there is little to see of the Temple of Cybele, a popular fertility goddess imported to Rome from Asia. The priests of the cult castrated themselves in the belief that if they sacrificed their own fertility it would guarantee that of the natural world. The annual festival of Cybele, in early spring. culminated with frenzied eunuch-priests slashing their bodies to offer up their blood to the goddess, and the ceremonial castration of novice priests.

According to legend, after killing his brother Remus, Romulus founded a village on the Palatine. In the 1940s a series of holes was found filled with earth lighter in color than the surrounding soil. Archaeologists deduced that these holes must originally have held the supporting poles of three Iron Age huts – the first foundations of Rome (see ph18–19).

Farnese Gardens

See Visitors' Checklist.

In the mid-16th century Cardinal Alessandro Farnese. grandson of Pope Paul III, bought the ruins of Tiberius's palace on the Palatine. He filled in the ruined building and had Vignola, architect of the interior of the Gesù church, design a garden for him. The result was one of the first botanical gardens in Europe, its terraces linked by steps stretching from the House of Vestal Virgins in the Forum to the Palatine's Germalus peak. The gardeners introduced a number of plants to Italy and Europe, among them Acacia farnesiana. Farnese was at the center of a glittering set which included a number of courtesans so the parties here are likely to have been somewhat unholy.

The area was dug up during the excavation of the Palatine and re-landscaped afterward. Nevertheless the tree-lined avenues, rose gardens, and glorious views still make it an ideal place to unwind.

Temple of Hadrian ①

This temple honors the emperor Hadrian as a god and was dedicated by his son and successor Antoninus Pius in AD 145. The remains of the temple are visible on the southern side of Piazza di Pietra, incorporated in a 17thcentury building. This was originally a papal customs house, completed by Carlo Fontana and his son in the 1690s. Today the building houses the Roman stock exchange (La Borsa).

Eleven marble Corinthian columns 49 ft (15 m) high stand on a base of peperino, a volcanic rock quarried from the Alban hills to the south of Rome. The columns decorated the northern flank of the temple enclosing its inner shrine, the cella is still visible behind the columns, as is part of the coffered portico ceiling.

A number of reliefs from the temple, representing conquered Roman provinces, are now in the courtyard of the Palazzo dei Conservatori (see pp72–3). They reflect the mostly peaceful foreign policy of Hadrian's reign.

The theatrical setting, the curvilinear design, and the playful forms of its windows, balconies, and balusters mark the piazza as one of a highly distinct group of structures. Along with Palazzo Doria Pamphilj (1731), the facade of La Maddalena (1735), and the aristocratic Spanish Steps (1723), it belongs to the moment when Rome's bubbly Roccco triumphed over conservative Classicism.

Together with the Gesù (see pp114–15), Sant'Ignazio forms the center of the Jesuit area in Rome. Built in Baroque style, its vast interior, lined with precious stones, marble, stucco, and gilt, creates a sense of theater. The church has a Latin-cross plan, with an apse and many side chapels.

A cupola was planned but never built, so the space it would have filled was covered by a fake perspective painting. The piers built to uphold the cupola support the observatory of the Collegio Romano.

Palazzo Doria Pamphilj is a great island of stone in the heart of Rome, the oldest parts dating from 1435. Through the Corso entrance you can see the 16th-century porticoed courtyard with the coat of arms of the della Rovere family. The Aldobrandini were the next owners. Between 1601 and 1647 the mansion acquired a second courtyard and flanking wings at the expense of a public bath that stood nearby.

When the Pamphilj family took over, they completed the Piazza del Collegio Romano facade and the Via della Gatta wing, a splendid chapel and a theater inaugurated by Queen Christina of Sweden in 1684. In the first half of the 1700s which now dominates the building. The stairways and salons, the Mirror Gallery and the picture gallery all radiate a sense of light and space.

In the first half of t Gabriele Valvassori created the gallery above the courtyard and a new facade along the Corso, using the highly decorative style of the period known as the barocchetto

The family collection in the Doria Pamphilj gallery has over 400 paintings from the 15th to the 18th centuries, including the famous portrait of Pope Innocent X Pamphili by Velázquez. There are also works by Titian. Caravaggio. Lorenzo Lotto, and Guercino. It was popularly believed in the Middle Ages that half the population of ancient Rome was made up of bronze and marble statues. Fragments of these giants, usually gods or emperors, are scattered over the city. Few other churches display such a complete and impressive record of Italian art. Dating from the 13th century, the Minerva is one of the few examples of Gothic architecture in Rome. It was the traditional stronghold of the Dominicans, whose antiheretical zeal earned them the nickname of Domini Canes (the hounds of the Lord).

Built on ancient ruins, supposed to have been the temple of Minerva, the simple T-shaped vaulted building acquired rich chapels and works of art by which its many patrons wished to be remembered. Note the Cosmatesque 13th-century tombs and the exquisite works of 15th-century Tuscan and Venetian artists. Local talent of the period can be admired in Antoniazzo Romano's Annunciation. featuring Cardinal Juan de Torquemada, uncle of the infamous Spanish Inquisitor.

The more monumental style of the Roman Renaissance is well represented in the tombs of the 16th-century Medici popes. Leo X and his cousin Clement VII, and in the richly decorated Aldobrandini Chapel. Near the steps of the choir is the celebrated sculpture of the Risen Christ. started by Michelangelo but completed by Raffaele da Montelupo in 1521. There are also splendid works of art from the Baroque period, including a tomb and a bust by Bernini.

The church is also visited because it contains the tombs of many famous Italians: St. Catherine of Siena who died here in 1380. the Venetian sculptor Andrea Bregno (died 1506): the Humanist Cardinal Pietro Bembo (died 1547): and Fra Angelico, the Dominican Bernini's Egyptian friar and painter, who died in Rome in 1455.

Situated in a small piazza near the Pantheon, the Maddalena's Roccoco facade, built in 1735, epitomizes the love of light and movement of the late Baroque. Its curves are reminiscent of Borromini's San Carlo alle Quattro Fontane (see p161). The facade has been lovingly restored, although diehard Neo-Classicists dismiss its painted stucco as icing sugar.

The small size of the Maddalena did not deter the 17th- and 18th-century decorators who filled the interior with ornaments from the floor to the top of the elegant cupola. The organ loft and choir are particularly powerful examples of the Baroque's desire to fire the imagination of the faithful.

Many of the paintings and sculptures adopt the Christian imagery of the Counter-Reformation. In the niches of the nave, the statues are personifications of virtues such as Humility and Simplicity. There are also scenes from the life of San Camillo who died in the adjacent convent in 1614. The church belonged to his followers, the Camillians, a preaching order active in Rome's hospitals. Like the Jesuits, they commissioned powerful works of art to convey the force of their religious message.

Founded in 1900, the Caffè Giolitti is the heir to the Belle Époque cafés that lined the nearby Via del Corso in Rome's first days as capital of the new Italian state. Its salone holds tourists in summer and Roman families on weekends, and on weekdays is frequented by local workers from a wide range of industries. Its ice creams are especially good.

Melchiorre Baldassini commissioned Antonio da Sangallo the Younger to build his home in Florentine Renaissance style in 1514-20. With its cornices marking the different floors and wroughtiron window grilles, this is one of the best examples of an early 16th-century Roman palazzo. It stands in the part of Rome still known as the Renaissance Quarter, which flourished around the long straight streets such as Via di Ripetta and Via della Scrofa built at the time of Pope Leo X (reigned 1513-21).

Pantheon

In the Middle Ages the Pantheon, the Roman temple of "all the gods," became a church; in time this magnificent building with its awe-inspiring domed interior became a symbol of Rome itself. The rectangular portico screens the vast hemispherical dome: only from inside can its true scale and beauty be appreciated. The rotunda's height and diameter are equal: 142 ft (43.3 m). The hole at the top of the dome, the oculus, provides the only light. We owe this marvel of Roman engineering to the emperor Hadrian, who designed it (AD 118–125) to replace an earlier temple built by Marcus Agrippa, son-in-law of Augustus. The shrines that now line the wall of the Pantheon range from the tomb of Raphael to those of the kings of modern Italy.

★ Interior of the Dome The dome was cast by pouring concrete mixed with tufa and pumice over a temporary wooden framework.

The palazzo was acquired in about 1605 by Cardinal Camillo Borghese, just before he became Pope Paul V. Flaminio Ponzio was hired to enlarge the building and give it the grandeur appropriate to the residence of the Pope's family. He added a wing overlooking Piazza Borghese and the delightful porticoed courtvard inside. Subsequent enlargements included the building and decoration of a great nymphaeum known as the Bath of Venus. For more than two centuries this palazzo housed the Borghese family's renowned collection of paintings, which was bought by the Italian state in 1902 and transferred to the Galleria Borghese (see pp260–61).

The church is one of Rome's oldest Christian places of worship, and was probably built on a well sacred to Juno, protectress of women. It was rebuilt during the 12th century, and today's external appearance is quite typical of the period featuring a portico with reused Roman columns crowned by medieval capitals, a plain triangular pediment and a Romanesque bell tower with coloured marble inlay.

The interior was totally rebuilt in 1856–8. The old basilical plan was destroyed and the two side naves were replaced by Baroque chapels. Do not miss the fine busts in the Fonseca Chapel, designed by Bernini, or the Crucifixion by Guido Reni above the main altar. There is also a 19thcentury monument honoring French painter Nicolas Poussin, who died in Rome in 1655 and was buried in the church.

The measurement of time in ancient Rome was always a rather hit-and-miss affair. for many years the Romans relied on an imported (and therefore inaccurate) sundial, a trophy from the conquest of Sicily. In 10 BC the Emperor Augustus laid out an enormous sundial in the Campus Martius. Its center was roughly in today's Piazza di San Lorenzo in Lucina. The shadow was cast by a huge granite obelisk that he had brought back from Heliopolis in Egypt. Unfortunately this sundial too became inaccurate after only 50 years, possibly due to subsidence.

The obelisk was still in the piazza in the 9th century, but then disappeared until it was rediscovered lying under medieval houses in the reign of Pope Julius II (1503-13). The Pope was intrigued, because Egyptian hieroglyphs were thought to hold the key to the wisdom of Adam before the Fall, but it was only under Pope Benedict XIV (reigned 1740-58) that the obelisk was finally unearthed. It was erected in its present location in 1792 by Pope Pius VI.

Column of Marcus Aurelius **@

Piazza Colonna. Map 5 A3 & 12 E2. 116 and routes along Via del Corso or to Piazza S. Silvestro.

Clearly an imitation of the Column of Trajan (see p90). this monument was erected after the death of Marcus Aurelius in AD 180 to commemorate his victories over the barbarian tribes of the Danube The 80-year lapse between the two works produced a great artistic change: the wars of Marcus Aurelius are rendered with simplified pictures in stronger relief, sacrificing Classical proportions for the sake of clarity and immediacv. The spirit of the work is more akin to the 4th-century Arch of Constantine (see p91) than to Traian's monument Gone are the heroic qualities of the Roman soldiers, by now mostly barbarian mercenaries, and a sense of respect for the vanguished. A new emphasis on the supernatural points to the end of the Hellenistic tradition and the beginning of Christianity.

Composed of 28 drums of marble, the column was restored in 1588 by Domenico Fontana on the orders of Pope Sixtus V. The emperor's statue on the summit was replaced by a bronze of St. Paul. The 20 spirals of the low relief chronicle the German war of AD 172–3, and (above) the Sarmatic war of AD 174–5. The column is almost 100 ft (30 m) high and 12 ft (3.7 m) in diameter. An internal spiral staticcase leads to the top. The easiest way to appreciate the sculptural work, however, is to visit the Museo della Cività Romana at EUR (see p266) and study the casts of the reliefs.

Windows of Palazzo Capranica

One of Rome's small number of surviving 15th-century buildings, the palazzo was commissioned by Cardinal Domenico Capranica both as his family residence and as a college for higher education. Its fortress-like appearance is a patchwork of subsequent additions, not unusual in the late 15th century, when Rome was still hovering between medieval and Renaissance taste. The Gothic-looking windows on the right of the building show the cardinal's coat of arms and the date 1451 is inscribed on the doorway underneath. The palazzo now houses a conference center.

Gesù 🛛

Dating from between 1568 and 1584, the Gesù was the first Jesuit church to be built in Rome. Its design epitomizes Counter-Reformation Baroque architecture and has been much imitated throughout the Catholic world. The layout proclaims the church's two major functions: a large nave with side pulpits for preaching to great crowds, and a main altar as the centerpiece for the celebration of the mass. The illusionistic decoration in the nave and dome was added a century later. Its message is clear and confident: faithful, Catholic worshipers will be joyfully uplifted into the heavens while Protestants and other heretics are flung into hell's fires.

Built for Pope Innocent X Pamphili, this magnificent fountain in the center of Piazza Navona was unveiled in 1651. The pope's coat of arms, the dove and the olive branch, decorate the pyramid rock formation supporting the Roman obelisk, which once stood in the Circus of Maxentius on the Appian Way, Bernini designed the fountain, which was paid for by means of taxes on bread and other staples. The great rivers - the Ganges, the Danube, the Nile, and the Plate - are represented by four giants. The Nile's veiled head symbolizes the river's unknown source, but there is also a legend that the veil conveys Bernini's dislike for the nearby Sant'Agnese in Agone, designed by his rival Borromini. Similarly, the athletic figure of the Plate, cringing with arm upraised, is supposed to express Bernini's fear that the church will collapse. Sadly, these widely believed stories can have no basis in fact: Bernini had completed the fountain before Borromini started work on the church.

Rome's most beautiful Baroque piazza follows the shape of Domitian's Stadium which once stood on this site – some of its arches are still visible below the church of Sant'Agnese in Agone. The agones were athletic contests held in the 1st-century stadium, which could seat 33,000 people. The word "Navona" is thought to be a corruption of in agone. The piazza's unique appearance and atmosphere were created in the 17th century with the addition of the Fontana dei Quattro Fiumi. The other fountains date from the previous century but have been altered several times since The basin of the Fontana di Nettuno at the northern end was built by Giacomo della Porta in 1576 while the statues of Neptune and the Nereids date from the 19th century. The Fontana del Moro. at the southern end was also designed by della Porta. though Bernini altered it later. adding a statue of a Moor fighting a dolphin.

Up until the 19th century, Piazza Navona was flooded during August by stopping the fountain outlets. The rich would splash around in carriages, while street urchins paddled after them. Today, with its numerous shops and cafés, the piazza is a favorite in all seasons. In summer it is busy with street entertainers, while in winter it fills with colorful stalls selling toys and candy for the feast of the Befana.

This church is believed to have been founded on the site of the brothel where in AD 304, the young St. Agnes was exposed naked to force her to renounce her faith. A marble relief in the crypt shows the miraculous growth of her hair, which fell around her body to protect her modesty. She was martyred on this site and is buried in the catacombs that bear her name along the Via Nomentana (see p264).

Today's church was commissioned by Pope Innocent X in 1652. The first architects were father and son. Girolamo and Carlo Rainaldi, but they were replaced by Borromini in 1653. He stuck more or less to the Rainaldi scheme except for the concave facade designed to emphasize the dome. A statue of St. Agnes on the facade is said to be reassuring the Fontana dei Ouattro Fiumi's statue of the Plate River that the church is stable.

A drunken soldier allegedly pierced the breast of a painted Madonna on this site, causing it to bleed. Pope Sixtus IV della Rovere (reigned 1471-84) placated the Virgin by ordering Baccio Pontelli to build her a church if she would bring the war with Turkey to an end. Peace was restored and the church was named Santa Maria della Pace (St. Mary of Peace).

The cloister was added by Bramante in 1504. As in his famous Tempietto (see p219). he scrupulously followed Classical rules of proportion and achieved a monumental effect in a relatively small space. Pietro da Cortona may have had Bramante's Tempietto in mind when he added the church's charming semicircular portico in 1656. The interior, a short nave ending under an octagonal cupola, houses Raphael's famous frescoes of four Sybils, and four Prophets by his pupil Timoteo Viti, painted for the banker Agostino Chigi in 1514. Baldassarre Peruzzi also did some work in the church (fresco in the first chapel on the left), as did the architect Antonio da Sangallo the Younger, who designed the second chapel on the right.

The French national church was founded in 1518, but it took until 1589 to complete, with contributions by Giacomo della Porta and Domenico Fontana. The church serves as a last resting place for many illustrious French people, including Chateaubriand's lover Pauline de Beaumont.

Three Caravaggios hang in the fifth chapel on the left, all dedicated to St. Matthew. Painted between 1597 and 1602, these were Caravaggio's first great religious works: the Calling of St. Matthew, the Martyrdom of St. Matthew, and St. Matthew and the Angel. The first version of this last painting was rejected because of its vivid realism; never before had a saint been shown as a tired old man with dirty feet. All three works display very disquieting realism and a highly dramatic use of light.

This 16th-century palazzo was built for the Medici family, who had owned a bank here in the previous century. It was the residence of Medici cousins Giovanni and Giuliano, both of whom became popes: Giovanni as Leo X and Giuliano as Clement VII. Caterina de' Medici, Clement VII's niece, also lived here before she was married to Henry, son of King Francis I of France, in 1533.

Caravaggio, whose paintings of St. Matthew hang in San Luigi dei Francesi

The palazzo takes its name from Madama Margherita of Austria, illegitimate daughter of Emperor Charles V, who married Alessandro de' Medici and, after his death, Ottavio Farnese. Thus part of the art collection of the Florentine Medici family was inherited by the Roman Farnese family.

The spectacular facade was built in the 17th century by Paolo Maruccelli. He gave it an ornate cornice and whimsical decorative details on the roof. Since 1871 the palazzo has been the seat of the Italian senate.

The church's lantern is crowned with a cross on top of a dramatic twisted spiral – a highly distinctive landmark from Rome's roof terraces. No other Baroque church is quite like this one, made by Borromini. Based on a ground design of astonishing geometrical complexity, the walls are a breathtaking combination of concave and convex surfaces. The church stands in the small courtyard of the Palazzo della Sapienza, seat of the old University of Rome from the 15th century until 1935.

Dome of Sant'Andrea della Valle

The church is the scene of the first act of Puccini's opera Tosca, though opera fans will not find the Attavanti chapel, a poetic invention. The real church has much to recommend it - the impressive facade shows the flamboyant Baroque style at its best. Inside, a golden light filters through high windows, showing off the gilded interior. Here lie the two popes of the Sienese Piccolomini family: on the left of the central nave is the tomb of Pius II, the first Humanist Pope (reigned 1458-64); Pope Pius III lies opposite he reigned for less than a month in 1503.

The church is famous for its beautiful dome, the largest in Rome after St. Peter's. It was built by Carlo Maderno in 1622-5 and was painted with splendid frescoes by Domenichino and Giovanni Lanfranco. The latter's extravagant style, to be seen in the dome fresco Glory of Paradise, won him most of the commission, and the jealous Domenichino is said to have tried to kill his colleague. He failed, but Domenichino's jealousy was unnecessary, as shown by his two beautiful paintings of scenes from the life of St. Andrew around the apse and altar. In the Strozzi Chapel, built in the style of Michelangelo, the altar has copies of the Leah and Rachel by Michelangelo in San Pietro in Vincoli (see p170).

Roman column, Palazzo Massimo

During the last two years of his life. Baldassarre Peruzzi built this palazzo for the Massimo family, whose home had been destroyed in the 1527 Sack of Rome. Peruzzi displayed great ingenuity in dealing with an awkwardly shaped site. The previous building had stood on the ruined Theater of Domitian, which created a curve in the great processional Via Papalis. Peruzzi's convex colonnaded facade follows the line of the street. His originality is also evident in the small square upper windows, the courtvard, and the stuccoed vestibule. The Piazza de Massimi entrance has a Renaissance-style, frescoed facade. A single column from the theater has been set up in the piazza. The Massimo family

And the massime ranning family fraced its origins to Quintus Fabius Maximus, conqueror of Hannibal in the 3rd century BC, and their coat of arms is borne by an infant Hercules. Over the years the family produced many great Humanists, and in the 19th century, it was a Massimo who negotiated peace with Napoleon. On March 16 each year the family chapel opens to the public to commemorate young Paolo Massimo's resurrection from the dead by San Filippo Neri in 1538.

The palazzo now houses the municipal Museo di Roma. It holds collections of pictures, drawings, and everyday objects illustrating life in Rome from medieval times to the 19th century.

Pasquino, the most famous of Rome's satirical "talking statues"

This rough chunk of marble is all that remains of a Hellenistic group, probably representing the incident in Homer's Iliad in which Menelaus shields the body of the slain Patroclus. For years it lay as a stepping stone in a muddy medieval street until it was erected on this corner in 1501, near the store of an outspoken cobbler named Pasquino, Freedom of speech was not encouraged in papal Rome, so the cobbler wrote out his satirical comments on current events and attached them to the statue.

Other Romans followed suit, hanging their maxims and verses on the statue by night to escape punishment. Despite the wrath of the authorities, the sayings of the "talking statue" (renamed Pasquino) were part of popular culture up until the 19th century. Other statues started to "talk" in the same vein; Pasquino used to conduct dialogues with the statue Marforio in Via del Campidoglio (now in the courtyard of Palazzo Nuovo, see pp70-71) and with the Babuino in Via del Babuino (see p135). Pasquino still speaks on occasion and Rome's Englishlanguage movie theater is named after bim (see p361)

San Filippo Neri (St. Philip Neri) is the most appealing of the Counter-Reformation saints. A highly unconventional reformer, he required his noble Roman followers to humble themselves in public. He made aristocratic young men parade through the streets of Rome in rags or even with a fox's tail tied behind them, and set noblemen to work as laborers building his church. With the help of Pope Gregory XIII, his church was built in place of an old medieval church. Santa Maria in Vallicella, and it has been known ever since as the Chiesa Nuova (new church).

Begun in 1575 by Matteo da Città di Castello and continued by Martino Longhi the Elder, it was consecrated in 1599 (although the facade, by Fausto Rughesi, was only finished in 1606). Against San Filippo's wishes, the interior was decorated after his death: Pietro da Cortona frescoed the nave, dome, and apse, taking nearly 20 years. There are also three paintings by Rubens: Madonna and Angels above the altar, Saints Domitilla, Nereus, and Achilleus on the right of the altar, and Saints Gregory, Maurus, and Papias on the left. San Filippo is buried in his own chapel, to the left of the altar.

With the adjoining church and convent, the oratory formed the center of Filippo Neri's religious order, which was founded in 1575. Its members are commonly known as Filippini. The musical term "oratorio" (a religious text sung by solo voices and chorus) derives from the services that were held here. Filippo Neri came to Rome aged 18 to work as a tutor. The city was undergoing a period of religious strife and an economic slump after the Sack of Rome in 1527. There was also an outbreak of the plague. It was left to newcomers like Neri and Ignazio di Loyola to revive the spiritual life of the city.

Neri formed a brotherhood of laymen who worshipped together and helped pilgrims and the sick (see Santissima Trinità dei Pellegrini p147). He founded the Oratory as a center for religious discourse. Its conspicuous curving brick facade was built by Borromini in 1637–43.

Formerly the mint of papal Rome, this palazzo is often referred to as the Antica Zecca (old mint). The upper stories of the facade, built by Antonio da Sangallo the Younger in the 1520s, are in the shape of a Roman triumphal arch. Above it stand two Baroque statues symbolizing Charity and Thrift, and in the center of the arch above the main entrance an inscription records the founding of the Banco di Santo Spirito by Pope Paul V Borghese in 1605.

Pope Paul was a very shrewd financier and he encouraged Romans to deposit their money at the bank by offering the vast estates of the Hospital of Santo Spirito (see p226) as security. The system catered only for the rudimentary banking requirements of the population, but business was brisk as people deposited money here safe in the knowledge that they could get it out simply by presenting a slip of paper. The hospital coffers also gained from the system. The Banco di Santo Spirito still exists, but is now part of the Banca di Roma.

Large numbers of medieval pilgrims making their way to St. Peter's walked along this street to cross over the Tiber at Ponte Sant'Angelo. Of the businesses that sprang up to try to part the pilgrims from their money, the most enduring was the selling of rosaries and the street is still named after the rosary sellers (coronari) The street followed the course of the ancient Roman Via Recta (straight street), which originally ran from today's Piazza Colonna to the Tiber.

Making one's way through the vast throng of people in Via dei Coronari could be extremely hazardous. In the Holv Year of 1450, some 200 pilgrims died, crushed by the crowds or drowned in the Tiber, Following the tragedy. Pope Nicholas V demolished the Roman triumphal arch that stood at the entrance to Ponte Sant'Angelo. In the late 15th century, Pope Sixtus IV encouraged the building of private houses and palaces along the street.

Although the rosary sellers have been replaced by antiques dealers, the street still has many original buildings from the 15th and 16th centuries. One of the earliest, at Nos. 156–7, is known as the House of Fiammetta, the mistress of Cesare Borgia.

The church is named "in Lauro" after the laurel grove that grew here in ancient times. The church standing here today was constructed at the end of the 16th century by Ottaviano Mascherino. The bell tower and sacristy were 18thcentury additions by Nicola Salvi, famous for the Trevi Fountain (see p159).

The church contains the first great altarpiece by the 17th-century artist Pietro da Cortona, The Birth of Jesus, in the first chapel to the right. The adjacent convent of San Giorgio, to the left, has a pretty Renaissance cloister, a frescoed refectory, and the monument to Pope Eugenius IV (reigned 1431-47), moved here when the old St. Peter's was pulled down. An extravagant Venetian, Eugenius would willingly spend thousands of ducats on his gold tiara, but requested a "simple, lowly burial place" near his predecessor Pope Eugenius III. His portrait, painted by Salviati, hangs in the refectory.

In 1669 San Salvatore in Lauro became the seat of a pious association, the Confraternity of the Piceni, who were inhabitants of the Marche region. Fanatically loyal to the Pope, the Piceni were traditionally employed as papal soldiers and tax collectors.

This museum contains memorabilia and portraits of Napoleon Bonaparte and his family. Personal relics of Napoleon himself include an Indian shawl he wore during his exile on St. Helena.

After his death in 1821 the Pope allowed many of the Bonaparte family to settle in Rome, including his mother Letizia, who lived in Palazzo Misciattelli on Via del Corso and his sister Pauline who married the Roman Prince Camillo Borghese. The museum has a cast of her right breast, made by Canova in 1805 as a study for his statue of her as a reclining Venus, now in the Museo Borghese (see p261). Portraits and personal effects of other members of the family are on display, including uniforms, court dresses, and a pennyfarthing bicycle that belonged to Prince Eugène, the son of Emperor Napoleon III.

The last male of the Roman branch of the family was Napoleon Charles, portrayed in a late 19th-century painting by Guglielmo de Sanctis. The collection was assembled in 1927 by the Counts Primoli, the sons of Charles's sister, Carlotta Bonaparte.

An extraordinary collection of Classical sculpture is housed in this branch of the Museo Nazionale Romano.

Side relief of the Ludovisi Throne, Palazzo Altemps

Restored as a museum during the 1990s, the palazzo was originally built for Girolamo Riario, nephew of Pope Sixtus IV in 1480. The Riario coat of arms can still be seen in the janitor's room. In the popular uprising that followed the Pope's death in 1484, the building was sacked and Girolamo fled the city.

In 1568 the palazzo was bought by Cardinal Marco Sittico Altemps. His family was of German origin - the name is an Italianization of Hohenems - and influential in the church. The palazzo was renovated by Martino Longhi the Élder in the 1570s He added the great belvedere crowned with obelisks and a marble unicorn. The Altemps family were ostentatious collectors: the courtyard and its staircase are lined with ancient sculptures. These form part of the museum's collection. together with the Ludovisi collection of ancient sculptures, which was previously housed in the Museo Nazionale Romano in the Baths of Diocletian (see p163). Located on the first floor is the Greek statue of Athena Parthenos and the Dionysius group, a Roman copy of the Greek original. On the second floor, at the far end of the courtyard, visitors can admire the Painted Loggia, dating from 1595. The Ludovisi throne, a Greek original carved in the 5th century BC, is on the same floor. It is decorated with reliefs, one of which shows a young woman rising from the sea, who is thought to represent Aphrodite. In the room which is known as the Salone del Camino is the powerful statue The Galatian's Suicide, a marble copy of a group originally made in bronze. Nearby is the Ludovisi Sarcophagus, dating from the 3rd century AD.

The network of narrow streets between Piazza di Spagna and Via del Corso is one of the liveliest areas in Rome, drawing throngs of tourists and Romans to its discreet and elegant shops. In the 18th century the area was full of hotels for frivolous English aristocrats doing the Grand Tour, but there were also artists, writers, and composers, who took the city's history and culture more seriously.

When Sant'Andrea delle Fratte was built in the 12th century, this was the northernmost edge of Rome. Though the church is now firmly embedded in the city, its name (fratte means thickets) recalls its original setting.

The church was completely rebuilt in the 17th century, partly by Borromini. His bell tower and dome, best viewed from the higher ground further up Via Capo le Case, are remarkable for the complex arrangement of concave and convex surfaces. The bell tower is particularly fanciful, with angel caryatids, flaming torches, and exaggerated scrolls like semifolded hearts supporting a spiky crown.

In 1842, the Virgin Mary appeared in the church to a Jewish banker, who promptly converted to Christianity and became a missionary. Inside. the chapel of the Miraculous Madonna is the first thing you notice. The church is better known however for the angels that Borromini's rival. Bernini, carved for the Ponte Sant'Angelo. Pope Clement IX declared they were too lovely to be exposed to the weather. so they remained with Bernini's family until 1729, when they were moved to the church.

But Innocent X, who became Pope in 1644. preferred the style of Borromini, who was asked to continue. His extraordinary west facade. completed in 1662, must have exceeded everyone's expectations. It is striped with broad pilasters, between which the second-floor windows bend in, and the central bay bulges. A rigid band divides its floors, and the cornice above the convex central bay swerves inward. The more you look at it, the more restless it seems; a sign perhaps of the increasing unhappiness of the architect, who committed suicide in 1667.

Shaped like a crooked bow tie and surrounded by tall, shuttered houses painted in muted shades of ocher, cream, and russet, Piazza di Spagna (Spanish square) is crowded all day and (in summer) most of the night. It is the most famous square in Rome, and has long been the haunt of foreign visitors and expatriates.

In the 17th century Spain's ambassador to the Holy See had his headquarters on the square, and the area around it was deemed to be Spanish territory. Foreigners who unwittingly trespassed were liable to be dragooned into the Spanish army. In the 18th and 19th centuries Rome was almost as popular with visitors as it is today, and the square stood at the heart of the city's main hotel district. Some of the travelers came in search of knowledge and artistic inspiration, but most were more interested in gambling, collecting ancient statues, and conducting love affairs with Italian women.

Not surprisingly, the wealthy travelers attracted hordes of beggars, who were usually supplied with tearjerking letters by scribes who worked in the square.

The Fontana della Barcaccia in the square is the least showy of Rome's Baroque fountains, and it is often completely screened from view by people resting on its rim. It was designed either by the famous Gian Lorenzo Bernini or by his father Pietro. Because the pressure from the aqueduct that feeds the fountain is extremely low there are no spectacular cascades or spurts of water. Instead, Bernini constructed a leaking boat – barcaccia means useless, old boat – which lies half submereed in a shallow pool.

The bees and suns that decorate the Fontana della Barcaccia are taken from the family coat of arms of Pope Urban VIII Barberini, who commissioned the fountain.

In November 1820 the English poet John Keats came to stay with his friend, the painter Joseph Severn, in a dusty pink house, the Casina Rossa, on the corner of the Spanish Steps. Suffering from consumption, Keats had been sent to Rome by his doctor, in the hope that the mild, dry climate would help the young man's recovery. Depressed because of scathing criticism of his work and tormented by his love for a young girl named Fanny Brawne, Keats died the following February, aged 25.

His death inspired fellow poet Percy Bysshe Shelley to write the poem Mourn not for Adonais. In July 1822 Shelley himself was drowned in a boating accident in the Gulf of La Spezia off the coast of Liguria. Keats, Shelley, and Severn are all buried in Rome's Protestant Cemetery (see p205).

In 1906 the house was bought by an Anglo-American association and preserved as a memorial and library in honor of English Romantic poets. The relics include a lock of Keats's hair, some fragments of Shelley's bones in a tiny urn, and a garish carnival mask picked up by Lord Byron as a souvenir of a trip to Venice. You can visit the room where Keats died, though all the original furniture was burnt after his death, on papal orders.

Spanish Steps 🛛

In the 17th century the French owners of Trinità dei Monti decided to link the church with Piazza di Spagna by building a magnificent new flight of steps. They also planned to place an equestrian statue of King Louis XIV at the top. Pope Alexander VII Chigi was not too happy at the prospect of erecting a statue of a French monarch in the papal city, and the arguments continued until the 1720s when an Italian architect, Francesco de Sanctis, produced a design that satisfied both parties. The steps, completed in 1726, combine straight sections, curves and terraces to create one of the city's most dramatic and distinctive landmarks.

When the Victorian novelist Charles Dickens visited Rome, he reported that the Spanish Steps were the meeting place for artists' models, who would dress in colorful traditional costumes, hoping to catch the attention of a wealthy artist. The steps are now a popular place to sit, write postcards, take photos, flirt, busk, or watch the passers-by, but eating here is not allowed.

Trinità dei Monti's bell towers

The views of Rome from the platform in front of the twin bell-towered facade of Trinità dei Monti are so beautiful that the church itself is often ignored. It is, however, unusual for Rome, for it was founded by the French in 1495, and although it was later badly damaged, there are still traces of attractive late Gothic latticework in the vaults of the transept. The interconnecting side chapels are decorated with Mannerist paintings, including two fine works by Daniele da Volterra.

19th-century engraving of the inner facade of the Villa Medici

A pupil of Michelangelo, Volterra had to paint clothes on the nudes in the Last Judgment in the Sistine Chapel, in response to the objections of Pope Pius IV.

Michelangelo's influence is obvious in the powerfully muscled bodies shown in the Deposition (second chapel on the left). The circles of gesturing figures and dancing angels surrounding the Virgin Mary in the Assumption (third chapel on the right) have more in common with the graceful style of Raphael.

Superbly positioned on the Pincio hill above Piazza di Spagna, this 16th-century villa has kept the name it assumed when Cardinal Ferdinando de' Medici bought it in 1576. From the terrace you can look across the city to Castel Sant'Angelo, from where Queen Christina of Sweden is said to have fired the large cannon ball that now sits in the basin of the fountain.

The villa is home to the French Academy. This was founded by Louis XIV in 1666 to give a few select painters the chance Foi to study in Via d Rome. Nicolas Poussin was one of the first advisers to the Academy, Ingres was a director, and alumni include Jean-Honoré Fragonard and François Boucher.

After 1803, when the French Academy moved to the Villa Medici, musicians were also admitted; both Berlioz and Debussy came to Rome as students of the Academy.

In 1816 the Pope gave English residents and visitors the right to hold Anglican services in Rome, but it wasn't until the early 1880s that they acquired a site to build their own church. The architect was G. E. Street, best known in Britain for his Neo-Gothic churches and the London Law Courts. The two churches at the south end of Piazza del Popolo were designed by the architect Carlo Rainaldi (1611–91), proof that he could be as ingenious as his peers, Bernini and Borromini. To provide a focal point for the piazza, the churches had to appear

The Pincio Gardens lie above Piazza del Popolo on a hillside that has been so skillfully terraced and richly planted with trees that, from below, the zig-zagging road climbing to the gardens is virtually invisible. In ancient Roman times, there were magnificent gardens on the Pincio hill, but the present gardens were designed in the early 19th century by Giuseppe Valadier (who also

del Popolo). The broad avenues, lined with umbrella pines, palm trees, and evergreen oaks soon became a fashionable place to stroll, and even this century such diverse characters as Gandhi and Mussolini, Richard Strauss and King Farouk of Egypt patronized the Casina Valadier, an exclusive café and restaurant in the grounds.

From the Pincio's main square, Piazzale Napoleone I, the panoramic views of Rome stretch from the Monte Mario to the Janiculum. For full effect, approach the gardens from the grounds of Villa Borghese (see pp258–9) above the Pincio, or along Viale della Trinità dei Monti. The panorama is particularly beautiful at sunset, the traditional time for tourists to take a stroll in the gardens.

One of the most striking features of the park itself is an Egyptian-style obelisk which Emperor Hadrian erected on the tomb of his favorite, the beautiful male slave Antinous. After the slave's premature death (according to some accounts he died saving the emperor's life), Hadrian deified him.

The 19th-century water clock on Via dell'Orologio was designed by a Dominican monk. It was displayed at the Paris Exhibition of 1889.

Piazza del Popolo 6

A vast cobbled oval standing at the apex of the triangle of roads known as the Trident, Piazza del Popolo forms a grand symmetrical antechamber to the heart of Rome. Twin Neo-Classical facades stand on either side of the Porta del Popolo; an Egyptian obelisk rises in the center; and the matching domes and porticoes of Santa Maria dei Miracoli and Santa Maria in Montesanto flank the beginning of Via del Corso.

Although it is now one of the most unified squares in Rome, Piazza del Popolo evolved gradually over the centuries. In 1589 the great town-planning Pope, Sixtus V, had the obelisk erected in the center by Domenico Fontana.

Traditional Carnival band in Piazza del Popolo

Over 3,000 years old, the obelisk was originally brought to Rome by Augustus to adorn the Circus Maximus after the conquest of Egypt. Almost a century later Pope Alexander VII commissioned Carlo Rainaldi to build the twin Santa Marias.

In the 19th century the piazza was turned into a grandiose oval by Giuseppe Valadier, the designer of the Pincio Gardens. He also encased Santa Maria del Popolo in a Neo-Classical shell to make its south facade fit in better with the overall appearance of the piazza.

In contrast to the piazza's air of ordered rationalism. many of the events staged here were barbaric. In the 18th and 19th centuries, public executions were held in Piazza del Popolo, often as part of the celebration of Carnival. Condemned men were sometimes hammered to death by repeated blows to the temples. The last time a criminal was executed in this way was in 1826, even though the guillotine had by then been adopted as a more scientific means of execution.

The riderless horse races from the piazza down Via del Corso were scarcely more humane: the performance of the runners was enhanced by feeding the horses stimulants, wrapping them in nail-studded ropes, and letting off fireworks at their heels.

The Via Flaminia, built in 220 BC to connect Rome with Italy's Adriatic coast, enters the city at Porta del Popolo, a grand 16th-century gate built on the orders of Pope Pius IV Medici. The architect, Nanni di Baccio Bigio, modeled it on a Roman triumphal arch. The outer face has statues of St. Peter and St. Paul on either side and a huge Medici coat of arms above.

A century later, Pope Alexander VII commissioned Bernini to decorate the inner face to celebrate the arrival in Rome of Queen Christina of Sweden. Lesser visitors were often held up while customs officers rifled their luggage. The only way to speed things up was with a bribe.

Among the artists who worked on the building were Andrea Bregno and Pinturicchio. Later additions were made by Bramante and Bernini Many illustrious families have chapels here, all decorated with appropriate splendor. The Della Rovere Chapel has delightful Pinturicchio frescoes, the Cerasi Chapel has two Caravaggio masterworks. Reconstructed at considerable expense over many years, the Ara Pacis (Altar of Peace) is one of the most significant monuments of ancient Rome. It celebrates the peace created throughout the Mediterranean area by Emperor Augustus after his victorious campaigns in Gaul and Spain. The monument was commissioned by the Senate in 13 BC and completed four years later. It was positioned so that the shadow of the huge obelisk sundial on Campus Martius (see p113) would fall upon it on Augustus' birthday. It is a square enclosure on a low platform with the altar in the center. All surfaces are decorated with magnificent friezes and reliefs carved in Carrara marble. The reliefs on the north and south walls depict a procession that took place on July 4, 13 BC in which the members of the emperor's family can be identified, ranked by their position in the succession. At the time the heir apparent was Marcus Agrippa, husband of Augustus's daughter Julia. All the portraits in the relief are carved with extraordinary realism, even the innocent toddler clinging to his mother's skirts.

The tale of the rediscovery of the Ara Pacis dates back to the 16th century, when the first panels were unearthed. One section ended up in Paris, another in Florence. Further discoveries were made in the late 19th century, when archaeologists finally realized just what they had found. What we see today has all been pieced together since 1938, in part original, in part facsimile. In 1999 the architect Richard Meier designed a building to house the monument.

Now just a weedy mound ringed with cypresses and sadly strewn with litter, this was once the most prestigious burial place in Rome. Augustus had the mausoleum built in 28 BC, the year he became sole ruler, as a tomb for himself and his descendants. The circular building was 285 ft (87 m) in diameter with two obelisks (now in Piazza del Quirinale and Piazza dell'Esquilino) at the entrance.

Inside were four concentric passageways linked by corridors where the urns containing the ashes of the Imperial family were placed. The first to be buried here was Augustus's favorite nephew. Marcellus, who had married Julia, the emperor's daughter. He died in 23 BC. possibly poisoned by Augustus's second wife Livia. who felt that her son. Tiberius. would make a more reliable emperor. When Augustus died in AD 14, his ashes were placed in the mausoleum. Tiberius duly became emperor, and dynastic poisonings continued to fill the family vault with urns

This sinister monument was later used as a medieval fortress, a vineyard, a private garden, and even, in the 18th century, as an auditorium and a theater.

This church, with a restrained Neo-Classical facade by Giuseppe Valadier. the designer of Piazza del Popolo, began life as the chapel of a 16thcentury hospital with beds for 50 men – San Rocco was a healer of the plague-stricken. A maternity wing was added for the wives of Tiber bargees to save them from having to give birth in the insanitary conditions of a boat. The hospital came to be used by unmarried mothers. and one section was set aside for women who wished to be unknown. They were even permitted to wear a veil for the duration of their stay. Unwanted children were sent to an orphanage, and if any mothers or children died they were buried in anonymous graves. The hospital was abandoned in the early 20th century, and demolished in the 1930s during the excavation of the Mausoleum of Augustus.

The Campo de' Fiori (field of flowers), once a meadow, occupies the site of the open space facing the Theater of Pompey. Cardinals and noblemen used to rub shoulders with fishmongers and foreigners in the piazza's market, making it one of the liveliest areas of medieval and Renaissance Rome. Today's market retains much of the traditional lively atmosphere.

In the center of the square is a statue of the philosopher Giordano Bruno, burnt at the stake for heresy here in 1600. The hooded figure is a grim reminder of the executions that were held here.

The piazza was surrounded by inns for pilgrims and other travelers. Many of these were once owned by the successful 15th-century courtesan, Vannozza Catanei, mistress of Pope Alexander VI Borgia. On the corner between the piazza and Via del Pellegrino you can see Catanei's shield, which she had decorated with her own coat of arms and those of her husband and her lover, the Borgia Pope.

This majestic palazzo, built around 1550 for Cardinal Capo di Ferro, has an elegant stuccoed courtyard and facade decorated with reliefs evoking Rome's glorious past.

Cardinal Bernardino Spada, who lived here in the 17th century with his brother Virginio (also a cardinal), hired architects Bernini and Borromini to work on the building. The brothers' whimsical delight in false perspectives resulted in a colonnaded gallery by Borromini that appears four times longer than it really is.

The cardinals also amassed a superb private collection of paintings, which is now on display in the Galleria Spada. The collection features a wide range of artists, including Rubens, Dürer, and Guido Reni. The most important works on display include The Visitation by Andrea del Sarto (1486–1530), Cain and Abel by Giovanni Lanfranco (1582–1647), and The Death of Dido by Guercino (1591–1666).

A pious confraternity was formed here in the 16th century to collect the bodies of the unknown dead and give them a Christian burial. The theme of death is stressed in this church, dedicated to St. Mary of Prayer and Death. The doors and windows of Ferdinando Fuga's dramatic Baroque facade are decorated with winged skulls. Above the central entrance there is a clepsydra (an ancient hour-glass) – symbolic of death.

Piazza Farnese. Map 4 E5 & 11 B4. 23, 116, 280, and routes to Corso Vittorio Emanuele II. Not open to the public.

The prototype for numerous princely palaces, the imposing Palazzo Farnese was originally built for Cardinal Alessandro Farnese (who became Pope Paul III in 1534). He commissioned the greatest artists to work on it, starting with Antonio da Sangallo the Younger as architect in 1517.

Michelangelo, who took over after him, contributed the great cornice and central window of the main facade, and the third level of the courtyard.

Michelangelo had a plan for the Farnese gardens to be connected by a bridge to the Farnese home in Trastevere, Villa Farnesina (see pp220-21). The elegant arch spanning Via Giulia belongs to this sadly unrealized scheme. The palazzo was completed in 1589, on a less ambitious scale, by Giacomo della Porta. It is now the home of the French embassy, which moved in as early as 1635.

The church was built on a site incorporating the home of San Filippo Neri, the 16thcentury saint from Tuscany who renewed Rome's spiritual and cultural life by his friendly, open approach to religion. He would have loved the frolicking putti shown surrounding his statue, in his chapel, reminding him of the Roman urchins he had cared for during his lifetime.

The breathtaking Spada Chapel was designed by Borromini, and is unique both as a work of art and as an illustration of the spirit of the Baroque age. All architectural elements are concealed so that the space of the chapel's interior is defined solely by decorative marblework and statues. Veined jasper and precious multicolored marbles are sculpted to imitate flowery damask and velvet hangings. Even the altar rail is a long swag of jasper drapery held up by a pair of kneeling angels with wooden wings.

Although there are memorials to former members of the Spada family, oddly there is no indication as to which of the Spadas was responsible for endowing the chapel. It was probably art-lover Virgilio Spada, a follower of San Filippo Neri.

The name of the church still records the fact that it was commissioned by a rich corporation of goldsmiths (orefici) in the early 16th century. The original design was by Raphael, who, like his master Bramante, had acquired a sense of the grandiose from the remains of Roman antiquity. The influence of some of Bramante's works, such as the choir of Santa Maria del Popolo (see pp138–9), is evident in the simple way the arches and pilasters define the structure of the walls.

The cupola of Sant' Eligio is attributed to Baldassarre Peruzzi, while the facade was added in the early 17th century by Flaminio Ponzio. Among the various 16th-century painters who decorated the interior was Taddeo Zuccari, who worked on Palazzo Farnese (see p147).

Palazzo Ricci was famous for its frescoed facade – now rather faded – originally painted in the 16th century by Polidoro da Caravaggio, a follower of Raphael.

In Renaissance Rome it was common to commission artists to decorate the outsides of houses with heroes of Classical antiquity. A fresco by a leading artist such as Polidoro, reputedly the inventor of this style of painting, was a conspicuous status symbol, in the nobility's attempts to outshine each other with their palazzi.

The palazzo, a supreme example of the confident architecture of the Early Renaissance, was begun in 1485. It was financed partly with the gambling winnings of Cardinal Raffaele Riario. Roses, the emblem of the Riario family, adorn the vaults and capitals of the beautiful Doric courtyard. The palazzo's interior was decorated after the Sack of Rome in 1527. Giorgio Vasari boasted that he had completed work on one enormous room in just 100 days; Michelangelo allegedly retorted: "It looks like it." Other Mannerist artists, Perin del Vaga and Francesco Salviati, frescoed the rooms of the cardinal in charge of the Papal Chancellery, the office that gave the palazzo its name when it was installed here by Pope

Leo X. On the right of the main entrance is the unobtrusive and rather quaint church of San Lorenzo in Damaso, founded by Pope

The collection includes an ancient Egyptian relief of the scribe Nofer, some Assyrian artifacts, and, among the Etruscan exhibits, a delicate ceramic female head. ## Area Sacra dell'Argentina 🛛

The remains of four temples, known as A, B, C, and D, were discovered here in the 1920s. Dating from the Republican era, they are among the oldest in Rome. The oldest (temple C) dates from the early 3rd century BC. It was placed on a high platform preceded by an altar and is typical of Italic plans. Temple A is from later in the 3rd century BC. In medieval times the church of San Nicola de' Cesarini was built over its podium: remains of its two apses are still visible. The north column stumps belonged to a great portico, the Hecatostylum (portico of 100 columns). In

San Carlo at Prayer by Guido Reni

Imperial times two marble lavatories were built here the remains of one are visible behind temple A. Behind temples B and C are remains of a great platform of tufa blocks identified as part of the Curia of Pompey - a rectangular building with a statue of Pompey. It was here that the Senate met and Iulius Caesar was murdered on March 15, 44 BC. At the southwest corner of the site is a cat sanctuary home to Rome's abandoned felines (open afternoons).

In 17th-century Rome the plague could still strike fiercely and there were no reliable, effective remedies. Many Romans simply prayed for a cure to a sacred medieval icon of the Virgin, the Madonna del Portico. When a particularly lethal outbreak of plague abated in 1656, popular gratitude was so strong that a new church was built to house the icon.

The church, designed by a pupil of Bernini, Carlo Rainaldi, was completed in 1667. The main elements of the lively Baroque facade are the graceful columns, symbolizing the supporters of the true faith.

Inside the church stands a fabulously ornate, gilded altar tabernacle with spiral columns which was designed by Giovanni Antonio de' Rossi to contain the image of the Virgin. The side chapels are decorated by some of Rome's finest Baroque painters: Sebastiano Conca, Giovanni Battista Gaulli (known as II Baciccia), and Luca Giordano.

The medieval church of San Nicola in Carcere stands on the site of three Roman temples of the Republican era which were converted into a prison (carcere) in the Middle Ages. The temples of Juno, Spes, and Janus faced a city gate leading from the Forum Holitorium, the city's vegetable and oil market, to the road down to the port on the Tiber. The columns embedded in the walls of the church belonged to two flanking temples whose platforms are now marked by grass lawns. The church was rebuilt in 1599 and restored in the 19th century, but the bell tower and Roman columns are part of the original design.

The curved outer wall of this vast amphitheater has supported generations of Roman buildings. It was built by the Emperor Augustus (27 BC-AD 14), who dedicated it to Marcellus, his nephew and son-in-law, who had died aged 19 in 23 BC.

The Middle Ages were a turbulent time of invasions and local conflicts (see p30) and by the 13th century the theater had been converted into the fortress of the Savelli family. In the 16th century Baldassarre Peruzzi built a great palace on the theater ruins for the Orsini family. This included a garden that faced the Tiber. The lower arches were later occupied by humble dwellings and workshops.

Close to the theater stand three beautiful Corinthian columns and a section of frieze. These are from the temple of Apollo, which housed many great works of art that the Romans had plundered from Greece in the 2nd century BC.

Built in honor of Octavia (the sister of Augustus and the abandoned wife of Mark Antony), this is the only surviving portico of what used to be the monumental piazza of Circus Flaminius. The rectangular portico enclosed temples dedicated to Jupiter and Juno, decorated with bronze statues. The part we see today is the great central atrium originally covered by marble facings.

In the Middle Ages a great fish market and a church. Sant'Angelo in Pescheria were built in the ruins of the portico. As the church was associated with the fishing activities of the nearby river port, aquatic flora and fauna feature in many of its inlays. Links with the Tiber are also apparent in the stucco facade on the adjacent Fishmonger's Oratory, built in 1689. The church has a fresco of the Madonna and angels by the school of Benozzo Gozzoli.

Jewish community in Rome ever since. Jews were much appreciated for their financial and medical skills during the time of the Roman Empire.

Systematic persecution began in the 16th century. From July 25, 1556 all Rome's Jews were forced to live inside a highwalled enclosure erected on the orders of Pope Paul IV. The Ghetto was in an unhealthy part of Rome. Inhabitants were only allowed out during the day, and on Sundays they were driven into the Church of Sant'Angelo in Pescheria to listen to Christian sermons – a practice abolished only in 1848.

Persecution started again in 1943 with the German occupation. Although many Jews were helped to escape or hidden by Roman citizens, thousands were deported to German concentration camps.

Today many Jews still live in the former Ghetto and the medieval streets retain much of their old character. The Synagogue on Lungotevere was completed in 1904 and houses a Jewish museum that describes the history of the community through plans, Torahs, and other artifacts.

Before the Renaissance, most Romans had only vague ideas of their city's past, but the 15th-century revival of interest in the philosophy and arts of antiquity inspired some to build houses recalling the splendor of ancient Rome. In 1468 a certain Lorenzo Manilio built a great house for his family, decorating it with an elegant Classical plaque. The Latin inscription dates the building according to the ancient Roman method – 2,221 years after the foundation of the city – and gives the owner's name. Original reliefs are embedded in the facades as well as a fragment of an ancient sarcophagus. The Piazza Costaguti facade's windows are inscribed Ave Roma (Hail Rome).

Most of the original medieval palazzo has been demolished, and the building you see today dates back to the 1570s, though its rather forbidding appearance seems medieval.

Heraldic half-moons decorate the main facade on Via del Progresso while pretty balconies open on the opposite side where a medieval arch joins the palace to Palazzetto Cenci, designed by Martino Longhi the Elder. Inside is a traditional courtyard with an Ionic-style loggia; many of the rooms retain the original 16thcentury decoration that the unfortunate Beatrice would have known as a child.

Tiber Island 🛛

In ancient times the island, which lay opposite the city's port, had large structures of white travertine at either end built to resemble the stern and prow of a ship.

Since 293 BC, when a temple was dedicated here to Aesculapius, the god of healing and protector against the plague, the island has been associated with the sick and there is still a hospital here.

San Bartolomeo all'Isola, the church in the island's central piazza, was built on the ruins of the temple of Aesculapius in the 10th century. Its Romanesque bell tower is clearly visible from across the river.

From the Ghetto area you can reach the island by a footbridge, the Ponte Fabricio. The oldest original bridge over the Tiber still in use, it was built in 62 BC. In medieval times the Pierleoni, and then the Caetani, two powerful families, controlled this strategic point by means of a tower, still in situ. The other bridge to the island, the Ponte Cestio, is inscribed with the names of the Byzantine emperors associated with its restoration in AD 370.

The church of St. John of the Florentines was built for the large Florentine community living in this area. Pope Leo X wanted it to be an expression of the cultural superiority of Florence over Rome. Started in the early 16th century, the church took over a century to build. The principal architect was Antonio da Ŝangallo the Younger, but many others contributed before Carlo Maderno's elongated cupola was finally completed in 1620. The present facade was added in the 18th century

The church was decorated mainly by Tuscan artists. One interesting exception is the 15th-century statue of San Giovannino by the Sicilian Mino del Reame in a niche above the sacristy. The spectacular high altar houses a marble group by Antonio Raggi, the Baptism of Christ. The altar itself is by Borromini, who is buried in the church along with Carlo Maderno.

This and San Lorenzo in Lucina (see p112) are the only churches in Rome which admit animals: the faithful can bring their pets, and an Easter lamb-blessing takes place.

By the 1500s, the Vatican had a reputation as an unhealthy location because of the high incidence of malaria, so Pope Gregory XIII chose this site on the highest of Rome's seven hills as a papal summer residence. Work began in 1573. Piazza del Quirinale has buildings on three sides while the fourth is open, with a splendid view of the city. Many great architects worked on the palace before it assumed its present form in the 1730s Domenico Fontana designed the main facade Carlo Maderno the huge chapel, and Bernini the narrow wing on Via del Ouirinale.

Pope Martin V Colonna (reigned 1417–31) began building the palazzo, but most of the structure dates from the 18th century. The art gallery, built by Antonio del Grande between 1654 and 1665, is the only part open to the public. The pictures are numbered but unlabeled, so pick up a guide on the way in. Go up the stairs and through the antechamber leading to a series of three gleaming marble rooms with prominent yellow columns, the Colonna family emblem (colonna means column).

The ceiling frescoes celebrate Marcantonio Colonna's victory over the Turks at the Battle of Lepanto (1571). On the walls are 16th- to 18thcentury paintings, including Annibale Carracci's The Bean Eater (see p157). The room of landscape paintings, many by Poussin's brother-in-law Gaspare Dughet, reflects the 18th-century taste of Cardinal Girolamo Colonna. Bevond is a room with a ceiling fresco of The Apotheosis of Martin V. The throne room has a chair reserved for visiting popes and a copy of Pisanello's portrait of Martin V. The gallery also offers a fine view of the private palace garden, site of the ruined temple of Serapis.

The original 6th-century church on this site was rebuilt in the 15th century by popes Martin V Colonna and Sixtus IV della Rovere, whose oak-tree crest decorates the capitals of the late 15th-century portico. Inside the portico on the left is Canova's 1807 memorial to the engraver Giovanni Volpato. The church itself contains a much larger monument by Canova, his Tomb of Clement XIV (1789).

The Baroque interior by Francesco and Carlo Fontana was completed in 1714. Note the 3-D effect of Giovanni Odazzi's painted Rebel Angels, who really look as though they are falling from the sky. A huge 18th-century altarpiece by Domenico Muratori shows the martyrdom of the Apostles James and Philip, whose tombs are in the crypt.

This church was originally one of the first places of Christian worship in Rome, which were known as tituli. A later Romanesque building burned down in 1519, and was rebuilt by Jacopo Sansovino with a single nave and many richly decorated private chapels on either side. The imposing travertine facade was designed by Fontana in late Baroque style.

The third chapel on the right has fine freecoes of the Virgin Mary by Francesco Salviati. The decoration of the next chapel was interrupted by the Sack of Rome in 1527. Raphael's follower Perin del Vaga fled, leaving the ceiling frescoes to be completed by Daniele da Volterra and Pellegrino Tibaldi when peace returned to the city. In the nave stands a splendid Venetian-style double tomb by Sansovino, a memorial to Cardinal Giovanni Michiel (victim of a Borgia poisoning in 1503) and his nephew, Bishop Antonio Orso.

Most visitors gathering around the coin-filled fountain assume that it has always been here, but by the standards of the Eternal City, the Trevi is a fairly recent creation. Nicola Salvi's theatrical design for Rome's largest and most famous fountain (see p54) was completed only in 1762. The central figures are Neptune, flanked by two Tritons. One struggles to master a very unruly "sea-horse," the other leads a far more docile animal. These symbolize the two contrasting moods of the sea.

The site originally marked the terminal of the Aqua Virgo aqueduct built in 19 BC. One of the first-story reliefs shows a young girl (the legendary virgin after whom the aqueduct was named) pointing to the spring from which the water flows.

It has been said that Italian architecture is one of facades, and nowhere is this clearer than in the 1570s facade of Santa Maria in Trivio, delightfully stuck on to the building behind it. Note the false windows. There is illusion inside too, particularly in the ceiling frescoes, which show scenes from the New Testament by Antonio Gherardi (1644–1702).

The name of the tiny church probably means "St. Mary-at-the-meeting-of-three-roads".

St. Luke is supposed to have been a painter, hence the name of Rome's academy of fine arts. Appropriately, the gallery contains a painting of St. Luke Painting a Portrait of the Virgin by Raphael and his followers. The academy's heyday was in the 17th and 18th centuries, when many members gave their work to the collection. Canova donated a model for his famous marble group, The Three Graces.

Of particular interest are three fascinating self-portraits painted by women: the 17thcentury Italian Lavinia Fontana; the 18th-century Swiss Angelica Kauffmann, whose painting is copied from a portrait of her by Joshua Reynolds; and Elisabeth Vigée-Lebrun, the French painter of the years before the 1789 Revolution.

Overlooking the Trevi Fountain (see p159) is one of the most over-the-top Baroque facades in Rome. Its thickets of columns are crowned by the huge coat of arms of Cardinal Raimondo Mazzarino, who commissioned Martino Longhi the Younger to build the church in 1650. The female bust above the door is of one of the cardinal's famous nieces, either Louis XIV's first love, Maria Mancini (1639–1715), or her younger sister, Ortensia. In the apse, memorial plaques record the popes whose praecordia (a part of the heart) are enshrined behind the wall. This gruesome tradition was started at the end of the 16th century by Pope Sixtus V and continued until Pius X stopped it in the early 20th centurv.

Known as the "Pearl of the Baroque" because of its beautiful roseate marble interior, Sant'Andrea was designed by Bernini and executed by his assistants between 1658 and 1670. It was built for the Jesuits, hence the many IHS emblems (Jesus Hominum Salvator – Jesus Savior of Mankind).

The site for the church was wide but shallow, so Bernini pointed the long axis of his oval plan not toward the altar, but toward the sides; he then leads the eye round to the altar end. Here Bernini ordered works of art in various media which function not in isolation, but together. The crucified St. Andrew (Sant'Andrea) of the altarpiece looks up at a stucco version of himself, who in turn ascends toward the lantern and the Holy Spirit.

The rooms of St. Stanislas Kostka in the adjacent convent should not be missed. The quarters of the Jesuit novice, who died in J68 aged 19, reflect not his own spartan taste, but the richer style of the 17thcentury Jesuits. The Polish saint has been brilliantly immortalized in marble by Pierre Leeros (1666–1719).

San Carlo alle Ouattro Fontane 🛛

In 1634, the Trinitarians, a Spanish order whose role was to pay the ransom of Christian hostages to the Arabs, commissioned Borromini to design a church and convent at the Quattro Fontane crossroads. The church, so small it would fit inside one of the piers of St. Peter's, is also known as "San Carlino."

Although dedicated to Carlo Borromeo, the 16th-century Milanese cardinal canonized in 1620, San Carlo is as much a monument to Borromini. Both the facade and interior employ bold curves that give light and life to a small, cramped site. The oval dome and tiny lantern are particularly ingenious. The undulating lines of the facade are decorated with angels and a statue of San Carlo. Finished in 1667, the facade is one of Borromini's very last works.

There are further delights in the playful inverted shapes in the cloister and the stucco work in the refectory (now the sacristy), which houses a painting of San Carlo by Orazio Boreianni (1611).

In a small room off the sacristy hangs a portrait of Borromini himself wearing the Trinitarian cross. Borromini committed suicide in 1667, and in the crypt (which is now open to the public) a small curved chapel reserved for him remains empty.

These four small fountains are attached to the corners of the buildings at the intersection of two narrow, busy streets. They date from the great redevelopment of Rome in the reign of Sixtus V (1585-90). Each fountain has a statue of a reclining deity. The river god accompanied by the she-wolf is clearly the Tiber: the other male figure may be the Arno. The female figures represent Strength and Fidelity or the goddesses Iuno and Diana.

The crossroads is at the highest point of the Quirinal hill and commands splendid views of three distant landmark obelisks: those placed by Sixtus V in front of Santa Maria Maggiore and Trinità dei Monti, and the one that stands in Piazza del Quirinale.

Officially known as the Fontana dell'Acqua Felice, this fountain owes its popular name to the grotesque statue of Moses in the central niche. The massive structure with its three elegant arches was designed by Domenico Fontana to mark the terminal of the Acqua Felice aqueduct, so called because it was one of the many great improvements commissioned by Felice Peretti Pope Sixtus V Completed in 1587, it brought clean piped water to this quarter of Rome for the first time

The notorious statue of Moses striking water from the rock is larger than life and the proportions of the body are obviously wrong. Sculpted either by Prospero Bresciano or Leonardo Sormani, it is a clumsy attempt at recreating the awesome appearance of Michelangelo's Moses in the church of San Pietro in Vincoli (see p170). As soon as it was unveiled, it was said to be frowning at having been brought into the world by such an inept sculptor.

The side reliefs also illustrate water stories from the Old Testament: Aaron leading the Israelites to water and Joshua pointing the army toward the Red Sea. The fountain's four lions are copies of Egyptian originals (now in the Vatican Museums), which Sixtus V had put there for the public's "convenience" and "delight."

Museo Nazionale Romano (Palazzo Massimo) **©

Part of the Museo Nazionale Romano in the Baths of Diocletian

Founded in 1889, the Museo Nazionale Romano holds most of the antiquities found in Rome since 1870 as well as pre-existing collections, and is one of the world's leading museums of Classical art. It now has five branches: its original site, occupying part of the Baths of Diocletian; the Palazzo Massimo: the Palazzo Altemps (see p127); the Aula Ottagona (near the Baths of Diocletian); and Crypta Balbi at Via delle Botteghe Oscure 31, excavated in the foyer of the theater of Balbus (1st century BC) and housing finds from medieval Rome. The Palazzo Massimo, built in 1883–7 on the site of a villa which belonged to Sixtus V, used to be a Jesuit college. In 1981–97 it was restored to house a significant proportion of the museum's collections. The exhibits, contained on four floors, are originals dating from the 2nd century BC through the end of the 4th century AD.

The basement contains an excellent display of ancient coins, precious artifacts, and the only mummified child to be found in the ancient city. The first floor is devoted to Roman statuary, with funeral monuments in Room 2 and Emperor Augustus in Pontifex Maximus guise in Room 5. Upstairs there are statues from Nero's summer villa in Anzio and Roman copies of famous Greek originals such as the Discobolos Ex-Lancellotti.

The real joy of the museum, however, is on the third floor, where entire rooms of wall paintings have been brought from various villas excavated in and around Rome. A guided tour of the wall paintings is necessary, which you can book at the museum entrance. The most incredible frescoes are from Livia's Villa at Prima Porta. Her triclinium (dining room) was decorated with an abundance of trees, plants, and fruit, painted in a totally naturalistic style to fool guests that they were eating alfresco, rather than indoors. Other marvels include rooms brought from the first Villa Farnesina: the children's room has a predominantly white design, while the adults' bedroom is red, complete with erotic paintings. Equally impressive is the museum's display of mosaics on the same floor.

Baths of Diocletian 🗊

Built in AD 298–306 under the infamous Emperor Diocletian, who murdered thousands of Christians, the baths (see pp24–5) were the most extensive in Rome and could accommodate up to 3,000 bathers at a time.

Part of the Museo Nazionale Romano, the complex houses a vast collection of Roman statues and inscriptions and incorporates a former Carthusian monastery which has a beautiful cloister designed by Michelangelo.

Romans often refer to the piazza by its old name. Piazza Esedra, so called because it follows the shape of an exedra (a semicircular recess) that was part of the Baths of Diocletian. The piazza was part of the great redevelopment undertaken when Rome became capital of a unified Italy. Under its sweeping 19th-century colonnades there were once elegant shops, but they have been ousted by banks, travel agencies, and cafés

In the middle of the piazza stands the Fontana delle Naiadi. Mario Rutelli's four naked bronze nymphs caused something of a scandal when they were unveiled in 1901.

Each reclines on an aquatic creature symbolizing water in its various forms: a sea horse for the oceans, a water snake for rivers, a swan for Fa lakes, and a curious frilled lizard for subterranean streams. The figure in the middle, added in 1911, is of the sea god Glaucus, who represents man victorious over the hostile forces of nature.

The Goths who gave their name to this church (Goti are Goths) occupied Rome in the 6th century AD. They were Arvan heretics who denied the divinity of Christ. The church was founded between AD 462 and 470, shortly before the main Gothic invasions, and the beautiful granite columns date from this period. The main altar has a well-preserved 12th-century Cosmatesque tabernacle, but the most delightful part of the church is the charming 18th-century courtvard built around an ivv-draped well.

he Esquiline is the largest and highest of Rome's seven hills. In Imperial Rome the western slopes overlooking the Forum housed the crowded slums of the Suburra On the eastern side there were a few villas belonging to wealthy citizens like Maecenas, patron of the arts and adviser to Augustus. The essential character of the place has persisted through two millennia: it is still one of the poorer quarters of the city.

The area is now heavily built up. except for a rather seedy park on the Colle Oppio, a smaller hill to the south of the Esquiline where you can see the remains of the Baths of Titus, the Baths of Traian and Nero's Domus Aurea. The area's main interest, however, lies in its churches. Many of these were founded on the sites of private houses where Christians met to worship secretly in the days when their religion was banned.

Fresco of old San Giovanni in Laterano in San Martino ai Monti

Christians have been worshiping on the site of this church since the 3rd century, when they used to meet in the house of a man named Equitius. In the 4th century, after Constantine had legalized Christianity, Pope Sylvester I built a church, one of very few things he did during his pontificate. In fact he was so insignificant that in the 5th century a more exciting life was fabricated for him which included tales of him converting Constantine, curing him of leprosy, and forcing him to close all pagan temples. Pope Svlvester's fictional life was further enhanced in the 8th century, with the forgery of a document in which Constantine offered him the Imperial crown.

Pope Sylvester's church was replaced in about AD 500 by St. Symmachus, rebuilt in the 9th century. and then transformed completely in the 1630s. The only immediate signs of its age are the ancient Corinthian columns dividing the nave and aisles. The most interesting interior features are a series of frescoed landscapes of the countryside around Rome (campagna romana) by the 17th-century

French artist Gaspare Dughet. Poussin's brother-in-law, in the right aisle. According to tradition, the two chains (vincoli) used to shackle St. Peter while he was being held in the depths of the Mamertine Prison (see p91) were subsequently taken to Constantinople. In the 5th century. Empress Eudoxia deposited one in a church in Constantinople and sent the other to her daughter Eudoxia in Rome. She in turn gave hers to Pope Leo I. who had this church built to house it Some years later the second chain was brought to Rome where it linked miraculously with its partner.

The chains are still here. displayed below the high altar. but the church is now best known for Michelangelo's Tomb of Pope Iulius II. When it was commissioned in 1505. Michelangelo spent eight months searching for perfect blocks of marble at Carrara in Tuscany, but Pope Julius became more interested in the building of a new St. Peter's and the project was laid aside. After the Pope's death in 1513. Michelangelo resumed work on the tomb. but had only finished the statues of Moses and The Dying Slaves when Pope Paul III persuaded him to start work on the Sistine Chapel's Last Judgment. Michelangelo had planned a vast monument with over 40 statues, but the tomb that was built mainly by his pupils – is simply a facade with six niches for statues. The Dying Slaves are in Paris and Florence, but the tremendous bearded Moses is here. The horns on Moses' head should really be beams of light - they are the result of the original Hebrew of the Old Testament being wrongly translated.

Santa Pudenziana 🗿

Churches tend to be dedicated to existing saints, but in this case, the church, through a linguistic accident, created a brand new saint. In the 1st century AD a Roman senator called Pudens lived here, and, according to legend, allowed St. Peter to lodge with him. In the 2nd century a bath house was built on this site and in the 4th century a church was established inside the baths known as the Ecclesia Pudentiana (the church of Pudens). In time it was assumed that "Pudentiana" was a woman's name and a life was created for her she became the sister of Praxedes and was credited with caring for Christian victims of persecution. In 1969 both saints were declared invalid, though their churches both kept their names.

The 19th-century facade of the church retains an 11thcentury frieze depicting both Praxedes and Pudentiana dressed as crowned Byzantine empresses. The apse has a remarkable 4th-century mosaic, clearly influenced by Classical pagan art in its use of subtle colors. The Apostles are represented as Roman senators in togas but a clumsy attempt at restoration in the 16th century destroyed two of the Apostles and left other figures without legs.

The church was founded by Pope Paschal II in the 9th century, on the site of a 2ndcentury oratory. Although the interior has been altered and rebuilt, the structure of the original design of the 9th-century church is clearly visible. Its three aisles are separated by rows of granite columns. In the central nave, there is a round stone slab covering the well where, according to legend, St. Praxedes is said to have buried the remains of 2,000 martyrs.

Artists from Byzantium decorated the church with glittering, jewel-colored mosaics. Those in the apse and choir depict stylized white-robed elders, the haloed elect looking down from the gold and blue walls of heaven, spindly legged lambs, feather-mop palm trees, and bright red poppies.

In the apse, St. Praxedes and St. Pudentiana stand on either side of Christ, with the fatherly arms of St. Paul and St. Peter on their shoulders. Beautiful mosaics of saints, the Virgin and Christ and the Apostles also cover the walls and vault of the Chapel of St. Zeno, built as a mausoleum for Pope Paschal's mother, Theodora. Part of a column brought back from Jerusalem, allegedly the one to which Christ was bound and flogged, also stands here.

Of all the great Roman basilicas. Santa Maria has the most successful blend of different architectural styles. Its colonnaded nave is part of the original 5th-century building. The Cosmatesque marble floor and delightful Romanesque bell tower. with its blue ceramic roundels are medieval. The Renaissance saw a new coffered ceiling, and the Baroque gave the church twin domes and its imposing front and rear facades. The mosaics are

LEGEND OF THE SNOW

In 356. Pope Liberius had a dream in which the Virgin told him to build a church on the spot where he found snow. When it fell on the Esquiline, on the morning of August 5 in the middle of a baking Roman summer, he naturally obeyed. The miracle of the snow is commemorated each year by a service during which thousands of white petals float down from the ceiling of Santa Maria. Originally roses were used, but nowadays the petals are more usually taken from dahlias.

Coffered Ceiling The gilded ceiling, possibly by Giuliano da Sangallo, was a gift of Alexander VI Borgia at the end of the 15th century. The gold is said to bave been the first brought from America by Columbus.

The deceptively simple facade of Santa Bibiana was Bernini's first foray into architecture. It is a clean, economic design with superimposed pilasters and deeply shadowed archways. The church itself was built on the site of the palace belonging to Bibiana's family. This is where the saint was buried after being flogged to death with leaded cords during the brief persecution of the Christians in the reign of Julian the Apostate (361-3). Just inside the church is a small column against which Bibiana is said to have been whipped Her remains, along with those of her mother Dafrosa and her sister Demetria, who also suffered martyrdom, are preserved in an alabaster urn below the altar. In Piazza Vittorio as it is called for short, was once one of the city's main open-air food markets though now it has moved around the corner to new, covered premises. The arcaded square was built in the urban development undertaken after the unification of Italy in 1870. It was named after Italy's first king, but there is nothing regal about its appearance today.

However, the garden area in the center of the square has been restored. It contains a number of mysterious ruins including a large mound, part of a Roman fountain from the 3rd century AD and the Porta Magica, a curious 17th-century doorway inscribed with alchemical signs and formulae.

Maecenas, fop, gourmet, and patron of the arts, was also an astute adviser and colleague of the Emperor Augustus. Fabulously rich, he created a fantastic villa and gardens on the Esquiline hill, most of which has long disappeared beneath the modern city. The partially reconstructed auditorium, isolated on a traffic island, is all that remains.

Inside, a semicircle of tiered seats suggests that it may have been a place for readings and performances. If it was, then Maccenas would have been entertained here by his protégés, the lyric poet Horace and Virgil, author of the Aeneid, reading their latest works. However, water ducts have also been discovered and it may well have been a nympbeum – a kind of summerhouse – with fountains. Traces of frescoes remain on the walls: you can make out garden scenes and a procession of miniature figures – including one of a characteristically drunken Dionysus (the Greek god of wine) being propped upright by a satyr.

Not far from Nero's Domus Aurea is the cistern of the Sette Sale. It was built here to supply the enormous quantities of water needed for the Baths of Trajan. These were built for Emperor Trajan in AD 104 on parts of the Domus Aurea that had been damaged by a fire. A set of stairs leads down into the cistern, well below street level. There is not much to see here now, but a walk through the huge, echoing cistern where light ravs illuminate the watery surfaces is still an evocative experience. The nine sections, 98 ft (30 m) long by 16 ft (5 m) wide, had a capacity of 2.1 million gallons (8 million liters).

After allegedly setting fire to Rome in AD 64. Nero decided to build himself an outrageous new palace. The Domus Aurea (sometimes called Nero's Golden House) occupied part of the Palatine and most of the Celian and Esquiline hills - an area approximately 25 times the size of the Colosseum. The vestibule on the Palatine side of the complex contained a colossal gilded statue of Nero. There was an artificial lake, with gardens and woods where imported wild beasts were allowed to roam free.

According to Suetonius in his life of Nero, the palace walls were adorned with gold and mother-of-pearl, rooms were designed with ceilings that showered guests with flowers or perfumes, the dining hall rotated, and the baths were fed with both sulfurous water and sea water.

Tacitus described Nero's debauched garden parties, with banquets served on barges and lakeside brothels serviced by aristocratic women; though, as Nero killed himself in AD 68, he did not have long to enjoy his new home.

Nero's successors, anxious to distance themselves from the monster-emperor, did their utmost to erase all traces of the palace. Vespasian drained the lake and built the Colosseum (see pp92–5) in its place, Titus and Trajan each erected a complex of baths over the palace, and Hadrian placed the Temple of Venus and Rome (see p87) over the vestibule.

Rooms from one wing of the palace have survived, buried beneath the ruins of the Baths of Trajan on the Oppian hill. Excavations have revealed large frescoes and mosaics that are thought to be a panorama of Rome from a bird's-eye perspective. Currently closed for safety reasons, hopefully more areas will open to the public when they are considered safe from landslides.

Devout Christians climbing the Scala Santa on their knees

On the east side of Piazza di San Giovanni in Laterano, a building designed by Domenico Fontana (1589) houses two surviving parts of the old Lateran Palace. One is the Sancta Sanctorum, the other the holy staircase, the Scala Santa. The 28 steps, said to be those that Christ ascended in Pontius Pilate's house during his trial, are supposed to have been brought from Jerusalem by St. Helena, mother of the Emperor Constantine. This belief, however, cannot be traced back any earlier than the 7th century.

The steps were moved to their present site by Pope Sixtus V (reigned 1585–90) when the old Lateran Palace was destroyed. No foot may touch the holy steps, so they are covered by wooden boards. They may only be climbed by the faithful on their knees, a penance that is performed especially on Good Friday. In the vestibule there are various 19th-century sculptures including an Ecce Homo by Giosuè Meli (1874).

The Scala Santa and two side stairways lead to the Chapel of St. Lawrence or Sancta Sanctorum (Holy of Holies). built by Pope Nicholas III in 1278. Decorated with fine Cosmatesque marble-work, the chapel contains many important relics, the most precious being an image of Jesus - the Acheiropoeton or "picture painted without hands " said to be the work of St. Luke, with the help of an angel. It was taken on procession in medieval times to ward off plagues.

On the walls and in the vault, restoration work has revealed 13th-century frescoes which for 500 years had been covered by later paintings. The frescoes, representing the legends of St. Nicholas, St. Lawrence, St. Agnes, and St. Paul, show signs of the style that would characterize the frescoes of Giotto in Assisi, made a few years later.

In 1084 the Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV entered Rome via Porta Asinaria with the Antipope Guibert to oust Pope Gregory VII. The gate was badly damaged in the conflicts that followed.

Emperor Constantine's mother St. Helena founded this church in AD 320 in the grounds of her private palace. Although the church stood at the edge of the city, the relics of the Crucifixion that St. Helena had brought back from Jerusalem made it a center of pilgrimage. Most important were the

San Giovanni in Laterano

Early in the 4th century, the Laterani family was disgraced and their land taken by Emperor Constantine to build Rome's first Christian basilica Today's church retains the original shape, but has been destroyed by fire twice and rebuilt several times. Borromini undertook the last major rebuild of the interior in 1646, and the main facade is an 18th-century addition. Before the pope's move to Avignon in 1309, the adjoining Lateran Palace was the official papal residence, and until 1870 all popes were crowned in the church. Piazza di Porta Maggiore. Map 6 F5 = 105. 🙀 3, 5, 14, 19.

Originally the two arches of Porta Maggiore were not part of the city wall, but part of an aqueduct built by the Emperor Claudius in AD 52. They carried the water of the Aqua Claudia over the Via Labicana and Via Prenestina two of ancient Rome's main southbound roads. You can still see the original roadway beneath the gate. In the large slabs of basalt - a hard volcanic rock used in all old Roman roads - note the great ruts created by generations of cartwheels. On top of the arches separate conduits carried the water of two aqueducts: the Aqua Claudia. and its offshoot, the Aqueduct of Nero. They bear inscriptions from the time of Claudius and also from the reigns of Vespasian and Titus, who restored them in AD 71 and AD 81 respectively. In all, six aqueducts from different water sources entered the city at Porta Maggiore.

The Aqua Claudia was 43 miles (68 km) long, with over 9 miles (15 km) above ground. Its majestic arches are a notable feature of the Roman countryside, and a popular mineral water brand bears its name. One stretch of the Aqua Claudia had its arches bricked up when it was incorporated into the 3rd-century Aurelian Wall (see p196).

In the middle of the tram junction near Porta Maggiore stands the tomb of the rich baker Eurysaces and his wife Atistia, built in 30 BC. Roman custom forbade burials within city walls, and the roads leading out of cities became lined with tombs and monuments for the middle and upper classes. This tomb is shaped like a baking oven: a low-relief frieze at the top shows Eurysaces presiding over his slaves in the various phases of breadmaking. The inscription proudly asserts his origins and reveals him as a freed slave, probably of Greek origin. Many men like him saved money from their meagre slave salaries to earn their freedom and set up businesses, becoming the backbone of Rome's economy.

The aqueduct was built by Nero in the 1st century AD as an extension of the Aqua Claudia to supply Nero's Golden House (see p175). It was later extended to the Imperial residences on the Palatine. Cloister of Santi Quattro Coronati

The name of this fortified convent (Four Crowned Saints) refers to four Christian soldiers martyred after refusing to worship a pagan god. For centuries it was the bastion of the Pope's residence, the Lateran Palace. Its high apse looms over the houses below, while a Carolingian tower dominates the entrance. Erected in the 4th century AD, it was rebuilt after the invading Normans set fire to the neighborhood in 1084. Hidden within is the garden of the delightful inner cloister (admission on request), one of the earliest of its kind, built c.1220.

The remains of medieval frescoes can be seen in the Chapel of Santa Barbara, but the convent's main feature is the Chapel of St. Sylvester – its remarkable frescoes (1246) recount the legend of the conversion to Christianity of the Emperor Constantine by Pope Sylvester I (reigned 314–35), then living as a hermit on Monte Soratte, north of Rome.

Stricken by the plague Constantine is prescribed a bath in children's blood to the horror of the matrons of Rome Unable to bring himself to obey, Constantine is visited in a dream by St. Peter and St. Paul. They advise him to find Sylvester, who cures him and baptizes him. The final scene shows the emperor kneeling before the Pope. The implied idea of the Pope as heir to the Roman Empire would affect the whole course of medieval European history.

One of Rome's earliest Christian churches, Santo Stefano Rotondo was constructed between 468 and 483. It has an unusual circular plan with four chapels in the shape of a cross. The round inner area was surrounded by concentric corridors with 22 Ionic supporting columns. The high drum in the center is 72 ft (22 m) high and just as wide. It is lit by 22 high windows, a few of them restored or blocked by restorations carried out under Pope Nicholas V (reigned 1447-55) who consulted the Florentine architect Leon Battista Alberti. The archway in the center may have been added during this period.

In the 16th century the church walls were frescoed by Niccolò Pomarancio, with particularly gruesome illustrations of the martyrdom of innumerable saints. Some of the medieval decor remains: in the first chapel to the left of the entrance is a 7th-century mosaic of Christ with San Primo and San Feliciano.

San Clemente

San Clemente provides an opportunity to travel back through three layers of history. At street level, there is a 12th-century church: underneath this lies a 4th-century church: and below that are ancient Roman buildings, including a temple of Mithras, Mithraism, an all-male cult imported from Persia in the 1st century BC, was a rival to Christianity during the age of Imperial Rome.

The upper levels are dedicated to St. Clement, the fourth Pope, who was exiled to the Crimea and martyred by being tied to an anchor and drowned.

His life is illustrated in some of the frescoes in the 4thcentury church. The site was taken over in the 17th century by Irish Dominicans. who still continue the excavating work begun by Father Mulloolv in 1857.

The restored frescoes by the 15th-century Florentine artist. Masolino da Panicale, show scenes from the life of the martyred St. Catherine of Alexandria.

A good starting point is the church of San Gregorio Magno, from where the Clivo di Scauro leads up to the top of the hill. The steep narrow street passes the ancient porticoed church of Santi Giovanni e Paolo with its beautiful Romanesque bell tower soaring above the surrounding medieval monastery buildings. Santi Giovanni e Paolo is dedicated to two martyred Roman officers whose house originally stood on this site. Giovanni (John) and Paolo (Paul) had served the first Christian emperor, Constantine. When they were later called to arms by the pagan emperor Julian the Apostate, they refused and were beheaded and buried in secret in their own house in AD 362.

Built towards the end of the 4th century, the church retains many elements of its original structure. The Ionic portico dates from the 12th century, and the apse and bell tower were added by Nicholas Breakspeare, the only English pope, who reigned as Adrian IV (1154-9). The base of the superb 13th-century Romanesque bell tower was part of the Temple of Claudius that stood on this site. The interior, which was remodeled in 1718, has granite piers and columns. A tomb slab in the nave marks the burial place of the martyrs, whose relics are preserved in an urn under the high altar. In a tiny room near the altar, a magnificent 13thcentury fresco depicts the figure of Christ flanked by his Apostles (ask the sacristan who will be able to unlock the door).

Excavations beneath the church have revealed two 2ndand 3rd-century Roman houses used as a Christian burial place. These are well worth a visit. The two-story construction, with 20 rooms and a labyrinth of corridors, has well-preserved pagan and Christian paintings. The arches to the left of the church were part of a 3rd-century street of shops.

San Gregorio Magno 2

Facade of San Gregorio Magno

To the English, this is one of the most important churches in Rome, for it was from here that St. Augustine was sent on his mission to convert England to Christianity. The church was founded in AD 575 by San Gregorio Magno (St. Gregory the Great), who turned his family home on this site into a monastery. It was rebuilt in medieval times and restored in 1629–33 by Giovanni Battista Soria. The church is reached via a flight of steps from the street.

The forecourt contains some interesting tombs. To the left is that of Sir Edward Carne, who came to Rome several times between 1529 and 1533 as King Henry VIII's envoy to gain the pope's consent to the annulment of Henry's marriage to Catherine of Aragon.

The interior, remodeled by Francesco Ferrari in the mid-18th century, is Baroque, apart from the fine mosaic floor and some ancient columns. At the end of the right aisle is the chapel of St. Gregory. Leading off it, another small chapel, believed to have been the saint's own cell, houses his episcopal throne – a Roman chair of sculpted marble. The Salviati Chapel on the left contains a picture of the Virgin said to have spoken to St. Gregory.

Outside, amid the cypresses to the left of the church, stand three small chapels, dedicated to St. Andrew, St. Barbara, and St. Sylvia (Gregory the Great's mother). The restored chapels contain frescoes by Domenichino and Guido Reni.

The church overlooks the Piazza della Navicella (little boat) and takes its name from the 16th-century fountain. Dating from the 7th century, the church was probably built on the site of an ancient Roman firemen's barracks, which later became a meeting place for Christians. In the 16th century Pope Leo X added the portico and the coffered ceiling.

In the apse behind the modern altar is a superb 9thcentury mosaic commissioned by Pope Paschal I. Wearing the square halo of the living, the pope appears at the feet of the Virgin and Child. The Virgin, surrounded by a throng of angels, holds a handkerchief like a fashionable lady at a Byzantine court.

The Mattei family used to open the park to the public on the day of the Visit of the Seven Churches, an annual event instituted by San Filippo Neri in 1552. Starting from the Chiesa Nuova (see p124), Romans went on foot to the city's seven major churches and, on reaching Villa Mattei, were given bread, wine, salami, cheese, an egg, and two apples. The garden, owned by the city of Rome, still makes an ideal place for a picnic. In summer it hosts an excellent jazz festival (see p358).

to the 1st-century AD martyrs St. Nereus and St. Achilleus.

Restored at the end of the 16th century, the church has retained many medieval features, including some fine 9th-century mosaics on the triumphal arch. A magnificent pulpit rests on an enormous porphyry pedestal which was found nearby in the Baths of Caracalla. The church of "St. John at the Latin Gate" was founded in the 5th century, rebuilt in 720 and restored in 1191. This is one of the most picturesque of the old Roman churches Classical columns support the medieval portico, and the 12th-century bell tower is superb. A tall cedar tree shades an ancient well standing in the forecourt. The interior has been restored, but it preserves the rare simplicity of its early origins with ancient columns of varving styles lining the aisles. Traces of early medieval frescoes can still be seen within the church. There are 12th-century frescoes showing 46 different biblical scenes, from both the Old and New Testaments, which are among the finest of their kind in Rome.

The name of this charming octagonal Renaissance chapel means "St. John in Oil." The tiny building marks the spot where, according to legend, St. John was boiled in oil and came out unscathed, or even refreshed. An earlier chapel is said to have existed on the site; the present one was built in the early 16th century. The design has been attributed to Baldassare Peruzzi or Antonio da Sangallo the Younger. It was restored by Borromini, who altered the roof, crowning it with a cross supported by a sphere decorated with roses. He also added a terracotta frieze of roses and palm leaves. The wall paintings inside the chapel include one of St. John in a cauldron of boiling oil.

The Scipios were a family of conquering generals. Southern Italy, Corsica, Algeria, Spain, and Asia Minor all fell to their victorious Roman armies. The most famous of these generals was Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus, who defeated the great Carthaginian general Hannibal at the Battle of Zama in 202 BC (see p23). Scipio Africanus himself was not buried here in the family tomb, but at Liternum near Naples, where he owned a favorite villa.

The Tomb of the Scipios was discovered in 1780. It contained various sarcophagi, statues and niches with terracotta burial urns. Many of the originals have now been moved to the Vatican Museums and copies stand in their place.

The earliest sarcophagus was that of Cornelius Scipio Barbatus, consul in 298 BC, for whom the tomb was built. Members of his illustrious family continued to be buried here up to the middle of the 2nd century BC. Excavations in the area have revealed a columbarium similar to that of Pomponius Hylas, a Christian catacomb, and a three-story house dating from the 3rd century AD, which was built over the Tomb of the Scipios.

Arch of Drusus, part of the Aqua Antoniniana aqueduct

Once mistakenly identified as a triumphal arch, the so-called Arch of Drusus merely supported the branch aqueduct that supplied the Baths of Caracalla. It was built in the 3rd century AD, so had no connection with Drusus, a stepson of the Emperor Augustus. Its monumental appearance was due to the fact that it carried the aqueduct across the important route, Via Appia. The arch still spans the old cobbled road, just 160 ft (50 m) short of the gateway Porta San Sebastiano.

Most of the Aurelian Wall begun by the emperor Aurelian (AD 270-75) and completed by his successor Probus (AD 276-82), has survived. Aurelian ordered its construction as a defense against Germanic tribes. whose raids were penetrating deeper and deeper into Italy. Some 11 miles (18 km) round. with 18 gates and 381 towers, the wall took in all the seven hills of Rome. It was raised to almost twice its original height by Maxentius (AD 306-12).

The wall was Rome's main defense until 1870, when it was breached by Italian artillery just by Porta Pia, close to today's British embassy. Many of the gates are still in use, and although the city has spread, most of its noteworthy historical and cultural sights still lie within the walls.

Porta San Sebastiano, the gate leading to the Via Appia Antica (see p284), is the largest and best-preserved gateway in the Aurelian Wall. It was rebuilt by Emperor Honorius in the 5th century AD. Originally the Porta Appia, in Christian times it gradually became known as the Porta San Sebastiano, because the Via Appia led to the Basilica and Catacombs of San Sebastiano, which were popular places of pilgrimage.

It was at this gate that the last triumphal procession to enter the city by the Appian Way was received in state – that of Marcantonio Colonna after the victory of Lepanto over the Turkish fleet in 1571. Today the gate's towers house a museum with prints and models showing the walls' history. From here you can take a short walk along the restored walls. The views are spectacular.

Overlooking the Baths of Caracalla, this isolated church is dedicated to Santa Balbina, a 2nd-century virgin martyr. It is one of the oldest in Rome, dating back to the fifth century, and was built on the remains of a Roman villa. Consecrated by Pope Gregory the Great, in the Middle Ages Santa Balbina was a fortified monastery and over time has changed in appearance several times, regaining its Romanesque aspect in the 1920s.

From the piazza in front of the church, a staircase leads up to a three-arched portico. Inside, light streams in from a series of high windows along the length of the nave. The remains of St. Balbina and her father, St. Quirinus, are in an urn at the high altar, though the church's real treasure is situated in the far right-hand corner: the magnificent sculpted and inlaid tomb of Cardinal Stefanis de Surdis by Giovanni di Cosma (1303).

Other features worth noting are a 13th-century episcopal throne and various fragments of frescoes. These include a lovely Madonna and Child, an example of the school of Pietro Cavallini, in the second chapel on the left. Fragments of first-century Roman mosaics were also discovered in the 1930s. Depicting birds and signs of the zodiac, these are now set in the church floor.

This beautiful unadorned church was built in the 6th century on the site of the ancient city's food market. The elegant Romanesque bell tower and portico were added during the 12th century. In the 19th century a Baroque facade was removed and the church restored to its original simplicity. It contains many fine examples of Cosmati work. in particular the mosaic pavement, the raised choir. the bishop's throne, and the canopy over the main altar.

Set into the wall of the portico is the Bocca della Verità (Mouth of Truth). This may have been a drain cover, dating back to before the 4th century BC. Medieval tradition had it that the formidable jaws would snap shut over the hand of those who told lies – a useful trick for testing the faithfulness of spouses.

Probably dating from the reign of Constantine, this imposing four-faced marble arch stood at the crossroads on the edge of the Forum Boarium, near the ancient docks. Merchants did business in its shade. On the keystones above the four arches you can see small figures of the goddesses Roma, Juno, Ceres, and Minerva. In medieval times the arch formed the base of a tower fortress. It was restored to its original shape in 1827.

In the hollow of the street named after the Velabrum, the swamp where Romulus and Remus are said to have been found by the she-wolf, is a small church dedicated to St. George, whose bones lie under the altar.

The 7th-century basilica has suffered over the centuries from periodic floods, and in 1993 a bomb caused extensive damage to the front of the church. Careful restoration has, however, returned it to its original appearance.

A double row of assorted granite and marble columns (taken from ancient Roman temples) divides the triple nave. The austerity of the cool gray interior is relieved by golden frescoes in the apse (attributed to Pietro Cavallini, 1295). The facade and the bell tower date from the 12th century.

If you are in the area on a Sunday morning, you will find this small, round, 6th-century church at the foot of the Palatine a delight to visit for the Greek Orthodox services. The church stands near the foot of the Tarpeian Rock, the site of public execution of traitors since the time of the Sabine War (see p74).

In 1385, Giordanello degli Alberini, a condemned nobleman, paid two gold florins for an image of the Virgin Mary to be placed here, to provide consolation to prisoners in their final moments before execution. Hence the name of the church that was built here in 1470. It was reconstructed between 1583 and 1600 by Martino Longhi, who provided the early Baroque facade.

The church's 11 side-chapels are owned by noble families and local crafts guild members. In the presbytery is the famed image of Mary, attributed to Antoniazzo Romano.

The main altar is dominated by Giorgio Vasari's The Beheading of St. John (1553) from which the church takes its name. San Giovanni Decollato. In 1490 Pope Innocent VIII gave this site to build a church for a very specialized Florentine confraternity Clad in black robes and hoods, their task was to encourage condemned prisoners to repent and to give them a decent burial after they had been hanged. In the cloisters there are seven manholes (one for women), which received the bodies.

The oratory contains a cycle of frescoes describing the life of St. John the Baptist by the leading Florentine Mannerists, Jacopino del Conte and Francesco Salviati. In style the figures resemble some of those in the Sistine Chapel.

These miraculously wellpreserved Republican temples are particularly appealing by moonlight, in their grassy enclave under the umbrella pines beside the Tiber. They date from the 2nd century BC and were saved for posterity when they were reconsecrated as Christian churches in the Middle Ages. They offer rare examples of combined elements from Greek and Roman architecture.

The rectangular temple (formerly known as the Temple of Fortuna Virilis) was in fact dedicated to Portunus, the god of rivers and ports – a reference to the nearby port > of ancient Rome. Set on a podium, it has four Ionic travertine columns fluted at the front and 12 halfcolumns, embedded in the tufa wall of the cella – the room that housed the image of the god. Nearby is the small circular Temple of Hercules. It is often referred to as the Temple of Vesta because of its similarity to the one in the Forum.

High on the Aventine stands an early Christian basilica. founded by Peter of Illyria in AD 425 and restored to its original simplicity in the early 20th century. Light filters through 9th-century windows upon a wide nave framed by white Corinthian columns supporting an arcade decorated with a marble frieze. Over the main door is a 5th-century blue and gold mosaic dedicatory inscription. The pulpit, carved choir and bishop's throne date from the 9th century.

The church was given to the Dominicans in the 13th century and in the nave is the magnificent mosaic tombstone of one of the first leaders of the order, Muñoz de Zamora (died 1300).

The side portico has 5thcentury paneled doors carved from cypress wood, representing scenes from the Bible, including one of the earliest Crucifixions in existence.

The church is dedicated to two early Christian martyrs, whose remains lie under the main altar. Legend has it that Alexius (Alessio), son of a rich senator living on the site, fled East to avoid an impending marriage and became a pilgrim. Returning home after many years, he died as a servant, unrecognized, under the stairs of the family entrance hall, clutching the manuscript of his story for posterity.

The original 5th-century church has undergone many changes over time. Noteworthy are the 18th-century facade with its five arches, the restored Cosmati doorway and pavement, and the magnificent Romanesque five-story bell tower (1217).

An 18th-century Baroque chapel by Andrea Bergondi houses part of the famous staircase. Other relics include the well from Alexius' family home and the glowing Byzantine Madonna of the Intercession brought from Damascus to Rome at the end of the 10th century.

Caius Cestius, a wealthy praetor (senior Roman magistrate), died in 12 BC. His one claim to fame is his tomb, an imposing pyramid faced in white marble set in the Aurelian Wall near Porta San Paolo. Tucked away in a residential street on the Little Aventine hill, San Saba began life as an oratory for Palestinian monks fleeing from Arab invasions in the 7th century. The existing church dates from the 10th century and has undergone much restoration. The portico houses a fascinating collection of archaeological remains.

The church has three naves in the Greek style and a short fourth 11th-century nave to the left with vestiges of 13thcentury frescoes of the life of St. Nicholas of Bari. Particularly intriguing is a scene of three naked young ladies lying in bed, who are saved from penury by the gift of a bag of gold from St. Nicholas, the future Santa Claus. The beautiful marble inlay in the main door, the floor, and the remains of the choir are all 13th-century Cosmati work.

Circus Maximus 🛛

What was once ancient Rome's largest stadium is today little more than a long grassy esplanade. Set in the valley between the Palatine and Aventine hills, the Circus Maximus was continually embellished and expanded from the 4th century BC until AD 549 when the last races were held. The grandstands held some 300 000 spectators cheering wildly at the horse and chariot races, athletic contests, and animal fights. betting furiously throughout.

The Circus had a central dividing barrier (spina) with seven large egg-shaped objects on it used for counting the laps of a race. These were joined in 33 BC by seven bronze dolphins that served a similar purpose. In 10 BC Augustus built the Imperial box under the Palatine and decorated the spina with the obelisk that now stands in the centre of Piazza del Popolo (see p137). A second obelisk. which was added in the 4th century by Constantine II. is now in Piazza di San Giovanni in Laterano (see pp178-9).

TRASTEVERE

The proud and aggressively Chain independent inhabitants of Trastevere, the area "across the Tiber," consider themselves the most authentic Romans. In one of the most picturesque old quarters of the city, it is still possible to glimpse scenes of everyday life that seem to belong to bygone centuries. There are, however, signs that much of the earthy, proletarian character of the place may soon be destroyed by the proliferation of fashionable restaurants, he proud and aggressively clubs, and boutiques. Some of independent inhabitants of Rome's most fascinating medieval churches lie hidden away in the patchwork of narrow, cobbled backstreets, the only clue to their location an occasional glimpse of a Romanesque bell tower. Santa Cecilia was built on the site of the martyrdom of the patron saint of music, San Francesco a Ripa commemorates St. Francis of Assisi's visit to Rome, and Santa Maria in Trastevere is the traditional center of the spiritual and social life of the area.

Not much is known about Raphael's model and lover. La Fornarina, yet over the centuries she has acquired a name, Margherita, and even a biography. Her father was a Sienese baker (la fornarina means the baker's girl) and his shop was here in Trastevere near Raphael's frescoes in the Villa Farnesina (see pp220-21).

Margherita earned a reputation as a "fallen woman' and Raphael, wishing to be absolved before dving, turned her away from his deathbed. After his death she took refuge in the convent of Santa Apollonia in Trastevere

She is assumed to have been the model for Raphael's famous portrait La Donna Velata in the Palazzo Pitti in Florence.

This church was built on the site of one of the city's oldest tituli (private houses used for Christian worship). ### Santa Cecilia in Trastevere 3

St. Cecilia, aristocrat and patron saint of music, was martyred here in AD 230. After an attempt at scalding her to death, she was beheaded. A church was founded - perhaps in the 4th century - on the site of her house. (The house, beneath the church with the remains of a Roman tannery, is well worth a visit.) Her body turned up in the Catacombs of San Callisto (see p265) and was buried here in the 9th century by Pope Paschal I, who rebuilt the church. A fine apse mosaic survives from this period.

The altar canopy by Arnolfo di Cambio and the fresco of The Last Judgment by Pietro Cavallini, reached through the adjoining convent, date from the 13th century, one of the few periods when Rome had a distinctive artistic style of its own. In front of the altar is a statue of St. Cecilia by Stefano Maderno, who used her miraculously preserved remains as a model when she was briefly disinterred in 1599.

JANICULUM

verlooking the Tiber on the Trastevere side of the river, the Janiculum hill has often played its part in the defense of the city. The last occasion was in 1849 when Garibaldi held off the attacking French troops. The park at the top of the hill is filled with monuments to Garibaldi and his men. A popular place for walks, the park

A Tour of the Janiculum

The long hike to the top of the Janiculum is rewarded by wonderful views over the city. The park's monuments include a lighthouse and statues of Garibaldi and his wife Anita. There is also a cannon which is fired at noon each day. In Via della Lungara, between the Janiculum and the Tiber, stand Palazzo Corsini with its national art collection and the Villa Farnesina, decorated by Raphael for his friend and patron, the fabulously wealthy banker Agostino Chigi.

Tasso's Oak is a memorial to the poet Torquato Tasso, who liked to sit here in the days before he died in 1595. The tree was struck by lightning in 1843.

The Manfredi Lighthouse, built in 1911, was a gift to the city of Rome from Italians in Argentina.

The Monument to Anita Garibaldi by Mario Rutelli was erected in 1932. The great patriot's Brazilian wife lies buried beneath the statue.

Queen Christina's bedroom in the Palazzo Corsini

The history of Palazzo Corsini is intimately entwined with that of Rome. Built for Cardinal Domenico Riario in 1510-12. it has boasted among its many distinguished guests Bramante, the young Michelangelo, Erasmus, and Queen Christina of Sweden, who died here in 1689. The old palazzo was completely rebuilt for Cardinal Neri Corsini by Ferdinando Fuga in 1736. As Via della Lungara is too narrow for a good frontal view, Fuga designed the facade so it could be seen from an angle.

Palazzo Corsini houses the Galleria Nazionale d'Arte Antica, also known as Galleria Corsini. This outstanding collection includes paintings by Rubens, Van Dyck, Murillo, Caravaggio, and Guido Reni, together with 17th- and 18thcentury Italian regional art. The palazzo is also home to the Accademia dei Lincei, a learned society founded in 1603, which once included Galileo among its members.

In 1797 Palazzo Corsini was the backdrop to momentous events: French General Duphot (the fiancé of Napoleon's sister Pauline) was killed here in a skirmish between papal troops and Republicans. The consequent French occupation of the city and the deportation of Pope Pius VI led to the proclamation of a short-lived Roman Republic (1798–9).

Sequoias, palm trees, and splendid collections of orchids and bromeliads are housed in Rome's Botanical Gardens (Orto Botanico). These tranquil gardens contain more than 7,000 plant species from all over the world. Indigenous and exotic species are grouped to illustrate their botanical families and their adaptation to different climates and ecosystems. There are also plants such as the ginkgo that have survived virtually unchanged from earlier eras. The gardens were originally part of the Palazzo Corsini, but since 1983 have belonged to the University of Rome.

The monument, erected in 1895, was the work of Emilio Gallori. Around the pedestal are four smaller sculptures in bronze showing battle scenes and allegorical figures.

San Pietro in Montorio – the church of St. Peter on the Golden Hill – was founded in the Middle Ages near the spot where St. Peter was presumed to have been crucified. It was rebuilt by order of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain at the end of the 15th century, and decorated by outstanding artists of the Renaissance.

Around 1502 Bramante completed what many consider to be the first true Renaissance building in Rome – the Tempietto. The name means simply "little temple." Its circular shape echoes early Christian martyria, chapels built on the site of a saint's martyrdom. This was believed to be the place where St. Peter was crucified.

Bramante chose the Doric order for the 16 columns surrounding the domed chapel. Above the columns is a Classical frieze and a delicate balustrade. Though the scale of the Tempietto is tiny, Bramante's masterly use of Classical proportions creates a satisfyingly harmonious whole. The Tempietto illustrates the great Renaissance dream that the city of Rome would once again relive its ancient glory.

THE ARCHITECT

Baldassarre Peruzzi, painter and architect, arrived in Rome from Siena in 1503 aged 20 and became Bramante's chief assistant. Since the time of Pope Leo the walls have needed much reinforcement and repair. The gateway visible today at Porta Santo Spirito was built by the architect Antonio da Sangallo the Younger in 1543-4. It is framed by two huge bastions that were added in 1564 by Pope Pius IV Medici. Sadly, Sangallo's design for a monumental entrance to the Vatican was never completed: the principal columns come to an end somewhat abruptly in a modern covering of cement.

The oldest ospedale (hospital) in Rome this is said to have been founded as a result of a nightmare experienced by Pope Innocent III (1198-1216). In the dream, an angel showed him the bodies of Rome's unwanted babies dredged up from the Tiber River in fishing nets. As a result, the Pope hastened to build a hospice for sick paupers.

Fresco of an angel in the octagonal chapel of the Hospital of Santo Spirito

In 1475 the hospital was reorganized by Pope Sixtus IV to care for the poor pilgrims expected for the Holy Year. Sixtus's hospital was a radical building. Cloisters divided the different types of patients; one area is still reserved for orphans and their nurses.

Unwanted infants were passed through a revolving barrel-like contraption called the rota, still visible to the left of the central entrance in Borgo Santo Spirito, to guarantee anonymity. Martin Luther, who visited in 1511, was shocked by the number of abandoned children he saw, believing them to be "the sons of the Pope himself."

In the center, under the hospital's conspicuous drum, is an octagonal chapel, where mass was said for patients. This room can be visited while the rest of the building still functions as a hospital (see p377).

The facade of the Carmelite church of Santa Maria in Traspontina

The church occupies the site of an ancient Roman pyramid, believed in the Middle Ages to have been the Tomb of Romulus. The pyramid was destroyed by Pope Alexander VI Borgia, but representations of it survive in the bronze doors at the entrance to St. Peter's and in a Giotto triptych housed in the Vatican Pinacoteca (see p240).

The present church was begun in 1566 to replace an earlier one which had been in the line of fire of the cannons defending Castel Sant'Angelo during the Sack of Rome in 1527. The papal artillery officers insisted that the dome of the new church should be as low as possible. so it was built without a supporting drum. The first chapel to the right is dedicated to the gunners' patron saint, Santa Barbara, and is decorated with warlike motifs. In the third chapel on the left are two columns, popularly thought to be the ones to which SS. Peter and Paul were bound before going to their martyrdom nearby.

The Borgo 🛛

The Borgo's name derives from the German burg, meaning town. Rome's Borgo is where the first pilgrims to St. Peter's were housed in hostels and hospices, often for quite lengthy periods. The first of these foreign colonies, called "schools," was founded in AD 725 by a Saxon, King Ine of Wessex, who wished to live a life of penance and to be buried near the tomb of St. Peter. These days hotels and hostels have made the Borgo a colony of international pilgrims once again. Much of the area's character was lost after redevelopment in the 1930s, but it is still enjoyable to stroll the old narrow streets on either side of Via della Conciliazione.

The palazzo was built in the late 15th century by the wealthy Cardinal Adriano Castellesi, in a style closely resembling Palazzo della Cancelleria (see p149). The cardinal was a much-traveled rogue, who collected vast revenues from the bishopric of Bath and Wells which he was given by his friend King Henry VIIof England. In return he gave Henry his palazzo for use as the seat of the English ambassador to the Holy See. Castellesi was finally stripped of his cardinalate by Pope Leo X Medici and disappeared from history.

Since then the palazzo has had many owners and tenants. In the 17th century it was rented for a time by Queen Christina of Sweden. The Torlonia family, who acquired the building in 1820, owed its fortune to the financial genius of shopkeeper-turned-banker Giovanni Torlonia. He lent money to the impoverished Roman nobility and bought up their property during the Napoleonic Wars.

The monumental Palazzo di Giustizia (Palace of Justice) was built between 1889 and 1910 to house the national law courts. Its riverside facade is crowned with a bronze chariot and fronted by giant statues of the great men of Italian law.

The building was supposed to embody the new order replacing the injustices of papal rule, but it has never endeared itself to the Romans. It was soon dubbed the Palazzaccio (roughly, "the ugly old palazzo") both for its appearance and for the nature of its business. By the 1970s the building was collapsing under its own weight, but it has now been restored.

St. Peter's 1

The center of the Roman Catholic faith, St. Peter's draws pilgrims from all over the world. Few are disappointed when they enter the sumptuously decorated basilica beneath Michelangelo's vast dome.

A shrine was erected on the site of St. Peter's tomb in the 2nd century and the first great basilica, ordered by the Emperor Constantine, was completed around AD 349. By the 15th century it was falling down, so in 1506 Pope Julius II laid the first stone of a new church. It took more than a century to build and all the great architects of the Roman Renaissance and Baroque had a hand in its design. The nave's total length is 715 ft (218 m).

A Guided Tour of St. Peter's

The vast basilica's 615-ft (187-m) long marble-encrusted interior contains 11 chapels and 45 altars in addition to a wealth of precious works of art. Some were salvaged from the original basilica and others commissioned from late Renaissance and Baroque artists, but much of the elaborate decoration is owed to Bernini's work in the mid-17th century. The two side aisles are 250 ft (76 m) long and converge under Michelangelo's enormous dome. The central focus of the building is the Papal Altar beneath Bernini's great baldacchino, filling the space between the four piers which support the dome. From the basilica vou can visit the Grottoes. where the late Pope John Paul II is buried, the Treasury, and St. Peter's Sacristy, or the terrace for panoramic views.

St. Peter was buried c.AD 64 in a necropolis near his crucifixion site at the Circus of Nero. Constantine built a basilica on the burial site in AD 324. In the 15th century the old church was found to be unsafe and had to be demolished. It was rebuilt in the 16th and 17th centuries. By 1614 the facade was ready, and in 1626 the new church was consecrated. KEY Circus of Nero

The buildings that house one of the world's finest art collections were once papal palaces built for Renaissance popes such as Sixtus IV, Innocent VIII, and Julius II. The long courtyards and galleries, linking Innocent VIII's Belvedere Palace to the other buildings, are by Donato Bramante and were commissioned for Julius II in 1503. Most of the later additions to the buildings were made in the 18th century, when priceless works of art were first put on show. This complex of museums also houses the Sistine Chapel and the Raphael Rooms, and should not be missed. Note that no bare knees or shoulders are allowed.

Exploring the Vatican Museums

Four centuries of papal patronage and connoisseurship have resulted in one of the world's great collections of Classical and Renaissance art. The Vatican houses many of the great archaeological finds of central Italy, including the Laocoön group, discovered in 1506 on the Esquiline, the Apollo del Belvedere, and the Etruscan bronze known as the Mars of Todi. During the Renaissance, parts of the museums were decorated with wonderful frescoes commissioned for the Sistine Chapel, the Raphael Rooms, and the Borgia Apartment.

Visitors have to follow a one-way system. It is best to concentrate on a single collection or to choose one of the four suggested itineraries. These are color-coded so that you can follow them throughout the museums. They vary in length from 90 minutes to 5 hours. If you are planning a long visit, make sure you allow plenty of time for resting. ## Exploring the Vatican's Collections

The Vatican's greatest treasures are its Greek and Roman antiquities. These have been on display since the 18th century. The 19th century saw the addition of exciting discoveries from Etruscan tombs and excavations in Egypt. In the Pinacoteca (art gallery) there is a small, choice collection of paintings, including works by Raphael, Titian, and Leonardo. Works by great painters and sculptors are also on view throughout the older parts of the museums in the form of sumptuous decorations commissioned by the Renaissance popes.

EGYPTIAN AND ASSYRIAN ART

The Egyptian collection contains finds from 19th- and 20th-century excavations in Egypt and statues which were brought to Rome in Imperial times. There are also Roman imitations of Egyptian art from Hadrian's Villa (see b269) and from the Campus Martius district of ancient Rome. Egyptian-style statuary from Hadrian's Villa was used to decorate the Greek Cross Room, the entrance to the new wing built in 1780 by Michelangelo Simonetti.

The genuine Egyptian works, exhibited on the lower floor of the Belvedere Palace, include statues, mummies, mummy cases, and funerary artifacts. There is also a large collection of documents written on papyrus, the paper the ancient Egyptians made from reeds. Among the main treasures is a colossal granite statue of Queen Tuia, the mother of Rameses II, found on the site of the Horti Sallustiani gardens (see p251) in 1714. The statue, which dates from the 13th century BC, may have been brought to Rome by the Emperor Caligula (reigned AD 37–41), who had an unhealthy interest in pharaohs and in his own mother, Agrippina.

Also noteworthy are the head of a statue of Montuhotep IV (21st century BC), the beautiful mummy case of Queen Hetepheres, and the tomb of Iri, the guardian of the Pyramid of Cheops (26th century BC).

The Assyrian Stairway is decorated with fragments of reliefs from the palaces of the kings of Nineveh (8th century BC). These depict the military exploits of King Sennacherib and his son Sargon II, and show scenes from Assyrian and Chaldean mythology.

ETRUSCAN AND OTHER PRE-ROMAN ART

This collection comprises artifacts from pre-Roman civilizations in Etruria and Latium from Neolithic times to the 1st century BC, when these ancient populations were assimilated into the Roman state. Pride of place in the Gregorian Etruscan Museum goes to the objects found in the Regolini-Galassi tomb. excavated in 1836 at the necropolis of Cerveteri (see p271). The tomb was found intact and vielded numerous everyday household objects, plus a throne, a bed, and a funeral cart all cast in bronze dating from the 7th century BC Beautiful black vases delightful terracotta figurines and bronze statues such as the famous Mars of Todi. displayed in the Room of the Bronzes, show the Etruscans to have been a highly civilized, sophisticated people.

A number of Greek vases that were found in Etruscan tombs are on display in the Vase Collection. The Room of the Italiot Vases contains only vases produced locally in the Greek cities of southern Italy and in Etruria itself. These date from the 3rd to the 1st century BC.

GREEK AND ROMAN ART

The greater part of the Vatican Museums is dedicated to Greek and Roman art. Exhibits line connecting corridors and vestibules; walls and floors display fine mosaics; and famous sculptures decorate the main courtyards.

The first serious organization of the collection took place in the reign of Julius II (1503-13) around Bramante's Belvedere Courtvard. The prize pieces form the nucleus of the 18thcentury Pio-Clementine Museum. In the pavilions of the Octagonal Courtvard and in the surrounding rooms are sculptures considered among the greatest achievements of Western art. The Apoxyomenos (an athlete wiping his body after a race) and the Apollo del Belvedere are high-quality Roman copies of Greek originals of about 320 BC. The magnificent Laocoön, sculpted by three artists from Rhodes, had long been known to exist from a description by Pliny the Elder. It was rediscovered near the ruins of the Domus Aurea (see p175) in 1506. Classical works such as these had a profound influence on Michelangelo and other Renaissance artists.

The much smaller Chiaramonti Museum, named after Pope Pius VII Chiaramonti, was laid out by Canova in the early 19th century. It includes a striking colossal head of the goddess Athene. The Braccio Nuovo, an extension of the Chiaramonti, decorated with Roman floor mosaics, contains a statue of Augustus from the villa of his wife Livia at Prima Porta. Its pose is based on the famous Doryphoros by the Greek sculptor Polyclitus, of which there is a Roman copy on display opposite.

Exhibits in the Vase Rooms range from the Greek geometric style (8th century BC) to black-figure vases from Corinth. such as the famous vase by Exekias. with Achilles and Ajax playing a game similar to draughts (530 BC), and the later red-figure type, such as the kvlix (a wide shallow cup) with Oedipus and the Sphinx from the 5th century BC. A stairway links this section to the Gallery of the Candelabra and the Room of the Biga (a two-horse chariot) The horses and harness were added in the 18th century.

The Gregorian Profane Museum, housed in a new wing, charts the evolution of Roman art from dependence upon Greek models to a recognizably Roman style.

Original Greek works include large marble fragments from the Parthenon in Athens.

There is also a Roman copy of Athene and Marsyas by Myron, which was part of the decoration of the Parthenon. Totally Roman in character are two reliefs known as the Rilievi della Cancelleria, because they were discovered beneath the Palazzo della Cancelleria (see p149) in the 1930s. They show military parades of the Emperor Vespasian and his son

Domitian. This section also has fine Roman floor mosaics. There are two from the Baths of Caracalla (see p197), depicting athletes and referees. They date from the 3rd century AD. Most striking of all is a mosaic that creates the impression of an unswept floor, covered with debris after a meal. Away from the main Classical collections, in one of the rooms of the Vatican Library, is

EARLY CHRISTIAN AND MEDIEVAL ART

The main collection of early Christian antiquities is in the Pio-Christian Museum founded in the last century by Pope Pius IX and formerly housed in the Lateran Palace. It contains inscriptions and sculpture from catacombs and early Christian basilicas. The sculpture consists chiefly of reliefs decorating sarcophagi, though the most striking work is a free-standing 4th-century statue of the Good Shepherd. The sculpture's chief interest lies in the way it blends Biblical episodes with pagan mythology. Christianity adopted Classical images so that its doctrines could be understood in clear visual terms. The idealized pastoral figure of the shepherd, for example, became Christ himself, while bearded philosophers turned into the Apostles. At the same time. Christianity laid claim to be the spiritual and cultural heir of the Roman Empire.

The first two rooms of the Pinacoteca are dedicated to late medieval art, mostly tempera-painted wooden panels which served as altarpieces. The outstanding work is Giotto's altarpiece dating from about 1300 known as the Stefaneschi Triptych. It expresses much the same theme as the early Christian works the continuity between the Classical world of the Roman Empire and the new order of Christian Europe. The crucifixion of St. Peter takes place between two landmarks of ancient Rome the Pyramid of Caius Cestius (see  $p_{205}$ ) and the pyramid known in the Middle Ages as the Tomb of Romulus, which stood near the Vatican. The triptych, which decorated the main altar of old St. Peter's, includes portraits of Pope St. Celestine V (reigned 1294), and of the donor, Cardinal Jacopo Stefaneschi, shown offering the triptych to St. Peter.

The Vatican Library has a number of medieval treasures exhibited rather haphazardly in showcases: these include woven and embroidered cloths, reliquaries, enamels, and icons. One of the aims of the 18th-century reorganization of the Vatican collections was to glorify Christian works by contrasting them with earlier pagan creations. In the long Lapidary Gallery over 3.000 stone tablets with Christian and pagan inscriptions are displayed on opposite walls. The world's greatest collection of its kind, it may be visited only with special permission.

15TH- TO 19TH-CENTURY ART

The Renaissance popes, many of whom were cultured connoisseurs of the arts, considered it their duty to sponsor the leading painters, sculptors, and goldsmiths of the age.

Pietà by the Venetian artist Giovanni Bellini (1430–1516)

The galleries around the Cortile del Belvedere were all decorated by great artists between the 16th and the 19th centuries. The Gallerv of Tapestries is hung with tapestries woven in Brussels to designs by students of Raphael; the Apartment of Pope Pius V has beautiful 15th-century Flemish tapestries: and the Gallery of Maps is frescoed with 16thcentury maps of ancient and contemporary Italy. When you go to visit the Raphael Rooms (see bb242-3). you should not overlook the nearby Room of the Chiaroscuri and Pope Nicholas V's tiny private chapel, frescoed by Fra Angelico between 1447 and 1451 Similarly, before reaching the Sistine Chapel (see pp244-7), visit the Borgia Apartment.

Many important works by Renaissance masters are on show in the Pinacoteca (art gallery). Highlights among the works by 15th-century painters are a fine Pietà by the Venetian Giovanni Bellini and Leonardo da Vinci's unfinished St. Jerome. Of the great 16th-century works, do not miss the fine altarpiece by Titian, the Crucifixion of St. Peter by Guido Reni, the Deposition by Caravaggio, and the Communion of St. Jerome by Domenichino. Raphael has a whole room dedicated to his work. It contains the beautiful Madonna of Foligno and the Transfiguration as well as eight tapestries made to his designs.

MODERN RELIGIOUS ART

Modern artists exhibited in the Vatican Museums face daunting competition from the great works of the past. Few modern works are displayed conspicuously, the exceptions being Momo's spiral staircase of 1932, which greets visitors as they enter the museums, and Giò Pomodoro's abstract sculpture in the center of the Cortile della Pigna.

In 1973 a contemporary art collection was inaugurated by Pope Paul VI. Housed in the Borgia Apartment, it includes over 800 exhibits by modern artists from all over the world. donated by collectors or the artists themselves. Works in a great variety of media show many contrasting approaches to religious subjects. There are paintings, drawings, engravings, and sculpture by 19th- and 20th-century artists. as well as mosaics, stained glass, ceramics, and tapestries. Well-known modern painters such as Georges Braque, Paul Klee, Edvard Munch, and Graham Sutherland are all represented. There are also drawings by Henry Moore. ceramics by Picasso, and stained glass by Fernand Léger. Projects for modern church ornaments include Matisse's decorations for the church of St. Paul de Vence, Luigi Fontana's models for the bronze doors of Milan cathedral, and Emilio Greco's panels for the doors of

Raphael Rooms

Pope Julius II's private apartments were built above those of his hated predecessor, Alexander VI, one of the Borgias, who died in 1503. Julius was impressed with Raphael's work and chose him to redecorate the four

HALL OF CONSTANTINE ①

The frescoes in this room were started in 1517, three years before Raphael's death, but Raphael himself probably had little hand in their execution. As a result they are not held in the same high regard as those in the other rooms. The work was completed in 1525 in the reign of Pope Clement VII by Giulio Romano and two other former pupils of Raphael, Giovanni Francesco Penni and Raffaellino del Colle.

The theme of the decoration is the triumph of Christianity over paganism. The four major frescoes show scenes from the life of Constantine and include his Vision of the Cross and his victory over his rival Maxentius at The Battle of the Milvian Bridge, for which Raphael had provided a preparatory sketch. In both The Baptism of Constantine and The Donation of Constantine, the figure of Pope Sylvester (see p170) was given the rooms (stanze). Raphael and his pupils began the task in 1508, replacing existing works by several better-known artists. including Raphael's own teacher, Perugino, The work took over 16 years and Raphael himself died before its completion. The frescoes express the religious and philosophical ideals of the Renaissan ce. They quickly established Raphael's reputation as an artist in Rome, putting him on a par with Michelangelo, then working on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

ROOM OF HELIODORUS ②

This private antechamber was decorated by Raphael between 1512 and 1514. The main frescoes show the miraculous protection granted to all the Church's ministers, doctrines, and property. The room's name refers to the fresco on the right, The Expulsion of Heliodorus from the Temple. This shows a story from Jewish history, in which a thief called Heliodorus is felled by a horseman as he tries to make off with the treasure from the Temple of Jerusalem. The scene is witnessed by the Pope, borne on a litter by courtiers. The incident is also a thinly veiled reference to Julius II's success in driving foreign armies out of Italy. In The Meeting of Leo I and Attila Raphael pays a similar compliment to the Pope's political skill. Pope Leo was originally given the face of Julius II, but after his death, Raphael substituted the features of Julius's successor, Leo X. The Mass at who doubted that the bread and wine really were the body and blood of Christ suddenly saw the host bleed while he was celebrating mass. Julius II appears in this fresco, accompanied by a colorful group of Swiss guards.

Julius appears yet again as St. Peter in The Liberation of St. Peter. This fresco is remarkable for its dramatic lighting effects, achieved despite the painting's awkward shape and its position above a window.

ROOM OF THE SEGNATURA ③

The name is derived from a special council which met in this room to sign official documents. The frescoes here were completed between 1508 and 1511. The scheme Raphael followed was dictated by Pope Julius II. It reflects the Humanist belief that there could be perfect harmony between Classical culture and Christianity in their mutual search for truth.

The Dispute over the Holy Sacrament, the first fresco completed by Raphael for Pope Julius, represents the triumph of religion and spiritual truth. The consecrated host is shown at the center of the painting. This links the group of learned scholars, who discuss its significance, to the Holy Trinity and the saints floating on clouds up above.

On the opposite wall, The School of Athens (see p32) is a bustling scene centred around the debate on the search for truth between Greek philosophers Plato and Aristotle. It also features portraits of many of Raphael's contemporaries, including Leonardo da Vinci, Bramante, and Michelangelo. The other works include a portrait of the bearded Pope Julius II, who in 1511 vowed not to shave until he managed to rid Italy of all usurpers.

ROOM OF THE FIRE IN THE BORGO ④

This was originally the dining room, but when the decoration was completed under Pope Leo X, it became a music room. All the frescoes exalt the reigning Pope by depicting events in the lives of his namesakes, the 9thcentury Popes Leo III and IV. The main frescoes were finished by two of Raphael's assistants between 1514 and 1517. following their master's own plans. The most famous. The Fire in the Borgo, was painted from Raphael's designs and reflects his maturity as an artist. It celebrates the miracle that took place in 847. when Pope Leo IV extinguished a fire raging in the Borgo (see p228) by making the sign of the cross. The incident is likened to the flight of Aeneas from Troy described by Virgil. The figure of Aeneas appears in the foreground carrying his father on his back. This borrowing of an event from Classical legend shows a new willingness to experiment on the part of Raphael. Sadly, his pupils did not always follow his designs faithfully and this, combined with some poor restoration, has spoilt the work.

The decoration of the chapel walls was completed between 1534 and 1541 by Michelangelo, who added the great altar wall fresco, The Last Iudgment.

chose it as a warning to Catholics to adhere to their faith in the turmoil of the Reformation. In fact the work conveys the artist's own tormented attitude to his faith. It offers neither the certainties of Christian orthodoxy, nor the ordered view of Classicism.

In a dynamic, emotional composition, the figures are caught in a vortex of motion. The dead are torn from their graves and hauled up to face Christ the Judge, whose athletic, muscular figure is the focus of all the painting's movement.

Christ shows little sympathy for the agitated saints around him, clutching the instruments of their martyrdom. Neither is any pity shown for the damned, hurled down to the demons in hell. Here Charon, pushing people off his boat into the depths of Hades, and the infernal judge Minos, are taken from Dante's Inferno. Minos has ass's ears, and is a portrait of courtier Biagio da Cesena, who had objected to the nude figures in the fresco. Michelangelo's self-portrait is on the skin held by the martyr St. Bartholomew.

WALL FRESCOES

Detail from Botticelli's fresco Temptations of Christ

When the Sistine Chapel was built, the papacy was a strong political power with vast accumulated wealth. In 1475 Pope Sixtus IV was able to summon some of the greatest painters of his day to decorate the chapel. Among the artists employed were Perugino, who was Raphael's master and is often credited with overseeing the project, Sandro Botticelli, Domenico Ghirlandaio, Cosimo Rosselli and Luca Signorelli. Their work on the chapel's frescoes took from

Although frequently overlooked by visitors who concentrate on Michelangelo's work, the frescoes along the side walls of the chapel include some of the finest works of 15thcentury Italian art. The two cycles of frescoes represent scenes from the lives of Moses and Christ. Above them in the spaces between the windows are portraits of the earliest popes, painted by various artists, including Botticelli.

The fresco cycles start at the altar end of the chapel, with the story of Christ on the right-hand wall and that of Moses on the left. Originally there were two paintings, The Birth of Christ and The Finding of Moses, on the wall behind the altar, but these were both destroyed to make way for Michelangelo's Last Judgment. The final paintings of the two cycles are also lost. They were on the entrance wall, which collapsed during the 16th century. When the wall was restored, they were replaced with poor substitutes.

As was customary at the time, each fresco contains a series of scenes, linked thematically to the central episode. Hidden meanings and symbols connect each painting with its counterpart on the opposite wall, and there are also many allusions to contemporary events.

The elaborate architectural details in the frescoes include familiar Roman monuments. The Arch of Constantine (see p91) provides the backdrop for the Punishment of the Rebels by Botticelli, the fifth panel in the cycle of Moses, in which the artist himself appears as the last figure but one on the right. Two similar arches appear in the painting opposite, Perugino's Handing over the Keys to St Peter.

Moses was both spiritual and temporal leader of his people. He called down the wrath of God on those who challenged his decisions, thus setting a precedent for the power exercised by the Pope. In Handing over the Keys to St. Peter, Christ confers spiritual and temporal authority on St. Peter by giving him the keys to the Kingdoms of Heaven and Earth. The golden-domed building in the center of the vast piazza represents both the Temple of Jerusalem and the Church, as founded by Peter, the first Pope. The fifth figure on the right is thought to be a self-portrait by Perugino.

Hospital of Santo Spirito, rebuilt in 1475 by Sixtus IV (see p226). Here the devil is disguised in the habit of a Franciscan monk. Portraits of both Botticelli and Filippino Lippi are visible in the left hand corner. A portrait of the Pope's nephew, Girolamo Riario, appears in the painting of the Crossing of the Red Sea by Rosselli, in which the sea is literally red. This painting also commemorates the papal victory at Campomorto in 1482.

Sistine Chapel: The Ceiling

Michelangelo frescoed the ceiling for Pope Julius II between 1508 and 1512, working on specially designed scaffolding. The main panels, which chart the Creation of the World and Fall of Man, are surrounded by subjects from the Old and New Testaments – except for the Classical Sibyls who are said to have foreseen the birth of Christ. In the 1980s the ceiling was restored, revealing colors of an unsuspected vibrancy.

Restorers used computers, photography, and spectrum analysis to inspect the fresco before cleaning began. They were therefore able to detect and remove thechanges previous restorers had made to Michelangelo's original work. Analysis showed that the ceiling had been cleaned with materials ranging from bread to retsina wine. The restoration then revealed the familiarly

However, after examining the work, most experts agreed that the new colors probably matched those painted by Michelangelo.

Castel Sant'Angelo

The massive fortress of Castel Sant'Angelo takes its name from the vision that Pope Gregory the Great had of the Archangel Michael on this site. It began life in AD 139 as Emperor Hadrian's mausoleum. Since then it has had many roles: as part of Emperor

Aurelian's city wall, as a medieval citadel and prison, and as the residence of the popes in times of political unrest. From the dank cells in the lower levels to the fine apartments of the Renaissance popes above, a 58room museum covers all aspects of the castle's history. #### PROTECTING THE POPE

The Vatican Corridor leads from the Vatican Palace to Castel Sant'Angelo. It was built in 1277 to provide an escape route when the Pope was in danger. The pentagonal ramparts built around the castle during the 17th century improved its defenses in times of siege.

The Rooms of Clement VIII are inscribed with the family crest of the Aldobrandini Pope (1592–1605).

The spiral ramp was the entrance to the mausoleum. The Hall of Justice is / decorated with a fresco of The Angel of Justice by Domenico Zaga (1545).

VIA VENETO

n Imperial Rome, this was a suburb where rich families owned luxurious villas and gardens. Ruins from this era can be seen in the excavations in Piazza Sallustio, named after the most extensive gardens in the area, the Horti Sallustiani. After the Sack of Rome in the 5th century, the area reverted to open countryside. Not until the 17th century did it recover its lost splendor, with the building of Palazzo Barberini and the now-vanished Villa Ludovisi When Rome became capital of Italy in 1870, the Ludovisi sold their land for development. They kept a plot for a new house, but tax on the profits from the sale was so high, they had to sell that too. By 1900, Via

GETTING THERE

This is one of the easiest parts of Rome to reach by public transportation. Barberini and Repubblica Metro stations on line A are very handy, and Stazione Termini is only 10–15 minutes' walk away. The Via Veneto itself starts at Piazza Barberini, well served by buses from all parts of the city. The 95 goes the whole length of Via Veneto to Porta Pinciana. Other useful routes include the 52, 53, 63, 80, 116, and 119.

Street by Street: Via Veneto

The streets around Via Veneto, though within the walls of ancient Rome, contain little dating from before the unification of Italy in 1870. With its hotels, restaurants, bars, and travel agencies, the area is the center of 21st-century tourism in the way that Piazza di Spagna was the hub of the tourist trade in the Rome of the 18th-century Grand Tour. However, glimpses of the old city can be seen among the modern streets. These include Santa Maria della Concezione, the church of the Capuchin friars, whose convent once stood in its own gardens. In the 17th century Palazzo Barberini was built here for the powerful papal family. Bernini's Fontana del Tritone and Fontana delle Api have stood in Piazza Barberini since it was the meeting place of cart tracks entering the city from surrounding vineyards.

Pope Urban VIII's brother. Antonio Barberini was a cardinal and a Capuchin friar. In 1626 he founded this plain, unassuming church at what is now the foot of the Via Veneto. When he died he was buried not like most cardinals, in a grand marble sarcophagus, but below a simple flag-stone near the altar, with the bleak epitaph in Latin: "Here lies dust, ashes, nothing."

The grim reality of death is illustrated even more graphically in the crypt beneath the church, where generations of Capuchin friars decorated the walls of the five vaulted chapels with the bones and skulls of their departed brethren. In all, some 4,000 skeletons were used over about 100 vears to create this macabre memento mori started in the late 17th century. Some of the bones are wired together to form Christian symbols such as crowns of thorns. sacred hearts, and crucifixes. There are also some complete skeletons, including one of a Barberini princess who died as a child. At the exit, an inscription in Latin reads: "What you are, we used to be. What we are, you will be."

When Maffei Barberini became Pope Urban VIII in 1623 he decided to build a grand palace for his family on the fringes of the city, overlooking a ruined temple. The architect, Carlo Maderno, designed it as a typical rural villa, with wings extending into the surrounding gardens. Maderno died in 1629 and Bernini took over, assisted by Borromini. The peculiar pediments on some of the top floor windows, and the oval staircase inside, are almost certainly by Borromini.

Of the many sumptuously decorated rooms, the most striking is the Gran Salone, with a dazzling illusionistic ceiling fresco by Pietro da Cortona. The palazzo also houses paintings from the 13th to the 16th centuries, part of the Galleria Nazionale d'Arte Antica, with important works by Filippo Lippi, El Greco, and Caravaggio. There is also a Holbein portrait of King Henry VIII of England dressed for his wedding to Anne of Cleves. Of greater local significance are Guido Reni's Beatrice Cenci, the young woman executed for planning her father's murder (see p152), and La Fornarina, traditionally identified as a portrait of Raphael's mistress (see p210), although not necessarily painted by him.

Santa Maria della Vittoria is an intimate Baroque church with a lavishly decorated candlelit interior It contains one of Bernini's most ambitious sculptural works. The Ecstasy of St. Teresa (1646), centerpiece of the Cornaro Chapel, built to resemble a miniature theater It even has an audience: sculptures of the chapel's benefactor. Cardinal Federico Cornaro, and his ancestors sit in boxes, as if watching and discussing the scene occurring in front of them.

Visitors may be shocked or thrilled by the apparently physical nature of St. Teresa's ecstasy. She lies on a cloud. her mouth half open and her evelids closed, with rippling drapery covering her body. Looking over her with a smile. which from different angles can appear either tender or cruel, is a curly-haired angel holding an arrow with which he is about to pierce the saint's body for a second time. The marble figures are framed and illuminated by rays of divine light materialized in bronze.

The villa and its park were designed in 1605 for Cardinal Scipione Borghese, nephew of Pope Paul V. The park was the first of its kind in Rome. It contained 400 newly planted pine trees, garden sculpture by Bernini's father. Pietro. and dramatic waterworks built by Giovanni Fontana. The layout of the formal gardens was imitated by other prominent Roman families at Villa Ludovisi and Villa Doria Pamphili.

In the early 19th century Prince Camillo Borghese assembled the family's magnificent art collection in the Casino Borghese, now the home of the Galleria and Museo Borghese.

British School at Rome, designed by Edwin Lutyens in 1911

In 1901 the park became the property of the Italian state. Within its 4-mile (6-km) circumference there are now museums and galleries, foreign academies and schools of archaeology, a zoo, a riding school, a grassy amphitheater, an artificial lake. an aviary, and an array of summer houses, fountains, Neoclassical statuary and exotic follies

There are several ways into the park, including a monumental entrance on Piazzale Flaminio. built for Prince Camillo Borghese in 1825 by Luigi Canina. Other conveniently sited entrances are at Porta Pinciana at the end of Via Veneto and from the Pincio Gardens (see p136).

Neoclassical Temple of Diana

Piazza di Siena, a pleasantly open, grass-covered amphitheater surrounded by tall umbrella pines, was the inspiration for Ottorino Respighi's famous symphonic poem The Pines of Rome, written in 1924. Near Piazza di Siena are the so-called Casina di Raffaello, said to have been owned by Raphael, and the 18th-century Palazzetto dell' Orologio. These were summer houses from which people enjoyed the beautiful vistas across the park. Many buildings in the park were originally surrounded by formal gardens: the Casino Borghese and the nearby 17th-century Casino della Meridiana and its aviary (uccelliera) have both kept their geometrical flowerbeds. Throughout the park the intersections of paths and avenues are marked by fountains and statues. West of Piazza di Siena is the Fontana dei Cavalli Marini (the Fountain of the Seahorses) added during the villa's 18thcentury remodeling. Walking through the park you will encounter Statue of the English poet statues of and Victor Hugo, and a gloomy equestrian King Umberto I.

Dotted around the park are picturesque temples made to look like ruins, including a circular Temple of Diana between Piazza di Siena and Porta Pinciana, and a Temple of Faustina, wife of Emperor Antoninus Pius, on the hill north of Piazza di Siena. The nearby medieval-looking Fortezzuola by Canina contains the works of the sculptor Pietro Canonica, who lived in the building and died there in 1959. In the garden stands Canonica's Monument to the Alpino and his Mule, which honors the humblest protagonists in Italy's alpine battles against Austria in World War I.

In the center of the park is the Giardino del Lago, its main entrance marked by an

Ionic temple dedicated to Aesculapius, built on the lake island

18th-century copy of the Arch of Septimius Severus. The garden has an artificial lake complete with an lonic temple to Aesculapius, the god of healing, by the 18th-century architect Antonio Asprucci. Rowboats and ducks make the lake a favorite with children, banana trees and bamboo grow around the shore, and clearings are studded with sculptures.

Surrounded by flowerbeds south of the lake is the Art Nouveau Fontana dei Fauni, one of the garden's prettiest sculptures. In a clearing close to the entrance on Viale Pietro Canonica are the original Tritons of the Fontana del Moro in Piazza Navona (see p120) – they were moved here and replaced by copies in the 19th century.

From the northwest the park is entered by the Viale delle Belle Arti, where the Galleria Nazionale d'Arte Moderna houses a good collection of 19th- and 20th-century paintings. The Art Nouveau character of the area dates from the International Exhibition held here in 1911, for which pavilions were built by many nations, the most impressive being the British School at Rome, by Edwin Lutyens, with a facade adapted from the upper west portico of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. It is now a research institute for Classical studies, history, and the visual arts. Nearby statues include one of Simon Bolivar and other liberators of Latin America.

In the northeastern corner of the park lie the Museo Zoologico and a small zoo, the Bioparco, where the emphasis is on conservation. Nearby, the pretty 16th-century Villa Giulia houses a worldfamous collection of Etruscan and other pre-Roman remains. Another Renaissance building of importance is the Palazzina of Pius IV, close to the Via Flaminia entrance, designed by the architect Vignola in 1552. It now houses the Italian embassy to the Holy See.

Named after its principal benefactor, the Museo Carlo Bilotti is situated in the center of the Villa Borghese. This former orangery has been transformed into a modern art gallery boasting works by Giorgio de Chirico, Andy Warhol, and Gino Severini.

The villa and park were laid out by Cardinal Scipione Borghese, favorite nephew of Paul V, who had the house designed for pleasure and entertainment. The hedonistic cardinal was also an extravagant patron of the arts and he commissioned sculptures from the young Bernini which now rank among his most famous works. Scipione also opened his pleasure park to the public. Today the villa houses the superb private Borghese collection of sculptures and paintings in the Museo and Galleria Borghese.

Villa Giulia 🛛

This villa was built as a country retreat for Pope Julius III, and was designed for entertaining rather than as a permanent home. It once housed an impressive collection of statues – 160 boatloads were sent to the Vatican after the pope died in 1555. The villa, gardens, pavilions, and fountains were designed by exceptional architects:

Vignola (designer of the Gesù), Vasari, and the sculptor Ammannati. Michelangelo also contributed. The villa's main features are its facade, the courtyard and garden, and the nymphaeum. Since 1889 Villa Giulia has housed the Museo Nazionale Etrusco, with its outstanding collection of pre-Roman antiquities from central Italy.

★ Sarcophagus of the Spouses

This 6th-century BC masterpiece, from Cerveteri, shows a dead couple at the eternal banquet.

MUSEUM GUIDE

This is the most important Etruscan museum in Italy, bousing artifacts from most of the major excavations in Tuscany and Lazio. Rooms 1-10 and 23-34 are arranged by site and include Vulci, Todi, Veio, and Cerveteri, while private collections are in rooms 11-22.

The round church of Santa Costanza was first built as a mausoleum for Emperor Constantine's daughters Constantia and Helena, in the early 4th century. The dome and its drum are supported by a circular arcade resting on 12 magnificent pairs of granite columns. The ambulatory that runs around the outside of the central arcade has a barrel-vaulted ceiling decorated with wonderful 4th-century mosaics of flora and fauna and charming scenes of a Roman grape harvest. In a niche on the far side of the church from the entrance is a replica of Constantia's ornately carved porphyry sarcophagus. The original was moved to the Vatican Museums in 1790.

Constantia's sanctity is debatable – she was described by the historian Marcellinus as a fury incarnate, constantly goading her equally unpleasant husband Hannibalianus to violence. Her canonization was probably the result of some confusion with a saintly nun of the same name.

The church of Sant'Agnese stands among a group of early Christian buildings which includes the ruins of a covered cemetery, some extensive catacombs, and the crypt where the 13-year-old martyr St. Agnes was buried in AD 304. Agnes was exposed naked by order of Emperor Diocletian, furious that she should have rejected the advances of a young man at his court, but her hair miraculously grew to protect her modesty (see p121).

The church is said to have been built at the request of the Emperor Constantine's daughter, Constantia, after she had prayed at the tomb of St. Agnes for delivery from leprosy.

Though much altered over the centuries the form and much of the structure of the 4th-century basilica remain intact. In the 7th-century apse mosaic St. Agnes appears as a beieweled Byzantine empress in a stole of gold and a violet robe. According to tradition she appeared like this eight days after her death holding a white lamb. Every year on January 21 two lambs are blessed on the church altar and a vestment called the pallium is woven from their wool. Every newly appointed archbishop is sent a pallium by the Pope.

Just outside the eastern wall of the city stands the church of San Lorenzo. Roasted slowly to death in AD 258. St. Lawrence was one of the most revered of Rome's early Christian martyrs. The first basilica erected over his burial place by Constantine was largely rebuilt in 576 by Pope Pelagius II. Close by stood a 5th-century church dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The intriguing two-level church we see today is the result of these two churches being knocked into one. This process, started in the 8th century, was completed in the 13th century by Pope Honorius III. when the nave, the portico, and much of the decoration were added. The remains of St. Lawrence are in the choir of the 6th-century church (beneath the 13th-century high altar).

Via Appia Antica 🛛

🔜 118, 218. See Walks pp284-5.

The first part of the Via Appia was built in 312 BC by the Censor Appius Claudius Caecus. When it was extended to the ports of Benevento. Taranto, and Brindisi in 190 BC. the road became Rome's link with its expanding empire in the East. It was the route taken by the funeral processions of the dictator Sulla (78 BC) and Emperor Augustus (AD 14) and it was along this road that St. Paul was led a prisoner to Rome in AD 56. Gradually abandoned during the Middle Ages, the road was restored by Pope Pius IV in the mid-16th century. It is lined with ruined family tombs and collective burial places known as columbaria<sup>1</sup> Beneath the fields on either side lies a vast maze of catacombs. Today the road starts at Porta San Sebastiano (see p196). Major Christian sights include the church of Domine Ouo Vadis?. built where St. Peter is said to have met Christ while fleeing from Rome and the Catacombs of San Callisto and San Sebastiano. The tombs lining the road include those of Cecilia Metella (see p266) and Romulus (son of Emperor Maxentius) who died in 309. The ancient Villa dei Ouintilli is nearby, at Via Appia Nuova 1092 (phone 06-481 5576).

Catacombs of San Callisto **©

In burying their dead in underground cemeteries outside the city walls, the early Christians were obeying the laws of the time: it was not because of persecution. So many saints were buried that the catacombs became shrines and places of pilgrimage.

The vast Catacombs of San Callisto are on four different levels and only partly explored. Via Appia Antica

The rooms and connecting passageways are hewn out of volcanic tufa. The dead were placed in niches known as loculi, which held two or three bodies. The most important rooms were decorated with stucco and frescoes. The area that can be visited includes the Crypt of the Popes, where many of the early popes were buried, and the Crypt of Santa Cecilia, where the saint's body was discovered in 820 before being moved to her church in Trastevere (see p211).

This network of catacombs is the largest in Rome. Many of the tombs from the 1st and 2nd centuries AD have no Christian connection. In the burial chambers there are frescoes of both Classical and Christian scenes, including one of the earliest depictions of Christ as the Good Shepherd. On the evening of March 24, 1944. Nazi forces took 335 prisoners to this abandoned quarry south of Rome and shot them at point blank range. The execution was in reprisal for a bomb attack that had killed 32 German soldiers. The victims included various political prisoners, 73 Jews, and ten other civilians, among them a priest and a 14-yearold boy. The Germans blew up the tunnels where the massacre had taken place, but a local peasant had witnessed the scene and later helped find the corpses. The site is now a memorial to the values of the Resistance against the Nazi occupation, which gave birth to the modern Italian Republic (see p185). A forbidding bunker-like monument houses the rows of identical tombs containing the victims.

Beside it is a museum of the Resistance. Interesting works of modern sculpture include The Martyrs, by Francesco Coccia, and the gates shaped like a wall of thorns by Mirko Basaldella.

One of the most famous landmarks on the Via Appia Antica is the huge drumshaped tomb built for the noblewoman Cecilia Metella. Her father and husband were rich patricians and successful generals of late Republican Rome, but hardly anything is known about the woman herself. Byron muses over her unknown destiny in his poem Childe Harold.

In 1302 Pope Boniface VIII donated the tomb to his family, the Caetani. They incorporated it in a fortified castle that blocked the Via Appia, allowing them to control the traffic on the road and exact high tolls.

The marble facing of the tomb was pillaged by another Pope, Sixtus V, at the end of the 16th century.

The Esposizione Universale di Roma (EUR), a suburb south of the city, was built for an international exhibition a kind of "Work Olympics." that was planned for 1942, but never took place because of the war. The architecture was intended to glorify Fascism and the style of the public buildings is very overblown and rhetorical. The eerie shape of the Palazzo della Civiltà del Lavoro (The Palace of the Civilization of Work) is an unmistakable landmark for people arriving from Fiumicino airport.

The scheme was completed in the 1950s. In terms of town planning, EUR has been quite successful and people are still keen to live here. The great marble halls house several government offices and museums.

The Museo della Civiltà Romana displays a vast scale model of Rome at the time of Constantine and casts of the reliefs on Trajan's Column. These, and the interesting planetarium, make the museum well worth a visit.

Today's church is a faithful reconstruction of the great 4th-century basilica largely destroyed by fire on July 15, 1823. Unfortunately few fragments of the original church survived. The triumphal arch over the nave is decorated on one side with restored 5thcentury mosaics. On the other side are mosaics by Pietro Cavallini, originally on the facade. The splendid Venetian apse mosaics (1220) depict the figures of Christ with St. Peter. St. Andrew. St Paul and St Luke

The fine marble canopy over the high altar is signed by the sculptor Arnolfo di Cambio (1285) "together with his partner Pietro," who may have been Pietro Cavallini. Tivoli has been a popular summer resort since the days of the Roman Republic. Among the famous men who owned villas here were the poets Catullus and Horace, Caesar's assassins Brutus and Cassius, and the Emperors Trajan and Hadrian. Tivoli's main attractions were its clean air and beautiful situation on Villa d'Este, the town's most famous sight.

In the Middle Ages Tivoli suffered frequent invasions as its position made it an ideal base for an advance on Rome. In 1461 Pope Pius II built a fortress here, the Rocca Pia, declaring: "It is easier to regain Rome while possessing Tivoli, than to regain Tivoli while possessing Rome." After suffering heavy bombdamage in 1944, Tivoli's main buildings and churches were speedily restored. The town's cobbled streets are still lined with medieval houses. The Duomo (cathedral) houses a beautiful 13th-century life-size wooden group representing the Deposition from the Cross.

The villa occupies the site of an old Benedictine convent. In the 16th century the estate was developed by Cardinal Ippolito d'Este, son of Lucrezia Borgia. A palace was designed by Pirro Ligorio to make the most of its hilltop situation, but the villa's fame rests more on the terraced gardens and fountains laid out by Ligorio and Giacomo della Porta.

The gardens have suffered neglect in the past, but the grottoes and fountains still give a vivid impression of the great luxury which the princes of the church enjoyed. From the great loggia of the palace you descend through the privet-lined paths to the Grotto of Diana and Bernini's Fontana del Bicchierone. Below to the right is the Rometta (little Rome), a model of Tiber Island with allegorical figures and the legendary she-wolf. The Rometta is at one end of the Viale delle Cento Fontane, 100 fountains in the shapes of grotesques, obelisks, ships, and the eagles of the d'Este coat of arms. Other fountains are now being restored to their former glory. The Fontana dell'Organo is a water-organ, in which the force of the water pumps air through the pipes. The garden's lowest level has flower beds and fountains as well as some splendid views out over the plain below.

Built as a private summer retreat between AD 118 and 134. Hadrian's Villa was a vast open-air museum of the finest architecture of the Roman world. The grounds of the Imperial palace covered some 300 acres (120 hectares) and were filled with full-scale reproductions of the emperor's favorite buildings from Greece and Egypt. Although excavations on this site began in the 16th century, many of the ruins lying scattered in the surrounding fields have yet to be identified with any certainty. The grounds of the villa make a very picturesque site for a picnic, with scattered fragments of columns lying among olive trees and cypresses.

For an idea of how the whole complex would have looked in its hevday, study the scale model in the building beside the parking lot. The most important buildings are signposted and several have been partially restored or reconstructed One of the most impressive is the so-called Maritime Theater This is a round pool with an island in the middle, surrounded by columns. The island. reached by means of a swing bridge, was probably Hadrian's private withdrew from the cares of the Empire to indulge in his two favorite pastimes, painting and architecture. There were also theaters, Greek and Latin libraries, two bathhouses, extensive housing for guests and the palace staff, and formal gardens with fountains, statues, and pools.

Hadrian also loved Greek philosophy. One part of the gardens is thought to have been Hadrian's reproduction of the Grove of Academe,

Fragment of marble mosaic pavement in the Imperial palace where Plato lectured to his students. He also had a replica made of the Stoa Poikile, a beautiful painted colonnade in Athens, from which the Stoic philosophers took their name. This copy enclosed a great piazza with a central pool. The so-called Hall of the Philosophers close to the Poikile was probably a library.

The most ambitious of Hadrian's replicas was the Canopus, a sanctuary of the god Serapis near Alexandria. For this a canal 130 yards (119 metres) long was dug and Egyptian statues were imported to decorate the temple and its grounds. This impressive piece of engineering has been restored and the banks of the canal are lined with carvatids.

Another picturesque spot in the grounds is the Vale of Tempe, the legendary haunt of the goddess Diana with a stream representing the river

Peneios. Below ground the emperor even built a fanciful recreation of the underworld, Hades, reached through underground tunnels, of which there were many linking the various parts of the villa.

Plundered by barbarians who camped here in the 6th and 8th centuries, the villa fell into disrepair. Its marble was burned to make lime for cement and Renaissance antiquarians contributed even further to its destruction. Statues unearthed in the grounds are on show in museums around Europe. The Vatican's Egyptian Collection (see p238) has many fine works that were found here.

In Republican times Ostia was Rome's main commercial port and a military base defending the coastline and the mouth of the Tiber. The port continued to flourish under the Empire, despite the development of Portus, a new port slightly to the northwest, in the 2nd century AD. Ostia's decline began in the 4th century, when a reduction in trade was combined with the gradual silting up of the harbor. Then malaria became endemic in the area and the city, whose population may have been nearly 100,000 at its peak, was totally abandoned.

Buried for centuries by sand, the city is remarkably well preserved. The site is less spectacular than Pompeii or Herculaneum because Ostia died a gradual death, but it gives a more complete picture of life under the Roman Empire. People of all social classes and from all over the Mediterranean lived and worked here.

Visitors can understand the layout of Ostia's streets almost at a glance. The main road through the town, the Decumanus Maximus, would have been filled with hurrying slaves and citizens, avoiding the jostling carriages and carts, while tradesmen pursued their business under the porticoes lining the street. The floorplans of the public buildings along the road are very clear. Many were bathhouses, such as the Baths of the Cisiarii (carters) and the grander Baths of Neptune. named for their fine blackand-white floor mosaics. Beside the restored theater. three large masks, originally part of the decoration of the stage, have been mounted on large blocks of tufa. Beneath the great brick arches that supported the semicircular tiers of seats were taverns and shops. Classical plays are put on here in the summer.

The Tiber's course has changed considerably since Ostia was the port of Rome. It once flowed past just to the north of Piazzale delle Corporazioni, the square behind the theater. The corporations were the guilds of the various trades involved in fitting out and supplying ships: tanners and ropemakers, shipbuilders and timber merchants, ships' chandlers and corn weighers. There were some 60 or 70 offices around the square. Mosaics showing scenes of everyday life in the port and the names and symbols of the corporations can still be seen.

There were also offices used by shipowners and their agents from places as far apart as Tunisia and the south of France, Sardinia, and Egypt. In one office, belonging to a merchant from the town of Sabratha in North Africa, there is a delightful mosaic of an elephant.

The main cargo coming into Rome was grain from Africa. Much of this was distributed free to prevent social unrest. Although only men received this annona or corn dole, at times over 300,000 were eligible. In the center of the square was a temple, probably dedicated to Ceres, goddess of the harvest. Among the buildings excavated are many large warehouses in which grain was stored before it was shipped on to Rome.

The Decumanus leads to the Forum and the city's principal temple, erected by Hadrian in the 2nd century AD and dedicated to Jove, Juno, and Minerva. In this rather romantic, lonely spot, it is hard to imagine the Forum as a bustling center, where justice was dispensed and officials

Floor mosaic of Nereid and sea monster in the House of the Dioscuri apartments in blocks three or four storevs high known as insulae. These varied considerably in their comfort and decoration The House of Diana was one of the smarter ones, with a balconv around the third floor a private bathhouse, and a central courtvard with a cistern where tenants came to collect their water. Around the first floor of the block were shops, taverns, and bars selling snacks and drinks. In the bar at the House of Diana you can see the marble counter used by customers buying their sausages and hot wine sweetened with honey. For the wealthy there were detached houses (domus) such as the House of the Dioscuri, which has fine mosaics, and the House of Cupid and Psyche, named for a statue there. This is now in the site's Museo Ostiense, near the Forum, along with other sculptures and reliefs found in Ostia.

Among the houses and shops there are other fascinating buildings including a laundry and the firemen's barracks. The religions practised in Ostia reflect the cosmopolitan nature of the port. There are also no fewer than 18 temples dedicated to the Persian god Mithras, as well as a Jewish synagogue dating from the 1st century AD and a Christian basilica. A plaque records the death of St. Augustine's mother in a hotel here in AD 387.

NINE GUIDED WALKS

ome is an excellent city for walking. The distances between major sights in the historic center are easily covered on foot and many streets are pedestrianized. When you get tired, there are plenty of sidewalk cafés in wonderful settings such as Piazza Navona and Campo de' Fiori. If you are interested in archaeology, then a walk across the Forum (see pp76-87) and over the Palatine (see pp96–101) takes you away Bernini angel on Ponte Sant'Angelo more than 2,000 years of use. from the roaring traffic of modern Rome to a different world of scattered ruins and shady pine trees.

The first of the nine suggested walks takes in picturesque quarters on either side of the Tiber. The second walk, along the perfectly straight Via Giulia, gives a vivid impression of the Renaissance city. The next three walks each follow a particular theme. You can savor the glory of ancient Rome through the triumphal arches of the emperors, tour early Christian churches with well-preserved mosaics, and explore the great contribution of Bernini to the appearance of the city

The sixth walk is outside the center along the bestknown of all Roman roads. the Via Appia Antica, parts of which are still intact after

The seventh walk explores some macabre points of interest, including a park said to be haunted by the emperor Nero. The next couples Trastevere's atmospheric backstreets with the romantic viewpoints of the Janiculum. Lastly, there is a tour of churches and ancient ruins on and around the tranguil, leafy Aventine.

A Two-Hour Walk by the Tiber River

Rome owes its very existence to the Tiber: the city grew up around an easy fording point where a market place developed. The river could also be a hazardshallow and torrent-like, it flooded the city every winter up to 1870 when work began on the massive Lungotevere embankments that run along both sides of the river. These provide many fine views from points along their avenues of plane trees. The walk also explores the neighborhoods along the riverside, in particular the Jewish Ghetto and Trastevere, which have preserved much of their character from earlier periods in the colorful history of Rome.

From the old port of Rome to Via dei Funari

Starting from the church of Santa Maria in Cosmedin ① (see p202), cross the piazza to the temples of the Forum Boarium (2) (see p203). This was the cattle market that stood near the city's river port. The river here has preserved two less obvious structures from ancient Rome- the mouth of the Cloaca Maxima 3. the city's great sewer, and one arch of a ruined bridge, known as the Ponte Rotto (4) In Via Petroselli stands the rather extraordinary medieval Casa dei Crescenzi (5) (see p203). decorated with fragments of Roman temples. Passing the modern Anagrafe (public records office) (6, built on the site of the old Roman port, you come to San Nicola in Carcere ⑦ (see p151).

You are now in the Foro Olitorio. Rome's ancient vegetable market. To the east stand the ruins of a Roman portico and the medieval house of the Pierleoni family. Head for the massive theater

The church honors a miraculous image of the Virgin credited with halting the plague in 1656. The 16th-century piazza was the home of Flaminio Ponzio. its architect, who lived at No. 6. Take Via dei Delfini to Piazza Margana where you should look up at the 14thcentury tower of the Margani family 10. Retrace your steps, then go up Via dei Funari (Street of the Ropemakers) to the 16th-century facade of Santa Caterina dei Funari 11.

The Ghetto

From Piazza Lovatelli take Via Sant'Angelo in Pescheria, which leads to the ruined Portico of Octavia (1) (see  $p_152$ ) in the Iewish Ghetto (see p152). The Roman portico, once Rome's fish market, houses the church of Sant'Angelo in Pescheria. Find the marble plaque on the facade: fish longer than this slab were given to the citv's conservatori (governors). ## TIPS FOR WALKERS

Starting point: Piazza della Bocca della Verità. Length: 2 miles (3.5 km). Getting there: The 23, 44, 81, 160, 280, 628, 715, and 716 buses stop near Santa Maria in Cosmedin.

Best time for walk: This walk can be very romantic in the evening but is enjoyable at any time.

Stopping-off points: Piazza Campitelli and Piazza Margana have elegant Roman restaurants, and Via del Portico d'Ottavia has restaurants and a bakery. Tiber Island has a bar and the farmous Sora Lella restaurant (see p320). In Viale Trastevere there are bars and pizzerias. # A One-Hour Walk along Via Giulia Laid out by Bramante for Pope Julius II in the early 16th century, Via Giulia was one of the first Renaissance streets to slice through Rome's jumble of medieval alleys. The original plan included new law courts in a central piazza, but this project was abandoned for lack of cash. The street now is dominated by antiques shops and furniture restorers. On summer evenings, hundreds of oil lamps light the street while cloisters and courtyards provide romantic settings for a special season of concerts.

From Lungotevere to Largo della Moretta

Starting from Lungotevere dei Tebaldi ① at the eastern end of Via Giulia, you will see ahead of you an archway ② spanning the road. This was the start of Michelangelo's unrealized project linking Palazzo Farnese and its gardens (see p147) with the Villa Farnesina (see pp220–21) on the other side of the river.

Just before you reach the archway, you will see to your left the curious Fontana del Mascherone ③, in which an ancient grotesque mask and granite basin were combined to create a Baroque fountain.

Bevond the Farnese archway on the left is the lively Baroque facade of the church of Santa Maria dell'Orazione e Morte (4) (see p147). A bit farther along on the same side of the road stands Palazzo Falconieri (5), enlarged by Borromini in 1650. Note its two stone falcons glowering at each other across the width of the facade. On the other side of the road you pass the vellowish facade of Santa Caterina da Siena 6, church of the Sienese colony in Rome, which has pretty 18thcentury reliefs. The figures of Romulus and Remus symbolize Rome and Siena - there is a legend that the city of Siena was founded by the less fortunate of the twins. After passing the short street that leads down to Sant'Eligio degli Orefici (f) (see p148) and the facade of Palazzo Ricci (8) (see p149), you come to an area of half-demolished buildings around the ruined church of San Filippo Neri (), called Vicolo della Moretta. If you look to the left down to the river, you can see Ponte Mazzini and the huge prison of Regina Coeli on the other side of the Tiber. At this point you may like to make a small detour to the right to the beginning of Via del Pellegrino, where there is an inscription (0), defining the pomerium, or boundary, of the city in the time of the Emperor Claudius.

The buildings now house offices of the Ministry of Justice and a small Museum of Crime. At the corner of Via del Gonfalone, a small side street running down to the river, you can see part of the foundations of Julius II's planned law courts. Just down the street stands the small Oratorio di Santa Lucia del Gonfalone ®, which is often used for concerts.

The next interesting facade is Carlo Rainaldi's 17th-century Santa Maria del Suffragio (13) on the left. On the same side is San Biagio degli Armeni (20), the Armenian church in Rome. It is often referred to by local people as San Biagio della Pagnotta (of the loaf of bread). The nickname originates from the traditional distribution of bread to the poor that took place on the saint's feast day.

On the corner there are more travertine blocks belongtions of Julius II's projected law courts, known because of their curious shape as the "Sofas of Via Giulia."

The Florentine Quarter

Your next stop should be the imposing Palazzo Sacchetti at No. 66 <sup>(5)</sup>. Originally this was the house of Antonio da Sangallo the Younger, the architect of Palazzo Farnese, but it was greatly enlarged by later owners. The porticoed courtyard houses a 15thcentury Madonna and a striking Roman relief of the 3rd century AD. Just opposite Palazzo Sacchetti, note the beautiful late Renaissance portal of Palazzo Donarelli (b). The 16thcentury house at No. 93 is richly decorated with stuccoes and coats of arms (b). No. 85 is another typical Renaissance palazzo with a heavily rusticated ground floor (9. There is a tradition that, like many houses of the period, it once belonged to Raphael. Palazzo Clarelli () was built by Antonio da Sangallo the Younger as his own house. The inscription above the doorway bears the name of Duke Cosimo II de' Medici, whose family later bought the palazzo.

This whole area used to be inhabited by a flourishing Florentine colony, which had its own watermills built on pontoons along the Tiber. Their national church is San Giovanni dei Fiorentini @ (see p153), the final great landmark at the end of Via Giulia. Many Florentine artists and architects had a hand in its design, including Sangallo and Jacopo Sansovino.

TIPS FOR WALKERS

Starting point: Lungotevere dei Tebaldi, by Ponte Sisto. Length: 1,100 yds (1 km). Getting there: The 116 goes to and along Via Giulia, or you can take 46, 62, or 64 to Corso Vittorio Emanuele II, then walk down Via dei Pettinari, or take a 23 or 280 along Lungotevere. Best time for walk: On summer evenings oil lamps light the street. At Christmas, there are cribs on display in many shop windows.

Stopping-off points: There are bars in Via Giulia, at Nos. 18 and 84. Campo de' Fiori has better bars, with outdoor tables, and a wide choice of places to eat. These include a fried fish restaurant in Piazza Santa Barbara dei Librai (closed Sun).

A 90-Minute Tour of Rome's Triumphal Arches

Rome's greatest gift to architecture was the arch, and the Roman people's highest tribute to its victorious generals was the triumphal arch. In Imperial times, arches were erected to honor an emperor's campaign victories almost as a matter of course, promoting his personal cult and ensuring his subsequent deification. Spectacular processions passed through these arches. Conquering generals, cheered by rapturous crowds, rode in their chariots to the Capitol, accompanied by their legions bearing spoils from their campaigns.

Stopping-off points: Several bars and restaurants overlook the Colosseum. There is a small bar in Via dei Cerchi and a smarter one behind San Giorgio in Velabro, in Piazza San Giovanni Decollato (closed Sun). For a meal, try Alvaro al Circo Massimo (closed Mon) in Via di San Teodoro.

Emperor Septimius Severus ① and his sons Geta and Caracalla (see p83) in the Forum. Erected in AD 203. it celebrates a successful campaign in the Middle East. Eight years later. when Caracalla had his brother killed all mention of Geta was removed from the inscription. Look up at the reliefs showing phases of the campaigns, Set in tiers, they are probably the sculptural counterparts of the paintings illustrating the general's feats that were borne aloft in the triumphal procession. On the right, the inhabitants of a fortified city surrender to the Romans' siege machines. Below are smaller friezes showing the triumphal procession itself.

Heading east, make your way through the Forum to the ruins of the temple of Julius Caesar 2. The temple was built by Augustus in 29 BC, on the site where Caesar's body was cremated after Mark Antony's famous funerary oration. A nearby sign marks the ruins of one of the arches dedicated to Augustus 3, spanning the Via Sacra between the temple of Castor and Pollux (4) (see p84) and the temple of Caesar. This arch, erected after Augustus had defeated Mark Antony and Cleopatra, was finally demolished in ine the inner bas-reliefs. These show Roman legionaries carrying the spoils looted from the conquest of Jerusalem, heralds holding plaques with the names of vanquished peoples and cities, and Titus riding in triumph in his chariot.

The medieval Frangipane family turned the Colosseum into a vast impregnable stronghold and incorporated the Arch of Titus into their fortifications. Notice the wheelmarks scratched on the inside walls of the arch by generations of carts; they indicate the steady rise in the level of the Forum floor before it was eventually excavated in the 18th and 19th centuries Many of the carts that passed through the arch would have been carrying building materials quarried from the Forum's many ruined monuments

Arch of Constantine

Leave the Forum by heading down the hill toward the Colosseum () (see pp92-5) and the nearby Arch of Constantine () (see 191). This arch. hastily built to commemorate the emperor's victory over his rival Maxentius in AD 312, is a patchwork of reliefs from different periods. Stand on the Via di San Gregorio side and compare the earlier panels at the top (AD 180-193) with the hectic battle scenes just above the smaller arches, sculpted in AD 315. In the curious dwarf-like soldiers, you can see the transition from Classicism to a cruder medieval style of sculpture.

Now take Via di San Gregorio, which runs the length of the valley between the Palatine and Celian hills. This was the ancient route taken by most triumphal processions. Passing the entrance to the Palatine (1) and the well-preserved arches of the Claudian Aqueduct (1) on the right, you come to Piazza di Porta Capena (1), named after the gate that stood here to mark the beginning of the Via Appia (see p284). After rounding the back of the Palatine, follow Via dei Cerchi, which runs alongside the grassy area that preserves. in an oval outline, all that remains of the Circus Maximus (1) (see p205).

Arches of the Forum Roarium

When you reach the church of Sant'Anastasia @, turn right up Via di San Teodoro, then first left down Via del Velabro. Straddling the street is the four-sided Arch of Janus (13) (see p202), erected in the 3rd century AD. This is not a triumphal arch but a covered area where merchants could take shelter from the sun or rain when discussing business. Like the Arch of Titus. it became part of a fortress built by the Frangipane family during the Middle Ages.

Tucked away beside the nearby church of San Giorgio in Velabro () (see p202) is what looks like a large rectangular doorway. This is the Arco degli Argentari, or Monevchangers' Arch 15. Look up at the inscription, which says that it was erected by local silversmiths in honor of Septimius Severus and his family in AD 204. As in the emperor's triumphal arch, the name of Geta has been obliterated by his brother and murderer, Caracalla. Geta's figure has also been removed from among the portraits on the panels inside the arch. Triumph in Imperial Rome could be very shortlived.

A Three-Hour Tour of Rome's Best Mosaics

In imitation of the audience chambers of Imperial palaces, Rome's early Christian churches were decorated with colorful mosaics. These were pieced together from cubes of marble, colored stone, and fragments of glass. To create a golden background, gold leaf was placed between pieces of glass. These were then heated so that they fused. The glorious colors and subjects portrayed gave the faithful a glimpse of the heavenly court of the King of Kings. This walk concentrates on a few of the churches decorated in this wonderful medium.

San Giovanni

Start from Piazza di Porta San Giovanni, where you can visit the heavily restored mosaic of the Triclinio Leoniano (see p179). Originally in the banqueting hall of Pope Leo III (795–816) ①, it shows Christ among the Apostles. On the left are Pope Sylvester and the Emperor Constantine, on the right, Pope Leo and Charlemagne just before he was crowned Emperor of the Romans in AD 800. Inside the basilica of San Giovanni in Laterano (2) (see pp182–3), the 13th-century apse mosaic shows Christ as he appeared miraculously during the consecration of the church. In the panels by the windows, look for the small figures of two Franciscan friars; these are the artists Jacopo Torriti (left) and Jacopo de Camerino (right). Leave by the exit on the right near the splendid 16th-century organ and head for the octagonal Baptistry of San Giovanni <sup>(2)</sup>, where the Chapel of Santa Rufina has a beautiful apse mosaic, dating from the 5th century. In the neighboring Chapel of San Venanzio, there are golden 7th-century mosaics, showing the strong influence of the Eastern Church at this time.

Santo Stefano Rotondo to San Clemente

Leave the piazza by the narrow road that leads to the round church of Santo Stefano Rotondo (4) (see p185). One of its chapels contains a 7th-century Byzantine mosaic honoring two martyrs buried here. Farther on. in Piazza della Navicella, is the church of Santa Maria in Domnica (5) (see p193). It houses the superb mosaics commissioned by Pope Paschal I, who gave new impetus to Rome's mosaic production in the 9th century. He is represented kneeling beside the Virgin. On leaving the church, notice the facade of San Tommaso in Formis ⑤, which has a charming mosaic of Christ flanked by two freed slaves, one black and one white, dating from the 13th mosaic in the Chapel of Santa Rufina ③

The Colle Oppio

Passing the old entrance to the church cross Via Labicana and walk up the hill to the small Colle Oppio park (). This has fine views of the Colosseum and contains the ruins of the Domus Aurea 🔞 (see p175) and the Baths of Trajan 1. Across the park lie San Martino ai Monti D (see p170), which has a 6th-century mosaic portrait of Pope St. Sylvester near the crypt, and Santa Prassede (B) (see p171). Here the Chapel of St. Zeno contains the most important Byzantine mosaics in Rome. reminiscent of the fabulous mosaics of Ravenna, Pope Paschal Lerected the chapel as a mausoleum for his

San Giovanni mother Theodora. The apse and triumphal arch of the church itself also have fine mosaics. When you move on to Santa Maria Maggiore (4) (see pp172-3), go to the column in the center of the piazza in front of the church to see the beautiful 0 meters 250 250 0 vards

On leaving Santa Maria, pass the obelisk (1) in the piazza behind the church and go downhill to Via Urbana and Santa Pudenziana 🔞 (see p171). # A Two-Hour Walk around Bernini's Rome

Gian Lorenzo Bernini (1598–1680) is the artist who probably left the strongest personal mark on the appearance of the city of Rome. Favorite architect, sculptor, and town planner to three successive popes, he turned Rome into a uniquely Baroque city. This walk traces his enormous influence on the development and appearance of the center of Rome. It starts from the busy Largo di Santa Susanna just north of Termini station, at the church of Santa Maria della Vittoria.

Bernini's Fontana del Tritone 2

Through Piazza Barberini

Santa Maria della Vittoria ① (see p255) houses the Cornaro Chapel, the setting for one of Bernini's most revolutionary and controversial sculptures, The Ecstasy of St. Teresa (1646). From here take Via Barberini to Piazza Barberini. In its center is Bernini's dramatic Fontana del Tritone (2) (see p254) and at one side stands the more modest Fontana delle Api 3 (see p254). As you go up Via delle Quattro Fontane, you catch a glimpse of Palazzo Barberini (see p255) built by Bernini and several other artists for Pope Urban VIII. The gateway and cornices are decorated with the bees that made up part of the Barberini familv crest. Next make vour way to the crossroads, decorated by Le Quattro Fontane (5) (see p162), to enjoy the splendid views in all four directions.

Passing the diminutive San Carlo alle Quattro Fontane (3) (see p161), built by Bernini's rival Borromini, take Via del Ouirinale. The long wing of the Palazzo del Quirinale (see p158), nicknamed the Manica Lunga (long sleeve). is by Bernini. On the other side of the road is the facade of Sant'Andrea al Ouirinale (8) (see p161), one of Bernini's greatest churches. When you reach the Piazza del Quirinale (9, note the doorway of the palazzo, attributed to Bernini. From the piazza, go down the

The Trevi Fountain

Go along the narrow Vicolo dei Modelli (1), where male models waited to be chosen by artists, then turn toward the Trevi Fountain (2) (see p159). Its energy is clearly inspired by Bernini's work, a tribute to his lasting influence on Roman taste. Leave the piazza along Via delle Muratte where the facade by Bernini's follower Carlo Rainaldi. At the top of this street, turn left down to Via del Corso. On the other side of the road, you will see the towering Column of Marcus Aurelius (see p113) in Piazza Colonna. Beyond this is Palazzo Montecitorio (b), begun in 1650 by Bernini and now the home of the Italian parliament (see p112).

Pantheon to Piazza Navona

Via in Aquiro leads you to the Pantheon (6) (see pp110–11). Refusing Pope Urban VIII's request for him to redecorate reach the fabulous Piazza Navona (19) (see p120) which was remodeled by Bernini for Pope Innocent X Pamphilj. The design for the central fountain, the Fontana dei Quattro Fiumi (see p120), was by Bernini, though the figures symbolic of the four rivers were sculpted by other artists. The central figure in the Fontana del Moro, however, is by Bernini himself. Bernini's contemporaries were fascinated by the innovative use of shells, rocks and other natural forms in his fountains, and his expert handling of water to create constant movement.

Statue of the Nile River from the Fontana dei Quattro Fiumi

Angel on Ponte Sant'Angelo

An extended walk

More energetic walkers may like to head toward the river to see the Ponte Sant'Angelo and its Bernini angels, and then on to St. Peter's (see pp230–33) where they can admire Bernini's great colonnaded piazza in front of the church, the papal tombs, his altar decorations, and the bronze baldacchino.

TIPS FOR WALKERS

Starting point: Largo di Santa Susanna. Length: 2 miles (3.5 km). Getting there: Take Metro line A to Repubblica or any bus to Termini, then walk. Buses 61, 62, 175, and 492 stop in Via Barberini.

Best time for walk: Go either between 3am and noon for good lighting conditions in the churches, or between 4pm and 7pm. Stopping-off points: The Piazza Barberini and Fontana di Trevi areas have lots of bars and pizzerias. The many elegant cafés en route include the famous Caffé Giolitti (see p109) and outdoor cafés and restaurants are plentiful around Piazza Aella Rotonda and Piazza Navona.

A 90-Minute Walk along the Via Appia Antica

Lined with cypresses and pines as it was when the ancient Romans came here by torchlight to bury their dead, the Via Appia is wonderfully atmospheric. The fields are strewn with ruined tombs set against the picturesque background of the Alban hills to the south Although the marble or travertine stone facings of most tombs have been plundered, a few statues and reliefs survive or have been replaced by copies.

Capo di Bove

Start from the Tomb of Cecilia Metella ① (see b266). In the Middle Ages this area acquired the name Capo di Bove (ox head) from the frieze of festoons and ox heads still visible on the tomb. On the other side of the road you can see the ruined Gothic church of San Nicola (2), which, like the Tomb of Cecilia Metella, was part of the medieval fortress of the Caetani family.

Proceed to the crossroads 3. where there are still many original Roman paving slabs, huge blocks of extremely durable volcanic basalt. Just

on both sides of the Appia, are other tombs, some still capped with the remains of the medieval towers that were built over them. On the right after passing some private villas, you come to a military zone around the Forte Appio (5), one of a series of forts built around the city in the past the next turning (Via Capo di Bove), you will see on your left the nucleus of a great mausoleum overgrown with ivy, known as the Torre di Capo di Bove ④. Beyond it, for a short cape, known as the fragments of reliefs excavated in 1808 by the Neo-Classical sculptor Antonio Canova. He was one of the first to work on the principle that excavated tombs and their inscriptions and reliefs should be allowed to remain in situ. On the other side of the road stands a tomb with a relief of a man, naked except

"Heroic Relief" ⑦ On the left of VIA DEI LUGARI the road are the ruins of the socalled Tomb of Seneca (8). The great moralist Seneca owned a villa near here, where he committed suicide in AD 65 on the orders of Nero.

The next major tomb is that of the family of Sixtus Pompeus the Righteous, a freed slave of the 1st century AD (9). The verse inscription records the father's sadness at having to bury his own children, who died young.

From Via dei Lugari to Via di Tor Carbone

Just past Via dei Lugari on the right, screened by trees, is the Tomb of Pope St. Urban (reigned 222-230) @. Set back from the road on the left stands a large ruined podium, probably part of a Temple of Jupiter (1) The next stretch was excavated by the architect Luigi Canina early in the 19th century. On the right is the Tomb of Caius Licinius 10. followed by a smaller Doric tomb (1) and the imposing Tomb of Hilarius

Fuscus (a), with five portrait busts in relief of members of his family. Next comes the Tomb of Tiberius Claudius Secondinus (b), where a group of freedmen of the Imperial household were buried in the 2nd century AD.

Passing a large ruined columbarium, you reach the Tomb of Quintus Apuleius and the reconstructed Tomb of the Rabirii freed slaves (1st century BC) (1). This has a frieze of three half-length figures above an inscription.

The figure on the right is a priestess of Isis. Behind her you can see the outline of a sistrum, the metal rattle used at ceremonies of the cult.

The majority of the tombs are little more than shapeless stacks of eroded brickwork. Two exceptions in the last stretch of this walk are the Tomb of the Festoons (®), with its reconstructed frieze of festive putti, and the Tomb of the Frontispiece (®), which has a copy of a relief with four portraits. The two central figures are holding hands.

When you reach Via di Tor Carbone, the Via Appia still stretches out ahead of you in a straight line and, if you wish to extend your walk, there are many more tombs and ruined villas to visit along the way.

Starting point: Tomb of Cecilia Metella.

Length: 2 miles (3 km). Getting there: Taking a taxi is the easiest way to reach the tomb. Alternatively, take the 118 from Piazzale Ostiense or the 660 from Colli Albani on Metro Line A. Best time for walk: Go fairly early, before it becomes too hot. Stopping-off points: There is a bar near the church of Domine Quo Vadis?, before the start of the walk, but it is advisable to take your own refreshment. There are also several wellestablished restaurants on the first stretch of the Appia, including the Cecilia Metella, Via Appia Antica 129, tel 06-513 6743 (closed Mon).

A Two-Hour Tour of Roman Tombs, Legends, and Artists

The northern half of central Rome with its air of mystery is a great place for families to explore. Following this trail of creepy places and famous deaths interspersed with glimpses of the city's historic artists' center, visitors can see Imperial mausoleums, a death mask, and a crypt decorated with monks' bones. This is also a Rome where art isn't just in the museums – it's everywhere – so you'll

Imperial Tombs

Begin at Emperor Hadrian's tomb, deep in the heart of the papal Castel Sant'Angelo (see pp248-9). From the castle's riverside entrance. turn left then left again along the star-shaped walls, before turning right into Piazza Cavour, surrounded on the south by the huge, ostentatious Palazzo di Giustizia (2) (see p229), slowly sinking under its own weight since 1910. #### The Tridente

Continue heading north up Via di Ripetta. On your left is the graffiti-covered courtyard of the Accademia di Belle Arti ③, Rome's fine art academy, designed in 1845 by Pietro Camporese. On the right, at the corner of Via Canova, is the church of Santa Maria Portae Paradisi (D), designed in 1523 by Antonio Sangallo the Younger with a 1509 Madonna and Child by sculptor Sansovino. ## A Two-Hour Walk around Trastevere and Janiculum Hill

This walk begins in the warren of cobbled, medieval streets of Trastevere, which is becoming ever more popular, and shows you the neighborhood's hidden gems rather than its major sights. In the morning enjoy the mosaics and frescoes in the local churches before pausing for lunch in central Trastevere. Then go for a gentle climb up the Gianicolo, or Janiculum Hill. This long crest parallels the Tiber, and is blessed with the best panoramic views in Rome. At sunset, couples find it a romantic place to go for a stroll.

Southern Trastevere

Start at Santa Cecilia in Trastevere ① (see p211), a church that hides its best the basement excavations of St. Cecilia's house and Pietro Cavallini's sole surviving Roman fresco inside the cloistered convent - behind a bland 18th-century interior. Turn left out of the church. left again onto Via dei Salumi, then right on Via in Piscinula into Piazza in Piscinula 2. named for the remains of a bathing pool underneath. On the piazza's south side, below an 11th-century belltower, sits the tiny church of San Benedetto in Piscinula 3, (ring the doorbell for entry). It contains parts of a beautiful Cosmati mosaic pavement, 13th-century frescoes, and the saint's cell. Head west along Via della Lungaretta and cross the Viale di Trastevere to visit the excavations of a 5th-century basilica and fragments of its later frescoes below San Crisogono ④ (see p210).

Central Trastevere

Turn left out of the church and left again to continue along Via della Lungaretta to Piazza Santa Maria in Trastevere (5), a communal outdoor parlor, busy with cafés, guitar-strumming backpackers on the fountain steps, and visitors to the gorgeous Santa Maria in Trastevere (6) (see p212-13). Exit the square on the south side into tiny Piazza San Callisto and take the right fork down Via di San Cosimato into the large triangular Piazza di San Cosimato (7), bustling (until 2pm) with an open-air food market. Backtrack to Piazza Santa Maria in Trastevere. Along the square's north side you'll see a tiny street called Fonte d'Olio. entrance into the twisting maze of alleys and ivvcovered buildings at the heart of Trastevere. The street bends sharply left, then turn right onto Vicolo del Piede to arrive at the diminutive Piazza de' Renzi, lined with medieval houses. ## A Two-Hour Walk around the Aventine Rising just across the Circus Maximus from the Palatine. the residential Aventine Hill has served as a leafy haven of villas and mansions since Imperial times. This southernmost of Rome's legendary seven hills is still an oasis where traffic noise all but disappears. Yet few visitors walk here - despite the lure of fine old churches, lovely city panoramas, and rarely visited ancient ruins. You'll also explore Testaccio, a fine area for authentic restaurants, and see a Roman pyramid.

The Aventine

Begin at one of Rome's most magnificent ancient sites, the massive Baths of Caracalla ① (see p197), where plebeian and patrician alike once bathed (and, much later, where the poet Shelley found inspiration for Prometheus Unbound). Just outside the Baths' entrance sits the church of S.S. Nero e Achilleo (2) (see p194), with 9th-century mosaics. Across Viale delle Terme di Caracalla lies tiny San Sisto Vecchio 3, first home of the Dominican nuns (see p193). Turning northwest up Viale delle Terme di Caracalla, take the first right onto Via di Valle delle Camene, a tree-lined avenue parallel to the main road. Angle right up Salita di San Gregorio and ascend the imposing staircase of San Gregorio Magno (4) (see p192) for great views of the Palatine. Look for the thirdcentury marble table (in the St. Barbara chapel, on the left side of the church) at which St. Gregory the Great shared meals with the poor and, once, an angel in disguise. Turn left down Via di San Gregorio and cross wide Piazza di Porta Capena, keeping the long dusty oval of the Circus Maximus (5) (see p205) on your right. ome has been a major tourist center since the Middle Ages. when pilgrims from all over Europe came to visit the home of Catholicism and its relicpacked churches. ### WHERE TO LOOK Around the Spanish Steps and Piazza di Spagna lies the traditional heartland of foreign visitors, with some of the most exclusive smaller hotels. Similar places can be found all over the center, to the west of Via del Corso.

While moderately priced accommodations are rare in central Rome, the advantages of staying right on the doorstep of the city's many ancient sights cannot be overestimated; you can walk to the major areas of interest and easily return at midday for a shower and siesta. If the less expensive hotels we have recommended in the center are full, try the Borgo – close to the Vatican – or the lively quarter of Trastevere.

Those in search of glamor should head for Via Veneto, which has many grand and luxurious hotels.

If you're looking for a peaceful retreat, try the area around the Aventine, or one of the high-class hotels next to the Villa Borghese park.

Although many of the streets immediately around Termini station are rather seedy, the area is nonetheless a convenient stopover for travelers and there's a

The Verdi Room in Via Veneto's Majestic Hotel (see p308) </ Rome from the rooftops – a panoramic cityscape

O STAY in former palaces graced by celebrities of the past and present. Rome can offer the full range of accommodations, mostly in historical buildings, very little purposebuilt. Pensione (guesthouse) is no longer an official category, but in practice many retain the name and more personal character that has made them so popular with travelers. Other possibilities include self-contained accommodations. The hotels are organized in the listings (pp300–9) according to their price category and area while hostels, residential hotels, and the symbols provide an at-a-glance guide to the facilities available.

concentration of cheap hotels, with some decent (if basic) ones among them. The hotels recommended lie in a fairly safe area on the east side of the station. The approach to the center from Termini has a number of good hotels that are particularly suitable for the business traveler.

HOTEL PRICES

Although Rome may still offer less expensive accommodations than other large cities like New York or London, rates for comparable establishments have caught up. Prices are set by the state, and hotels should display the official rate on the door of each room. VAT (IVA in Italian) is usually included, and has been taken into account in the price categories on page 297.

Hotels in Rome generally have low and high season rates. April to June, September, and October are high season. Double-check tariffs when booking hotels at other times of year as you may initially be quoted the higher rate. Excepting Christmas and New Year, there are some real bargains to be had between November and February, and also in July and August. Many hotels also offer special Internet booking deals. Discounts for long-stay visitors and groups are often negotiable.

Grand Hotel de la Minerve (see p301)

Rooms without a bathroom can cost about 30 percent less. Single travelers are badly catered for, and though it is possible to find a single room for 60 percent of the price of a double, on average you'll pay as much as 70 percent, and occasionally even more.

HIDDEN EXTRAS

Even if the price of your room includes service, you are frequently expected to tip bellhops and for room service.

Rates are often not inclusive of breakfast, especially at some luxury hotels, where it may cost up to 650. Hotels usually add hefty surcharges to international phone calls, and may charge for parking and air conditioning. The cost of drinks in minibars can be high – you can buy a cheaper supply from local stores.

FACILITIES

Hotel standards have improved in recent years – you can expect Internet access, air conditioning, and bathrooms with hair dryers in middle-range establishments and telephones in middle to lower price rooms, although budget travelers staying in cheaper hotels shouldn't expect much more than a clean room.

Because most hotels occupy

historic buildings, room sizes can vary dramatically even within the same establishment (and this is often reflected in the pricing), so don't be afraid to ask to see your room before you check in. For the same reason, swimming pools are few and far between, but roof terraces or gardens are common across the range of hotels.

Top-class hotels will usually have some soundproofing; otherwise noise levels can be dreadful, in which case ask for a room facing away from the road.

Parking in central Rome is a problem, though a few hotels have a limited number of parking spaces of their own.

Business visitors to the capital are well catered for, with hotel facilities ranging from internet access to meeting rooms.

HOW TO BOOK

The Italian postal service tends to be unreliable, so it is safer to book by phone. fax, or through the hotel website. You should do this at least two months in advance if you want a particular hotel in May. June. September, or October: Easter and Christmas are also busy. If you require any particular features, such as a terrace or a view, insist on confirmation in writing to ensure that you get on arrival what you have been promised.

If a deposit is required you can usually pay by credit card. Under Italian law a booking is valid as soon as the deposit is paid, so you could lose > money if you pull out.

Double-check bookings prior to departure. Many hotels have a fierce cancellation policy and if you are not happy with the accommodations, or they are not what you booked, there is every chance that you will be charged for at least one night, even if you decide not to stay. Another reason for checking your booking carefully is that some hotels deliberately overbook and then offer unsatisfactory alternative accommodations.

Villa San Pio garden (see p306)

If you arrive by train, touts may descend on you at the station with offers of accommodations. They can be of some use if you are looking for a budget hotel, but you should exercise the usual caution. A better bet if you have not booked anywhere in advance is to head for one of the tourist board offices (see p297). Here, staff will reserve you a room within

CHECKING IN AND OUT

Italian hoteliers are legally obliged to register you with the police, which is the reason they always ask for your passport. They usually hold on to it for a while, but you need it if you are going to change money. Everyone in Italy is supposed to carry with them some sort of identification.

In some of Rome's cheaper pensioni, do not be surprised if you are asked to pay on arrival. To speed up the checking out process, mention in advance if you intend to pay by credit card. A tax dodge used by many hotels is to ask for payment in cash; you are entitled to refuse.

DISABLED TRAVELERS

Provision for disabled travelers is poor. Hotels that occupy parts of buildings often start their rooms up several flights of stairs, while others can only accommodate disabled guests on the ground floor. Ramps, wide doorways, and bathroom handrails are rare.

Our entries for wheelchair access in the hotel listings rely on the establishments' own assessments; any specific requirements should be checked before reserving.

There is a useful website (www.romapertutti.it) dedicated to mobility within Rome, while the Lazio region provides advice on accessibility farther afield (800 27 1027). Public transportation authority Trambus offers a pickup service and bus tourism for travelers with disabilities and must be reserved in advance.

TRAVELING WITH CHILDREN

Italians love children and they are usually welcome across the range of hotels. Most hotels can provide cribs or small beds, but high chairs, kids' meals, and babysitting services are rare. Those hotels in the listings below that do offer facilities for children carry a symbol to indicate so. In practice, though, many establishments – especially smaller, family-run ones – go out of their way to be helpful.

Many hotels do not have special rates for children and charge a standard rate if you require an extra bed in a room, whether for a baby or an adult, which can add anything from a few euros to 40 percent on to the price. For a family with older children, two-room suites are sometimes available. Contact the hotel in advance for information on family rates and suite accommodations since high-end hotels may be more flexible.

BED & BREAKFAST

A growing sector for visitors to Rome is bed & breakfast accommodations. Availability can be anything from a spare room in an apartment to something that feels more like a small hotel. Breakfast can also vary depending on the owner. Some invite you into their own kitchen while others set up a large, more continental style breakfast buffet. Contact the Bed & Breakfast Association of Rome for a selection of rooms and apartments, Rome Bed & Breakfast in the US, or visit Rome's tourist board website (see p297).

RESIDENTIAL HOTELS

If you want the comfort and privacy of your own apartment coupled with the services of a hotel, you could opt to stay in a residenza. Prices range from around 6300 to over 63,000 for a week in a two-bedded room, though some residenze are only available for two-week or monthly rentals. A full list is available from tourist board offices; some of the most central are listed in the directory on page 297.

Bedroom at the Residenza Cellini (see p305)

RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS

If you do not mind an early curfew, quite a few religious institutions accept paying guests. All religions are welcome and you do not have to be a practicing Catholic Reserve well in advance since all of the following places cater for groups of students and pilgrims. Casa Il Rosario convent is located near the Colosseum while Nostra Signora di Lourdes and the Casa di Santa Brigida are in the center of Rome Prices are in the same range as for the cheaper hotels.

BUDGET ACCOMMODATIONS

Even if you are traveling on a shoestring, it is possible to find a decent room in Rome. More and more mid-range options are now available and dormitory accommodations can be found at rock-bottom prices in simple establishments, such as the Ottaviano. Youth hostels are also a good option. At the Ostello del Foro Italico bed, breakfast, and shower can all be had at a very reasonable cost. Fawlty Towers has good facilities for the price, including a roof terrace; like Stargate, it is located near Termini station.

Women can get rooms at the Foresteria Orsa Maggiore in Trastevere or at the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) near Termini (those arriving in Termini at night should take care). There are also several budget hotels in the city center offering clean rooms and often a free breakfast. See websites like www. venere.com and www.euro cheapo.com for more options.

EFFICIENCY APARTMENTS

Independent apartments are a good alternative and allow you more freedom. Apartments range from luxury locations with a daily cleaning service to smaller basic facilities. Most come equipped with cooking utensils, towels, and bed linens. RetRome Bed & Breakfast (see p305) provides apartments at three locations around town.

CAMPING

Camping has come a long way since the simple tent and trailer. Campsites around Rome offer everything from fully equipped cabins (with private bath) to Jacuzzis and on-site

The pool in the Aldrovandi Palace garden (see p309)

discos. Most campsites are located quite far out of town but offer a shuttle service, as well as airport transportation; Flaminio Village is one exception, at only 4 miles (6 km) north of the center. Like many sites it has a pool, coffee bar, restaurant, and Internet access. TOURIST BOARDS

Provincial and city tourist boards can provide advice on accommodations. Hotel Reservation is a booking service with offices at Termini station, as well as both of the city's airports.

Rome's Best: Hotels

Roman hotels range from frescoed palaces and finde-siècle bastions of faded glamor to family-run guesthouses. Most are close to restaurants, shops, and transportation. Whatever the price level, all the hotels shown on this map have something special to offer, whether it is a chic location, or a roof terrace with soaring views across the city. The only drawback is that these places and all those on pages 300–9 are exceptions to the many unremarkable hotels in the city, so you should book well in advance. The hotels shown here are the best of their kind or price range.

Raphael

Bebind its ivy-veiled exterior, the Raphael is full of antiques and art, from ceramics by Picasso in the lobby to Renaissance pieces in some bedrooms. It offers a convenient central location. (See p301.)

Locarno

This intimate Art Deco hotel is a step away from Piazza del Popolo and some of Rome's best shopping. (See p302.)

Hassler Roma

Luxurious suites and an air of faded grandeur remind visitors of the Hassler's heyday. The rooftop restaurant is Rome's most famous. (See p303.)

Hotel Eden

One of the oldest and most exclusive botels in Rome, the Eden offers elegant decor and truly innovative cuisine. (See p308.)

Boscolo Aleph The audacious, red-tinged decor of the lobby sets the tone at this sumptuously luxurious and yet highly unconventional hotel. (See p308.)

St. Regis Grand Hotel Good service and extensive facilities are the main features of this oldfashioned, luxury hotel. (See p305.)

Fontana

The fabulous location opposite the Trevi fountain, and a charming roof terrace, make this former monastery a popular choice with visitors. (See p304.)

RESTAURANTS AND CAFES

n Rome, eating out can be both a joy and an entertainment. On warm summer evenings tables flow out into every conceivable open space and diners dedicate long hours to the popular social activity of people watching (and of being noticed and admired themselves) in a confusion of passers-by street performers rose sellers, and traffic. Although Romans have always loved to linger at the table the lavish feasts of ancient Rome have slimmed down and today's cooking is based on simplicity, freshness, and good Alberto Ciarla quality local raw ingredients in

WHERE TO FIND GOOD RESTAURANTS

Every area of the city has its own culinary delights. although certain pockets are known for more authentic Roman cooking. In Testaccio, the area surrounding the old slaughterhouse, vou will find long-term neighborhood establishments and no-frills trattorias serving the truest Roman fare. The Jewish quarter (the Ghetto), near Campo de'Fiori, serves Roman-Jewish cuisine, which many consider to have geatly influenced the culinary canons of the city. Around the university. in San Lorenzo, northeast of the city center, you will find lots of cheap pizzerias and trattorias.

Near Termini station there is a good selection of African particularly Ethiopian and Eritrean – restaurants as well as Indian and Pakistani specialties. Quartiere Monti (between Via Nazionale and Via Cavour) is also packed with multiethnic restaurants as well as wine bars and takeouts. For dining outdoors. which often means in beauti-streets of Trastevere (the old artists' quarter), around Campo de' Fiori, or along the old Via Appia Antica.

TYPES OF RESTAURANTS

In general, a trattoria is an unassuming. family-run establishment with good home cooking, while a ristorante is more upscale, more elegant, and thus more expensive.

Many eating places where paper tablecloths give a clue to low prices - simply have no name. They offer an open doorway and, more often what is essentially a seasonal cuisine Fast food is gradually arriving, but it is fundamentally alien to the Roman temperament and way of life

The restaurants reviewed in this chapter have been selected from the best that Rome can offer across all price ranges. Their descriptions. together with symbols providing an at-a-glance guide to facilities will help narrow down your choice. The section on Light Meals and Snacks featured on pages 328-33 has details of recommended cafés, pizzerias.

wine bars, and other places for more casual eating.

> than not, excellent, basic home cooking. Some of them offer a great deal more than that and your chances of finding authentic Roman cooking are higher in the best of these establishments than in expensive restaurants.

> There will probably be times when you do not want a fullblown restaurant meal and Rome offers a huge variety of places for more casual eating (see pp328-33). One type of place offering snacks or more substantial dishes is the enoteca, which doubles as a well-stocked wine shop for browsers and connoisseurs.

Other places for a sit-down. informal lunch or dinner are birrerie, which are not only for beer drinkers, but also offer pizzas and even fourcourse meals.

There is always plenty of interesting takeout food for sale – pizza rustica or pizza al taglio (pizza by the slice) is available all over the city. For full-size pizzas, choose places with wood stoves (forno a legna) for better results than from electric ovens. Other takeout foods such as whole roast chicken, pomodori al riso (tomatoes stuffed with rice), potatoes, or suppli (fried rice croquettes) can be had from rosticcerie. A self-service tavola calda will serve an impressive array of hot food and is ideal for lunchtimes.

VEGETARIAN FOOD

Purely vegetarian restaurants are few and far between in Rome but everywhere you will find pasta and rice dishes (risotto) Most menus include an extensive list of vegetablebased side dishes (contorni) which could be anything from artichokes (stewed – allaRomana or fried – alla giudia). grilled or au gratin vegetables. and sautéed spinach, chard or chicory Vegetables stuffed with rice then baked in the oven are also menu staples. Most menus are very adaptable, as dishes are prepared to order. Tell your waiter that vou are vegetariano (female: vegetariana) and he or she will advise you accordingly.

THE PRICE OF A MEAL

What you pay will clearly depend on your choice of establishment. In a tavola calda or Roman pizzeria. for example, you can still eat for as little as €10 a head. A local trattoria costs perhaps €20, whereas in a smarter restaurant reckon on around €30 and up. Bottled wine, as opposed to a jug or carafe of house wine (vino della casa). commands higher prices but should offer a more interesting range of tastes (see p314). House wine can be a hit-or-miss affair.

READING THE MENU

Not every restaurant automatically provides a menu – the waiter will often tell you the day's specialties (piatti del giorno), usually not mentioned

One of many Trastevere cafés

Outdoor café life in the piazza outside Santa Maria in Trastevere on the standard menu but almost always worth ordering. If you are not sure about these, you can always ask for la lista (the menu) and then allow yourself to be guided.

A meal could begin with antipasti (appetizers) or primi biatti – the latter consisting of pasta asciutta (pasta with some kind of sauce), pasta in brodo (clear broth with pasta in it). pasta al forno (baked pasta), risotto, or a substantial soup. You then move on to the secondi, the main meat or fish course, for which you will usually need to order vegetables (contorni) separately if you would like them. Afterwards you have formaggi (cheeses), frutta (fruit) or dolci (desserts). Romans do not usually eat cheese as well as a sweet dish. Strong espresso coffee, and perhaps a liqueur (amaro or digestivo) rounds off the meal (see p315). You may want to skip the first course, or you may prefer to choose a salad or vegetable dish or substitute the main course with an antibasto. Pasta alone tends not to be seen as a full meal.

OPENING TIMES

Restaurants are generally open from about noon to 3pm and from 8 to 11pm or much later. The busiest times tend to be 9-9:30pm for dinner and 1-1:30pm at lunchtime. Dinner is generally the preferred time for dedicated. relaxed eating, particularly in summer, when it will begin and end late as the heat of the day subsides. Bars are open all day, often from the early hours, serving all kinds of drinks (alcohol can be sold at any time of day) and snacks. The quietest month is August, when many restaurant owners take their annual holiday (shown by chiuso per ferie signs).

RESERVING A TABLE

Making a reservation (prenotazione) is generally advisable. Sunday is the main lunch date of the week when you should definitely reserve; the same usually goes for Saturday evening. Check the weekly closing day if you do not reserve. Many places are closed on Mondays, and Sunday evening can also be difficult for reservations.

In summer try to reserve a shady table outside, since air conditioning is not universal.

WHEELCHAIR ACCESS

Rome is becoming more aware of the needs of those in wheelchairs, but a call to the restaurant in advance will help secure the right table.

TAKING CHILDREN ALONG

Children are made very welcome, particularly in family-run places. You can usually order half-portions, or just ask for an extra plate. Highchairs (seggioloni) may also be available.

SMOKING

In 2005 regulations came into force and now restaurants and bars must provide separate nonsmoking areas or face a fine. Smokers who light up in nonsmoking areas are also liable to a fine. At cafés and restaurants that do not provide sealed-off areas, smoking is limited to outside tables.

The Flavors of Rome

There are few more enduring pleasures than lingering over a leisurely alfresco meal in a piazza in the Eternal City. Roman food is tasty, nutritious, simple, and extremely varied. Menus tend to be seasonal and there are even specialties eaten on specific days of the week. Traditionally, Thursday is gnocchi day, Friday is for salted cod (baccalà), and Saturday for tripe. Food is redolent of aromatic herbs, olive oil, garlic, and onion, and there are many signature dishes, including pasta. But much authentic Roman cuisine takes its origins from offal, and slow, inventive cooking transforms these traditionally "poor" cuts into rich and flavorsome dishes.

Pasta being made by hand in traditional style

CUCINA ROMANA

Bruschetta

Traditional Roman cuisine originated in the Testaccio area, near the old slaughterhouse whose butchers (vaccinari) were paid partly in cash and partly in meat – or rather offal. The "fifth quarter" (quinto quarto) included head, trotters, tail, intestines, brain, and other unmentionable bits of the beast which, when carefully cooked and richly flavored with herbs and spices, are transformed into culinary delight. These robust dishes, such as coda alla vaccinara (literally, "oxtail cooked in the style of the slaughterhouse butcher") still feature on the menus of many of Rome's top restaurants.

For more squeamish carnivores, lamb is popular, often served simply roasted. Veal is another specialty, as is piglet flavored with herbs.

Olives and olive oil

Authentic Cucina romana also has roots in the Jewish cuisine of the Ghetto area. Local globe artichokes are fried whole in olive oil (carciofi alla giudia) or served alla romana, with oil, garlic, and Roman mint. Zucchini (courgette) flowers are also deep-fried, as are Jewish-style salt cod fillets (filetti di baccalà).

Seafood and fish restaurants are among the best in Rome, although they can be very

REGIONAL DISHES AND SPECIALTIES

As an appetizer, bruschetta (Roman dialect for "lightly burnt bread") may be topped with a selection of intense flavors. Other antipasti include crispy-fried or marinated vegetables. A favorite pasta dish is bucatini all'amatriciana – pasta tubes in a spicy tomato and sausage or bacon sauce, sprinkled with grated tangy pecorino cheese. Veal is a great favorite and delicacies include rigatoni alla pajata (pasta with milk-fed veal intestines). Lamb is also very popular, in dishes such as abbacchio al forno (roasted milk-fed lamb) or alla cacciatore ("huntsman's style" with anchovy sauce). The generic word for offal is animelle and Roman delicacies include cervelle (calves' brains), pajata (veal intestines), and trippa (tripe).

Suppli These tasty fried rice croquettes are stuffed with mozzarella cheese that oozes out when they are cut.

expensive. Everything is available, from sumptuous seafood platters to small fish caught off the Lazio coast and served fried or used in soups, as well as superb sea bass cooked Roman-style with porcini mushrooms.

PASTA, PASTA

Pasta is the mainstay of the Roman meal, especially spaghetti. Spaghetti alla carbonara, made with pancetta (cured bacon) or guanciale (pig's cheek), egg yolks, and cheese, is a classic Roman dish, as is spaghetti alle vongole, with clams. There is even, uniquely, a museum devoted to pasta in Rome. The National Pasta Museum (Museo Nazionale delle Paste Alimentari) (see p160) charts the history and shapes of, at a conservative estimate, one type of pasta for every day of the year. Many have wonderfully descriptive or poetic names, such as capelli d'angelo (angel's hair) or ziti (bridegrooms) whose shape is best left to the imagination. The museum's motto is la pasta è gioia di vitere – "pasta is the joy of living".

Huge wheels of pecorino cheese ready to be cut and enjoyed

LA DOLCE VITA

For those with a taste for "the sweet life," nuts, fruits, and versatile ricotta cheese are often combined in mouthwateringly delicious sweets. Ice cream is an art form in Rome, where some parlors offer over 100 flavors of homemade gelati. Types vary from the classic crema and frutta to grattachecca (water ice), from semifreddo (a half-frozen sponge pudding, similar to tiramisù in consistency) to granità (ice shavings flavored with fruit syrups). Glorious gelato is one of the great pleasures here, to be enjoyed at any time of the day - or night.

ON THE MENU

Abbacchio alla cacciatora Lamb simmered in Castelli Romani wine with anchovies, garlic, rosemary, and olive oil.

Bruschetta Toasted bread rubbed with garlic, drizzled with olive oil, may be served with a variety of toppings.

Gnocchi alla romana Little semolina dumplings served with a tomato or ragù sauce, or just with butter.

Pecorino romano The traditional Roman cheese, made from ewe's milk.

Spigola alla romana Sea bass with porcini mushrooms, shallots, garlic, Castelli Romani wine, and olive oil.

Spaghetti alla carbonara The creamy sauce thickens as the hot pasta mixes into the egg yolks and cheese.

Saltimbocca alla romana Veal slices are rolled with prosciutto and sage. Saltimbocca means "jump in the mouth."

Crostata di ricotta This rich, baked cheesecake is made using ricotta and flavored with Marsala and lemon.

What to Drink in Rome

Roman mosaic showing bird and vines

Italy is one of Europe's most significant wine-producing countries, keeping up a tradition started in the hills around Rome over 2,000 years ago. Today, wine is usually drunk with meals as a matter of course, and knowing the difference between rosso (red) and bianco (white) may be all the vocabulary you need to get by. Beer is widely available too, as well as good ranges of apéritifs and digestifs. Rome's drinking water, another debt to the ancient Romans, is particularly good, fresh, and sweet, and in abundant supply.

The vineyards of Frascati, southeast of Rome

WHITE WINE

Vines thrive in the warm climate of Lazio, the region around Rome, producing abundant supplies of inexpensive dry white wine for the city's cafés and restaurants. It is usually sold by the carafe. Of local bottled wines, Frascati is the best-known, but Castelli Romani, Marino, Colli Albani, and Velletri are very similar in style. All are made from one grape variety, the Trebbiano, though better quality versions contain a dash of Malvasia for perfume and flavor. Other central Italian whites worth trying are Orvieto and Verdicchio. Quality white wines from all over Italy, including fine whites from Friuli in the northeast, are widely available in Rome.

RED WINE

Though some local red wine is made, most of the bottled red wine in Rome comes from other parts of Italy.

Regions like Tuscanv and Piedmont produce very good everyday drinking as well as top-class wines like Barolo Price should reflect quality - try Dolcetto. Rosso di Montalcino, or Montepulciano for goodvalue reds.

Montepulciano d'Abruzzo. a rich and juicy red wine, is always good value. It is produced in the Abruzzi region east of Rome.

Chianti Classico Riserva is older and stronger than a normal Chianti Classico

Torre Ercolana is produced in small quantities and is generally regarded as one of Lazio's best red wines. It is made from Cesanese and Cabernet grapes and requires at least five years' aging.

APÉRITIES AND OTHER DRINKS

Bitter, herb-flavored drinks like Martini, Campari, or Aperol are the most popular apéritifs. (Ask for an analcolico if vou prefer a nonalcoholic one.) Italians drink their apéritifs neat or with ice and soda. Strong after-dinner drinks, known as digestivi or amari, are worth trying, as is aniseed sambuca. served with coffee beans. Italian brandy and grappa can be very fierv and Italian beer is made in Campari lager style.

SOFT DRINKS

Italian fruit juices are good and most bars squeeze fresh orange juice (spremuta di arancia) on the spot. Iced coffee and fruitflavored tea, such as peach, are popular.

DRINKING WATER

Unlike many Mediterranean cities, Rome benefits from a constant supply of fresh drinking water, piped down from the hills through a system of pipes and aqueducts that has changed little from ancient Roman times. Only if there is a sign saying acaua non botabile is the water not safe to drink

One of Rome's many fresh water drinking fountains

Coffee is almost more important to Roman life than wine. Take espresso for neat strong black coffee at any time of day, milky cappuccino for breakfast or mid-afternoon. caffè latte for extra milk.

Choosing a Restaurant

The restaurants in this guide have been selected for their good value, good food, and attractive interiors. The chart below lists restaurants in Rome by area and the entries are alphabetical within each price category. For more information see Light Meals and Drinks on pages 328-33.

PRICE CATEGORIES

or a three-course meal for one. half a bottle of house wine, and all unavoidable extra charges such as cover, service, tax € up to €25 €€€€26-44

€€€€€€€65-80 (€)€)€)€) over €80

This attractive restaurant adds modern cool to a retro trattoria base. The food is a similar successful blending of traditional Roman dishes (the spaghetti alla carbonara is very good) and some more unusual dishes like fettuccine al tartufo (with truffles). The grilled meats are good choices for main courses. Great for alfresco dining but book on weekends.

Clemente alla Maddalena

Piazza della Maddalena 4/5, 00186 Tel 06-683 3633

A 16th-century palazzo opposite the Maddalena church, it has charming wood-paneled dining rooms and a nice terrace in summer. Its creative cooking features taglioni (fresh egg pasta) with clams and artichokes, fillet of Chianino beef with porcini mushrooms, and chestnut cake with orange sauce. Excellent wine list and attentive service.

Fortunato al Pantheon

Via del Pantheon 55 00186 Tel 06-679 2788

Fortunato al Pantheon's excellent cuisine and location attract politicans from the nearby Parliament buildings despite its outdated decor. Rather than sit on its laurels, this longstanding restaurant constantly revives its menu, offering splendid seasonal fare from a traditional repertoire at reasonable prices

II Bacaro

Via degli Spagnoli 27, 00186 Tel 06-687 2554

In a little alley, the tiny, romantic II Bacaro boasts an imaginative cuisine. Dishes include risotto with Castelmagno cheese and red wine, pasta with a carbonara and asparagus sauce, fillet steak in Merlot sauce, and grouper fish carpaccio with oregano and tomato. Chocolate mousse with hot chocolate sauce is a favorite dessert. Book ahead

La Campana

Vicolo della Campana 18, 00186 Tel 06-686 7820

A historic trattoria, this is Rome's oldest, established in 1518. Its exterior, though somewhat unpromising, camouflages a gem inside. Dishes, such as chicken galantina, pasta with broccoli and sting-ray broth, tripe and perperty chicken are followed by lovely cooked cherries with ice cream. Excellent service and a good wine list

Riccioli Café

Via delle Coppelle 13, 00186 Tel 06-6821 0313

This youthful, trendy hotspot features seafood galore. The menu combines a fusion of Mediterranean classics, sushi and sashimi, and there's even an oyster bar. Some good meat dishes are also available, and you can choose from an ample international wine list. Riccioli opens for breakfast, lunch, happy hour, and dinner.

Sangallo

Via dei Coronari 180, 00186 Tel 06-686 5549

An elegant restaurant, Sangallo has a daily menu, often including dishes based on the catch of the day. Sangallo is renowned, however, for its buffalo meat and cheese dishes: pasta with buffalo ragu, carpaccio, stracotto (a type of stew), not to mention various cheese dishes, all bear witness to the restaurant's southern Lazio roots.

Trattoria

Via del Pozzo delle Cornacchie 25, 00186 Tel 06-6830 1427

A fresh take on Sicilian-inspired cuisine that focuses on dishes flavored with herbs, citrus zest, and nuts; examples include meatballs with pistachios and almonds or scallops with oranges and nuts. The restaurant has a contemporary design and the wine list is rigorously Sicilian.

La Rosetta

Via della Rosetta 8, 00186 Tel 06-6830 8841

Booking is imperative at La Rosetta, Rome's finest fish restaurant. Internationally acclaimed, it can be fiendishly expensive, although a cheaper menu is available at lunchtime. Ingredients, such as oysters, tuna, cuttlefish, and grouper, are guaranteed to be the freshest. Food is simple, but expertly cooked. Excellent wine.

PIAZZA NAVONA

Da Tonino

Via del Governo Vecchio 18, 00186 Tel 333-587 0779

The guintessential neighborhood trattoria, this no-frills eatery serves heaped portions of home-style Roman cuisine, including one of the city's best carbonaras, at rock bottom prices. The atmosphere is cozy, warm, and truly authentic. Order house wine and save room for tiramisù or ricotta crostata with pine nuts

Fraterna Domus

Via di Monte Brianzo 62 (corner of Via del Cancello), 00186 Tel 06-6880 2727

A small hostel, run by a group of friendly nuns. Fraterna Domus serves three-course meals at set lunchtime and dinnertime sittings. Try the minestrone or pollo arrosto (roast chicken) - if they figure on the menu - for a fraction of the arice of other centro storico eateries. Book in advance All credit cards, except AmEx, accepted, Closed on Thursdays,

Da Luigi

Piazza Sforza Cesarini 24, 00186 Tel 06-686 5946

On Da Luigi's impressive, verdant square, the chef offers traditional Roman cooking. The restaurant's crowd-pleasing menu is extremely comprehensive. On offer are various salads and fish carpaccio, fresh oysters, pastas, grilled fish and meat dishes, in addition to standards such as fried brains and baked lamb.

Cul de Sac

Piazza Pasquino 73, 00186 Tel 06-6880 1094

With over 30 years of experience, Cul de Sac is Rome's oldest wine bar. While the wine list offers thousands of wines, from Italy and beyond, the food menu also has an equally wide choice. The smoked swordfish, creamed red lentils, sundried tomatoes, chickpea sausages, cheese, salumi, and pâtés make for a substantial meal.

Light Meals and Drinks

Rome can delight the most demanding gourmet and satisfy the keenest appetite, whatever the hour. An enticing array of gelaterie, pasticcerie, pizzerie, enoteche, rosticcerie, and gastronomie means that good food and drink are. literally, around the corner.

Hotel breakfasts often aren't up to scratch and you would be better off starting the day with a genuine Italian breakfast at your local stand-up bar: a cappuccino or latte with a hot cornetto (croissant) or fagottino (similar to a pain au chocolat). If you are in Italy during late winter, when blood red-oranges from Sicily are in season, order a spremuta, a freshly squeezed orange juice.

A heavy morning's sightseeing may leave you ready for a coffee or an apéritif in one of Rome's elegant 19th-century bars, followed by lunch at a wine bar or Roman-style fast food joint. Later, enjoy tea in a tearoom or coffee and cakes at a pasticceria. Once the sun starts to set, there are several places where you can sip a drink, linger over an ice cream, and ponder upon another wonderful day in the city.

PIZZERIAS

Roman bizzerias are an obvious choice if vou feel like an informal meal: they are noisy, convivial, and great fun. Many, however, open only in the evening. Look out for the forno a legno (wood-burning oven) sign – electric ovens simply don't produce the same results. In the best bizzerias vou can sit in view of the vast marble slabs where the bizzaioli flatten the dough and whip the pizzas in and out of the oven on long-handled pallets. The turnaround is fast and lines are common so you may not be encouraged to linger after you have eaten.

The running order is fairly straightforward: you might have a bruschetta (toasted tomato or garlic bread) to start with, some suppli (fried rice croquettes) or fiori di zucca (zucchini flowers in batter filled with hot mozzarella and a single anchovy). Alternatively, try the filetti di baccalà (battered cod fillets) or perhaps a plate of cannellini beans in oil. Follow this with a crisp calzone (folded-over pizza) or the classic Roman pizza - round, thin, and crunchy - with a variety of toppings: the basic margherita (tomato, mozzarella), napoletana (tomato, anchovies, mozzarella), capricciosa (ham, artichokes, eggs, olives) or anything else the pizzaiolo fancies. Draft beer or birra alla spina is the classic drink, but wine is always available, even if limited in choice and quality. You should expect to pay around €14 a head for a meal.

The most representative Roman bizzerias. from all points of view, are Da Baffetto which can be easily found by looking for the line outside, and its offspring, La Montecarlo. Remo in Testaccio and Dar Poeta and Pizzeria Ivo in Trastevere, where tables line the road in summer, are also typically Roman. Another place not to be missed is Panattoni - I Marmi, where a huge variety of customers patiently line up for a sidewalk seat on Viale Trastevere in summer, or clamor for one of the marbletopped tables (which gives it its nickname "the mortuary") inside. For slick interiors and Neapolitan- style (high-rise) pizza, try 'Gusto or Squisito, but again, be prepared to wait in line.

ENOTECHE

Enoteche, or wine bars, offer a very fine selection of wines, mainly from Italy, but often from around the world. Usually run by experts, keen to share their knowledge and advise on the best combinations of wine and food many are simply shops for browsing and buying wine. Others. such as Achilli al Parlamento (see p351) and Bevitoria Navona, offer the traditional mescita - wine and champagne tasting by the glass, accompanied by snacks and canapés. Prices are fairly reasonable: about €3 for a glass on tap. €4 upward for a quality wine, to about €5 for prosecco or spumante. Italian champagne. La Vineria (see p350) in Campo de' Fiori is a typical spot for mescita. especially at night. Nearby, L'Angolo Divino (see p362) and the beautiful II Goccetto with original painted ceilings, serve excellent wines and delicious food

Some of the oldest wine bars are inside historic buildings, such as Caffè Novecento, which serves excellent food, mainly vegetarian. The Antica Locanda is nestled within a 17th-century palazzo while La Curia di Bacco is a candlelit cave dating back to 70 BC.

For more substantial food for around €15–€20 per head. try the bistro- or restaurantstyle enoteche, open from lunch until late. Particularly recommended are the innovative Cul de Sac, Trimani (see p351), Il Tajut serving specialties from Friuli, and Cavour 313. Food emporium 'Gusto (see p351) has a wine bar with a gourmet cheese selection, while the specialty at Al Bric is sarcofage bretone - beef stroganoff with Barolo and a Jerusalem artichoke. The Antico Forno Roscioli is particularly creative, with great dishes such as pasta with radicchio and orange peel and pear pastry with coconut.

Enoteche are often tucked away near famous sights or in unlikely places. Vinando is extremely convenient for the Capitol, while the Tuscan Vineria II Chianti is near the Trevi Fountain. Over in Testaccio, Divinare offers fine labels alongside top quality preserves and chocolate. There are a growing number of wine bars across the river. Crowds at Enoteca Trastevere spill onto the sidewalk outside, while Cantina Paradiso is a quieter venue with a reasonable evening menu. When night falls, try the lively In Vino Veritas Art Bar at the foot of the Janiculum hill.

BIRRERIE

Roman birrerie or beer houses had their hevday in the early 1900s, often with sumptuous interiors and abundant stained glass. Although many subsequently closed, thanks to their growing popularity with most Italian teens they are today undergoing something of a revival. Many British- and Irish-style pubs have also opened At German-style beer houses you can still enjoy beer and substantial snacks in traditional wood-paneled rooms. The Old Bear pub is a jewel inside a 17th-century convent, with romantic candlelight and excellent food and beer lowenhaus is bedecked in old oil paintings depicting typical Bavarian scenes, again with low lighting for a mellow evening. The ever crowded Birreria Peroni. serving classic beer-drinkers' fare, is also well worth a visit for its local beer and lovely decor. Attracting Italians and foreigners alike is the Birreria Viennese/Wiener Bierhaus with its excellent Transvlvanian specialties, which come generously heaped on a wooden plate. If you eat here, or at the equally charming L'Oasi della Birra, expect to pay about €25. Other beer houses with a great atmosphere, food, and late closing times are The Fiddler's Elbow. often with live music La Pace del Cervello – meaning, peace of mind - or Trinity College, a favorite of expatriates and Romans.

FAST FOOD

The term "fast food" in Rome encompasses a cornucopia of choice. The most prolific establishments are pizza a taglio shops where slices of freshly baked pizza are available for  $\pounds 1$  or  $\pounds 2$  – these are sold by weight. Many of these places also sell spit-roasted chickens (pollo allo spiedo), suppli and other fried fare Frontoni's and Forno La Renella in Trastevere are two of the finest. Pizza with fig and ham or potato and rosemary are typical toppings. At La Pratolina, near the Vatican. pizza with sausage, potato. and truffle is on the menu. Chagat, in the Ghetto. prepares tasty kosher food. while Rosticceri, with branches in Testaccio and near Piazza Navona, specializes in classic Roman takeout with an inventive twist.

Rosticcerie and gastronomie also offer roast chicken and potatoes, as well as readymade pasta dishes, cooked vegetables sott'olio (in oil), salads and desserts – useful for takeout picnics. Many offer stools and narrow bars where you can also devour your purchases on the spot. Near the Vatican are some of the finest: Franchi (see p350), Volpetti Più and Ercoli dal 1928.

For a sit-down snack, bars with a tavola calda (hot table) have a similar selection, especially at lunchtime. One of the most elegant is Caffetteria Nazionale. For a taste of traditional deepfried fast food, try Cose Fritte near Piazza del Popolo. In the Galleria Alberto Sordi, opposite the Piazza Colonna, there are two excellent cafés, offering hot and cold food until 10pm.

Most alimentari (food stores) or salumerie (delicatessens) will make you a panino (filled roll). Especially delicious are Lo Zozzone's hot plain pizza pockets stuffed with choices from the shop's counters, where you can also sip a glass of wine. Try a typical local specialty if you see the sign porchetta whole aromatic roast pig with crackling, sliced into rosette (rolls) or thick country-bread sandwiches. A good place to try this is the stall at the tram stop in Viale Carlo Felice opposite San Giovanni in Laterano. Alternatively, go to the hole-in-the-wall Er Buchetto, where you can sit down in (relative) comfort with a glass of wine. For a really typical Roman snack, make a late-afternoon detour to Filetti di Baccalà serving, as the name suggests, fried cod fillets.

For cheese, go to Obiká near the Pantheon. This bar offers a vast choice of fresh buffalo and cow mozzarella; eat it as it should be – unadulterated – or prepared in a variety of creative ways.

Termini now has two good options for those waiting or rushing for trains – the selfservice restaurant Chef Express or Vyta (see p350), which makes up gournet sandwiches to go.

BARS, CAFES, AND TEAROOMS

Roman bars are the city's lifeline: places to meet eat. drink, buy milk or coffee make phone calls, or find a toilet. Some are small, standup, basic one-counter bars for grabbing a quick cornetto and cappuccino: some may be more luxurious, doubling as a cake shop, ice cream parlor. tearoom or tavola calda: or a combination of all these. Most open early at about 7:30am and close late, particularly on weekends, at around midnight or 2am. If you sit down vou will be served by a waiter and pay for the privilege. At busy times, or at popular bars, the crowds at the counter will be large and you will have to wait your turn. If you choose to stand you pay for your drink at the till beforehand. A small tip (5 or 10 cents per drink) may increase your chances of speedy service. In summer, tables cover all the available outdoor space, and the fight for a place in the shade is never ending.

Traditionally elegant – and expensive – bars for peoplewatching are the admirably located Rosati and Doney, as well as Caffè Greco, the 19th-century haunt of artists, writers, and composers (see p133), or the carefully restored La Caffettiera near the Pantheon. Other popular and well-established bars are the Antico Caffè della Pace and Café Romano; both these places are recommended for late-night drinks. Zodiaco on Monte Mario pulls in the crowds for its panoramic views as does Oppio Café near the Domus Aurea. For sheer decadence go to Stravinsky at the Hotel de Russie for wonderful martinis or a relaxed cup of coffee.

Tearooms are becoming increasingly popular. Babington's Tea Rooms (see p134) on Piazza di Spagna serves an outrageously expensive cup of tea and scones in genteel surroundings, while Dolci e Doni is more relaxed. Much better value can be found at II Giardino del Te and Makasar. For serious luxury, you can have a full afternoon tea at the Grand Bar in the St. Regis Grand (see p299).

Coffee fiends should try a gran caffè speciale at the counters of Caffè Sant'Eustachio, or one of Rome's best espressos at La Tazza d'Oro (see p104). Less familiar to tourists however are the excellent Antico Caffè del Brasile (see p351). Bar del Cappuccino, Ciamei, or Spinelli. Ciampini al Café du Jardin with its garden setting and rooftop views is unbeatable in summer, particularly at the apéritif hour, as is the Caffè Parnaso in Parioli, Gradually becoming the norm in Rome are bookstore cafés - Caffè la Feltrinelli and Biblioteg are two examples - and museum cafés. The Caffeteria D'Art al Chiostro del Bramante is in an art gallery on the upper loggia of a beautiful cloister. The bar at the Capitoline Museums has breathtaking views if average food, while the café in the Palazzo delle Esposizioni (see p164) is open throughout the day with an attractive selection of snacks and drinks.

PASTICCERIE

On Sunday mornings you will often see the Romans emerging from the local pastry shop or pasticceria with a beautifully wrapped package. This can contain dainty individual pastries, whole cakes or tarts, traditional Easter colombe (doves) or the Christmas panettoni - huge cakes with raisins and candied peel - all for consumption by large gatherings of friends or family after lunch. The window displays of cake shops are often fantastic. These, and the aroma of brewing coffee, will tempt even those who claim not to have a sweet tooth. The selection is vast from a hot cornetto or brioche in the early morning, a midday bizzetta, or savory tart at lunch, or a choux pastry or fruit tart in the afternoon. Cipriani (see p347), open since 1906, has delicious biscuits, ricotta cake, and apple tart. Nearby Regoli has wonderful mille feuilles and torta con crema e pinoli (pine kernels) Dagnino prepares hundreds of Sicilian specialties every day while Josephine's Bakery sells beautiful iced cakes that are delicious works of art. As well as cakes, numerous shops offer handmade chocolates At some such as Rivendita dei Ciococolati e Vino (see p350), you can pause over a cup of coffee or glass of wine while deciding which vou like best.

GELATERIE

Ice cream (gelato) is one of summer's main delights and at Rome's ice-cream parlors. you are certainly in for a lavish treat. Look for the word artigianale, if you want to savor the best. The choice is endless - water-ices made with a phenomenal variety of fruit; lemon and coffee granite (crushed ice): as well as more exotic ice-cream specialties such as rice pudding, zuppa inglese (English trifle). zabaglione, and tiramisù. Choose as many varieties as the size of your cone or cup will hold, ask for an optional topping of cream (panna) and go for a sensation-filled stroll. Or take a seat and rest awhile - you will be served an obscenely-sized creation at the table (at a price). Gelaterie are open all day, many until late at night, and are very much an integral part of Roman socializing.

Tre Scalini in Piazza Navona is a famous spot for enjoying the pricey, yet so heavenly chocolate tartufo (truffle). while a summer evening in EUR, especially with children. nearly always ends in a trip to Giolitti, a historic ice-cream name The strategically placed, crowded original near the Pantheon deserves at least one visit too. Gourmet fans of gelato should not miss San Crispino, which offers home-made delicacies using the best ingredients. Its zabaglione is made with 20vear-old barrel-aged Marsala. In summer try the mouthwatering susine (yellow plum) flavor and in winter the arancia selvatica (wild orange) should not be missed.

Adults may prefer to pick their night-time treat at Chalet del Lago, again in EUR, while sitting beside the lake. If you come across a small kiosk with the sign grattachecche (most likely in Trastevere and Testaccio), try one of Rome's oldest traditions – ice grated on the spot and enlivened with a variety of classic flavorings.

Evervone has their own favorite flavors and preferred gelateria, but the quest for perfection is an ongoing pleasure. For top zabaglione, try Fiocco di Neve. Giolitti of Via Vespucci or Petrini dal 1926. Palazzo del Freddo makes an exceptionally wonderful rice pudding flavor and its own La Caterinetta - one of the secret ingredients is honey. Al Settimo Gelo, a witty play on words (settimo is seventh. cielo is heaven and gelo is ice), creates exciting chestnut sorbet, chocolate with pepperoncino, ginger and ice cream made from Greek voghurt. For those with dairy allergies, visit the Sicilian gelateria, Gelarmony, which also uses soya milk and has 14 different flavors on offer. At Fior di Luna in Trastevere, all ingredients are organic. Duse, in Parioli, is famed for its white or dark (fondente) chocolate. Less familiar, however, is its baby nettle leaf (ortica), which is usually available in very early spring.

SHOPS AND MARKETS

Rome has been a thriving center for design and cosmopolitan shopping since ancient times. In the heyday of the Empire the finest craftspeople were drawn to Rome, and artifacts and produce of all kinds, including gold, furs, wine, and slaves, were imported from far-flung corners of the Empire to service the needs of the wealthy

Stylish window display an international reputation for their luxuriously chic style in fashion, knitwear, and leather goods (especially shoes and handbags) as well as in interior design, fabrics, ceramics, and glass. The artisan-craftsman tradition is strong and the love of good design filters through into the smallest items. Rome is not a city for bargains (although it is often better Roman population. Shopping in Rome today in many ways reflects this diverse tradition. Italian designers have value than Florence or Milan), but the joys of window shopping here will offer plenty of compensation.

BEST BUYS

Leather goods of all kinds, including shoes and bags, are a strong point. Ready-towear Italian designer clothes are not cheap, but they are certainly less expensive than in other countries. Armani jeans are a good example (see p339). You are also likely to find designer lighting fixtures. for example, at lower prices here Both modern and traditional Italian ceramics and handicrafts can be very beautifully made and, if you have time to wander around the back streets, really unusual and individual gifts can often be found.

SALES

Bargain hunters may like to visit Rome during sale time (saldi), from mid-July through mid-September and from just after Christmas through the first week in March. Top designers (see p338) can slash prices by half, but their clothes are still very expensive even then. Good bargains can be found in the young designer-wear shops (see p339) and good-quality small and large shoe sizes are sold off very cheaply. In general, though, sales in Rome tend to offer moderate rather than huge discounts.

Both the original and the sale price should be quoted on each reduced item. Liquidazioni (closing-down sales) are usually genuine and can sometimes be worth investigating. However, other signs in shop windows such as vendite promozionali (special introductory prices) and sconti (discounts) are often only lures to get you into the shop. The sign on the door saying entrata libera means "browsers welcome."

WHEN TO SHOP

Shops are generally open from 9am to 1pm and from 3.30pm to 7.30pm (4pm to 8pm in the summer months). Some of the shops in the center stay open all day from 10am to 7.30pm.

Most shops are closed on Sunday (except immediately before Christmas). Shops are also closed on Monday morning, apart from most food stores, which close on Thursday afternoons in winter and Saturday afternoons in high summer.

August brings the city to a virtual standstill as Roman families escape the heat to the sea or the mountains, but this is gradually changing, with Romans taking shorter summer holidays. Most shops close for at least 2 weeks around 15 August, the national holiday.

SHOPPING ETIQUETTE

Apart from a few department stores, most Roman shops are small, specializing in just one field. Browsing at leisure may at first seem daunting if you are used to large shopping centers. Customers will almost always receive better attention if they dress smartly – the emphasis on fare una bella figura (making a good impression) is taken seriously.

Sizes are not always uniform, so it is wise to try clothes on if possible before buying, since refunds and exchanges are not always given.

HOW TO PAY

Most shops now accept all the major credit cards, whose signs are displayed on the shop window. Some will also accept foreign currency, though the exchange rate may not be good. When you make a purchase you are bound by Italian law to leave the shop with a scontrino fiscale (receipt). You can try asking for a discount if paying cash and you may be lucky, though many shops have a prezzi fissi (fixed prices) sign.

VAT EXEMPTION

Value Added Tax – VAT (IVA in Italy) – ranges from 12 percent on clothing to 35 percent on luxury items such as jewelry and furs. Marked or advertised prices normally include the IVA. It is possible for non-European Union residents to obtain an IVA refund for individual purchases that exceed about €155, but be prepared for a long and bureaucratic process.

One of many designer shops around Piazza di Spagna

The simplest method is to shop at a place displaying the "Euro Free Tax" sign. Present your passport when you make your purchase and ask for a Global Refund Italia check. On leaving Italy, show your new purchases and receipts at cusar toms and get the check gloves on display stamped. You can either collect your refund at Fiumicino airport or send the check to Global Refund who will reimburse you.

Stylish leather toms

If you wish to buy something from a shop which is not part of the "Euro Free Tax" scheme, you must get the Italian customs to stamp the vendor's receipt at your departure, showing them the purchased article, then mail the receipt back to the shop, who should then send you a refund.

DEPARTMENT STORES AND SHOPPING CENTERS

Department stores, known as grandi magazzini, are few and far between in Rome, but they tend to have longer opening hours than smaller shops. La Rinascente and Coin are good for ready-towear clothes (both for men and women), household linens, and haberdashery, and have well-stocked perfume counters. The Oviesse and Upim chain stores offer moderately priced medium-quality clothes and a variety of household goods.

Another alternative for the zealous shopper is to head for one of Rome's shopping malls. Cinecittà Due Centro Commerciale, built in 1988, offers around 100 shops plus bars, banks, and restaurants within easy reach of the center by Metro (line A to Cinecittà).

Rome's Best: Shopping Streets and Markets

The most interesting shops in Rome are in the old center, so shopping is easy to combine with sightseeing. The shops are often housed in medieval or Renaissance buildings and their window displays can be exquisite. Just like shopkeepers in past centuries, traders tend to specialize in one type of merchandise. Street names often refer to the old tradesmen: locksmiths in Via dei Chiavari, leather jerkin makers in Via dei Giubbonari, and chairs in Via dei Sediari. Today, antique merchants have taken over from the rosary sellers on Via dei Coronari. The top names in fashion and modern design dominate the Via Condotti area, and the artisan-craftsman tradition is still strong around Campo de' Fiori and Piazza Navona.

Via dei Coronari

Art Nouveau and antiques entbusiasts will love browsing in the sbops that line this charming street just northwest of Piazza Navona. But be prepared for bigh prices as most of the items are imported.

Via Cola di Rienzo Situated close to the Vatican Museums, this long wide street has the finest food shops and is also good for clothes, books, and gifts.

Via dei Cappellari

This narrow, medieval street is a great place for watching furniture restorers and other artisans plying their crafts in the open air.

Porta Portese

You can buy anything from antiques to a tin whistle at Trastevere's Sunday morning flea market. (See p353.)

Via Margutta

Upscale antique shops mix with genteel restaurants on this peaceful, cobbled street.

Via del Babuino This street is renowned for designer furniture, lighting, and glass, as well as interesting antique and fashion shops.

Men's and Women's Fashion

Italy is one of the leading lights in high-class fashion, or alta moda. Many of the most famous designers are based in Milan, but Rome is home to a cluster of sophisticated and internationally distinguished fashion houses. There is also a wonderful selection of alta moda shops. Boutiques displaying an eclectic mix of designer goods rub shoulders with showrooms devoted to single collections. But even for those of us unable to splash out on genuine designer-wear, much fun can be gained from a stroll down the glittering streets that radiate out from the Piazza di Spagna, as some of the window displays are truly spectacular.

The "atelier" made-to-measure fashions are beyond most pockets, but the designers also offer ready-towear alternatives in their boutiques. These are not cheap, but cost far less than a tailor-made garment.

WOMEN'S HIGH FASHION

Rome's most famous designer internationally is probably Valentino, who retired in 2008, but whose boutique on Piazza di Spagna is still a mecca for the younger fashionista. Just up the Spanish Steps, in chic Via Sistina, is the Rome branch of Gattinon, which showcases the subtly extravagant haute couture and ready-to-wear designs of Guillermo Mariotto.

The equally impressive Fendi occupies a 19th-century palazzo in Largo Goldoni. Fendi made its name with high-fashion furs, then branched out into leather goods, accessories, and readyto-wear, collaborating with Karl Lagerfeld who designed the coveted double-F logo which emblazons itsvery collectable products. Thirdgeneration family members design the younger, less expensive Fendissime line.

For well over a decade, Laura Biagiotti has reigned as Rome's queen of discreet, conservative couture. From her headquarters in a castle just outside Rome, she designs a range of timelessly elegant knitwear and silk separates for women who don't want to sacrifice style for comfort. She is famous for her use of cashmere and white as well as her creative use of fabrics and quality of finish. Her flagship showroom in Via Borgognona stocks her complete collection, which now includes hosiery, perfumes, swimwear and leather goods. Her scarves make wonderful presents, and are often reduced in price during sales; other items from previous collections are available in the shop all year round at very good discounts. Meanwhile, in nearby Via Condotti, there is the temple to the creations of Salvatore Ferragamo.

Other internationally known Rome-based designers include Renato Balestra, who produces tailored suits and glamorous evening wear and Roberto Capucci, who uses wonderful textures and fabrics in classy suits.

Milan's miraculous fashion house Prada has an alluring branch on Via Condotti, featuring clothes, shoes, and accessories in unmistakable style. The window display is always worth a look. Other luminaries of Italian fashion who have shops in Rome include Giorgio Armani,

VALENTINO

One of the high priests of Italian fashion, Valentino Garavani, opened the doors of his Roman studio in 1959 to a distinguished clientele which included Sophia Loren, Audrey Hepburn, and Jackie Kennedy, and has never looked back. He has created some of the most dramatic and flattering evening dresses of the last

Gianni Versace, Trussardi, and Dolce & Gabbana.

An affirmed star in readyto-wear is Roberto Cavalli, whose design team produces some coolly imaginative and stylish collections.

If you're looking for clothes from more unconventional designers, Gente is the place to go – its Roman showrooms have exclusive rights to the original couture collections of avant-garde stylists such as Dolce & Gabbana, Moschino, and Jean-Paul Gaultier.

MaxMara also has a number of branches here. Chic suits and separates are the mainstays of this popular label. The quality of fabric and finish is superb and, with suits available for around €500, its prices are much lower than other alta moda couture designers' ready-to-wear lines.

MEN'S TAILORS AND DESIGNER WEAR

Italian men are every bit as fashion conscious as the women, and there is no shortage of choice in Rome for the well-dressed man. Suits generally begin at around 6620, jackets 6415, and trousers 6155.

Most of the "star" designers of women's alta moda have a shop for men, like Valentino, Prada, and Gianni Versace. The designs are generally less dramatic than the women's, with the accent on understated sophistication and casual sportiness. Valentino's distinctive monogrammed accessories are relatively affordable. Battistoni is probably the four decades. In the 1970s he began designing readyto-wear lines for both men and women alongside his alta moda collections, and you can now find his very distinctive "V" logo on a wide range of accessories. Valentino's headquarters is in a huge palazzo in Piazza Mignanelli, and he also has a separate ready-to-wear boutique nearby (see p342). most prestigious designer concentrating on menswear. Giorgio Battistoni and family's fine custom-made shirts and suits have been in demand with movie stars and top society for 50 years. Etro sells classically cut clothes and accessories for men and women in exotic Italian-designed printed fabrics.

Ermenegildo Zegna is housed in a Baroque palazzo setting. It offers elegant readyto-wear, and the master tailor Gaetano will also make to measure Davide Cenci has been a mecca for those in search of the English country gentleman look since 1926. Brioni offers traditional tailor-made and own-label ready-to-wear men's clothing Trussardi sells beautifully tailored classics and Testa has impeccably tailored suits that appeal to younger Romans. Degli Effetti stocks more avant-garde designers such as Romeo Gigli and Jean-Paul Gaultier.

YOUNG DESIGNER WEAR

There is a huge choice for the young. Top designers Valentino and Armani offer their particular styles translated into more affordable lines at Valentino Sport and Emporio Armani (Armani jeans are good value at around £90) Fendi has its Fendissime line, Ermano Scervino also has a boutique at Piazza di Spagna, not far from Gianfranco Ferré's vouthinspired label. Targeted at the younger set, these are good places to pick up stylish, sporty numbers.

Timberland is another casual label very popular with young Italians. Average prices are in the region of  $\xi$ 52 for a shirt and  $\xi$ 210 for raincoats.

Energie is a big hit and has some of the best window displays in Rome. Teenagers flock here for jeans and T-shirts, both the shop's own and other labels. Trussardi's casual line is found at Tru Trussardi, and Aria, Diesel, and SBU are also very popular. Eventi represents the more avant-garde styles – dark, as they call it here – fusing Gothic, New Age, and punk influences which can result in some outrageous window creations. For women, Via del Governo Vecchio is the place to head for. Arsenale, Luna e L'altra, and Maga Morgana offer some unconventional designer clothes in a pleasant, friendly atmosphere.

HIGH STREET FASHION

Rome is not a good place to look for everyday wear, since there is a distinct lack of mid-price shops bridging the huge gap between the dazzlingly priced alta moda designer exclusives and the ultra-cheap goods sold in markets (see pp352-3). Lower-budget shops do exist. but quality is often poor. If you have the stamina, you may find a bargain along Via del Corso. Via del Tritone, Via Nazionale, Via Cavour. Via Cola di Rienzo, Via Ottaviano, or the Via dei Giubbonari

The most convenient places to shop are department stores like La Rinascente. Coin. and Upim (see p335). They may not sound exciting. but you can browse at leisure and occasionally find nice things. It is also worth trying shops mentioned under Young Designer Wear particularly the alta moda designers' cheaper lines such as Emporio Armani. At the different branches of Discount dell'Alta Moda vou can find end-of-season designer labels at 50 percent less than the boutique prices. And while you don't need to come all the way to Rome to shop at Benetton, there are many shops here, which sell the authentic garments in their universal colors.

KNITWEAR

Knitwear is a particular strength in Italian design, and in Rome there are plenty of specialist shops. Laura Biagiotti is celebrated for her luxurious cashmere separates, and Missoni for spectacular kaleidoscopic patterns and colors.

Krizia no longer has a shop in Rome but sophisticated knitwear can be purchased at Liz.

Gallo has a wide range of colorful tights and socks in wool and cashmere. Other shops, such as the Luisa Spagnoli outlets, offer a wider selection, including lowerpriced items.

LINGERIE

This is another Italian specialty excelling in both style and quality, with lines like La Perla exported worldwide. Lingerie is traditionally sold in top household linen shops (see p345) – Cesari, for example, has its own complete range. There are also boutiques specializing in lingerie and swimwear.

Liberblu has a range of swimwear that's ideal for Italian beaches, as well as lingerie and women's night attire. Brighenti is said to be where movie stars go for their lingerie. Schostal has more traditional underwear with a very good men's section.

SECONDHAND CLOTHES

Those who are willing to browse will find a wide variety of secondhand clothes. whether inspired by a collector's interest in vintage clothes or a low budget. Apart from Via Sannio and Porta Portese markets (see p353), which have many secondhand clothes stalls, the mecca is Via del Governo Vecchio, Among the best shops in this ancient street near Piazza Navona is Mado, which has mostly 1920s dresses and some hats and jewelry.

Le Gallinelle offers a marvelous selection of secondhand and vintage clothes, as well as their own line. At Daniela e Daniela in Via Mastro Giorgio, Testaccio, there is an excellent range of women's clothes, mostly sporting designer labels. Via del Pellegrino is also a good street for shops selling secondhand clothes and for independent stores.

Shoes and Accessories

Italy's leather industry is renowned all over the world, and shoes, bags, and belts are a good buy in Rome. Accessories in general are not just an afterthought but an integral part of an outfit for the well-dressed Roman. The choice of stylish jewelry, scarves, ties, and other accessories is excellent.

SHOES

Rome is full of shoe shops, ranging from high-quality stores in the Via Condotti area (where prices tend to start at  $\pounds$ 170) to the more economical shops around the Trevi fountain, and every big market has its bargain shoe stalls on its fringes.

Probably the best-known shop is Salvatore Ferragamo – one of the world's top shoe shops. It stocks classic yet fashion-conscious shoes, as well as women's clothing and leather goods. The silk signature scarves are famous.

Fratelli Rossetti is a close contender for the number one position. Founded by brothers Renzo and Renato some 50 years ago, this company produces classic men's shoes and beautiful dressy low-heeled shoes for women that reflect the most up-to-the-minute trends. Along with Campanile in Via Condotti it represents the epitome of elegance. The prices, of course, are skyhigh but why not buy something small, and at least you'll have the bag!

Barrilà, which is located near Piazza San Lorenzo in Lucina, sells more affordable women's shoes.

Boccanera's retail outlets, over in Testaccio, offer the latest men's and women's shoe styles from top Italian and British designers, with prices to match.

Silvano Lattanzi is one of the longer-lived shoe shops in Rome, having been in business for almost two decades, but it can't compete with Domus, which opened in 1938. Silvano Lattanzi sells made-to-measure footwear for both men and women, particularly shoes for special occasions and to customers' personal specifications. Domus sells a selection of high-quality footwear, specializing in classic shoes for women. They also stock a limited range of leather bags and accessories. De Bach has colorful shoe styles for women.

Via Frattina has several more great shoe shops such as Pollini, which makes boots and bags for both men and women in trendy and imaginative styles. Native designer Fausto Santini stocks original, stylish, colorful designs for younger people. More moderate prices can be found at Cervone, which specializes in highly colorful women's shoes.

Borini stocks simple and elegant, low-heeled designs. The Mr Boots chain of shops stocks a wide range of trendy boots and casual shoes for men and women, while Nuyorica sells quirky, smart footwear for women alongside its select clothes range.

LEATHER BAGS AND ACCESSORIES

The most famous of Rome's leather shops is the supertrendy Gucci. a dandy's paradise selling shoes, suitcases, handbags, wallets, belts, and other accessories. It has a fashion boutique for men and women and is well-known for its silk ties and scarves. Fendi also has exquisite leather goods as well as some lowerpriced lines in synthetic materials and a range of gift items. Although their famous "stripe" line of leatherfinished synthetic handbags cost €130 (and their allleather ones start at €155). they are at least cheaper to buy here than abroad. Skin, situated around the Via Sistina area, is also quite pricey. Located a short walk to the south of Skin, near the Trevi Fountain, is La Sella. It sells all things leather, including a range of shoes, bags, purses, and belts.

Mandarina Duck's brightly colored fabric bags and range of luggage are very much in fashion and make an attractive (and vegetarian) alternative to the more traditional leather styles. For sleek, utterly fashionable handbags check out the latest creations from Furla or go for one of Alviero Martini's famous "map" bags.

For a more unusual men's present, try La Cravatta in Trastevere. In addition to their selection of classy handmade ties, they also manufacture ties to customers' specifications. You can choose the design, material, length, and shape of the tie to create the perfect gift.

CLASSIC JEWELRY

What Cartier is to Paris. Tiffany & Co is to New York. and Asprev's is to London. Bulgari is to Rome This internationally revered ieweler's has passers-by glued to the windows gazing at its large fat gemstones. These "windows" are rather curious small boxes inserted into a wall with one or two pieces of jewelry in each of them, which adds to the feeling of looking at precious items in a case at a museum. Bulgari's watches, especially the men's, are popular and very elegant, as are the famous mesh necklaces. It specializes in large, colorful stones in High Renaissance-style settings but also produces a selection of contemporary designs. This was one of Andy Warhol's favorite shops, and it is definitely the most palatial shop on Via Condotti. Inside, the shop's atmosphere is one of almost religious awe and contemplation.

Buccellati is an offshoot of the famous Florentine dynasty, which was begun by Mario Buccellati in the 1920s and patronized by the poet Gabriele d'Annunzio. Its delicately engraved designs are inspired by the Italian Renaissance, and are real classics, displaying superb craftsmanship.

Ansuini designs are fashionable yet classic with strong, imaginative themes being introduced for each new collection. Massoni, founded in 1790, is one of Rome's oldest jewelry houses. Its refined one-offs and brooches are quite outstanding.

At Moroni Gioielli you will also find imaginative, unique pieces of the highestquality workmanship.

Peroso is an old-fashioned shop which has been going since 1891 and specializes in antique jewelry and silverware. Boncompagni Sturni sells traditional designs with the emphasis on quality and craftsmanship. You have to ring the bell to be admitted to both of these shops, and they are extremely expensive.

Tiffany & Co. sells its classic designs in jewelry, watches, accessories, and gifts at an exquisite outlet on elegant Via del Babuino.

COSTUME JEWELRY

For less conventional tastes, there are several shops selling innovative, avantgarde pieces, often using semiprecious metals and stones. Via dei Coronari 193 is worth trying.

Tempi Moderni has an interesting collection of Art Deco and Liberty (Art Nouveau) period jewelry including Bakelite brooches. There is also a range of designer pieces from the fifties and sixties.

Danae makes interesting pieces using silver and precious stones, inspired by Coco Chanel, while Paola Volpi uses industrial materials and is one of the most interesting designers of modern jewelry in Italy.

TRADITIONAL GOLDSMITHS AND SILVERSMITHS

The mainstay of Rome's jewelry industry is still the traditional artisan goldsmith and silversmith, working to order in tiny studio workshops. These are concentrated in the old Jewish Ghetto area by the Tiber River, Campo de' Fiori, Ponte Sisto near Via Guilia, and in Montepietà (which is also where the city pawnbrokers are situated).

Artisan jewelry can also be found in Via dei Coronari, Via dell'Orso, and Via del Pellegrino. The jewelers create individual pieces to their own designs and have often learned their profession from their parents and grandparents. They will also do repair work, or take old gold jewelry, melt it down, and make it into something to the customer's order.

GLOVES, HATS, AND HOSIERY

If you're looking for top quality, you will find an expensive line in gloves at Di Cori and Sermoneta, both of which stock every imaginable kind.

To find smart leather gloves to match your new shoes and handbags, whatever their color, make a visit to Settimio Mieli which is sure to have something suitable, and at a reasonable price.

Catello d'Àuria specializes in gloves and hosiery. Borsalino is a good place to go for all sorts of hats, including its namesake.

Calzedonia has several branches in the city and will serve you with almost any color or pattern of tights and stockings that you could wish for.

Interior Design

Italian design belongs to a long-established tradition based on the skills of the master craftsman, and some firms have a history going back hundreds of years. Rome's stylish interior design shops are worth seeking out, even if it is only to look around and enjoy the ambience. You might well pick up some design ideas for your home, or find some interesting or unusual things to buy. They are an excellent place to buy souvenirs and presents to take home.

FURNITURE

Italy is well known for its stylish, well-made furniture. Although there is no distinct area of Rome that is renowned for its furniture shops, many of the top stores are located to the north of the city center.

In the heart of the historic center, on Via dei Banchi Vecchi, is Bernardini. This small store is filled with its trademark slick, elegant designs, from wood and steel furniture to more affordable household items.

Decoration 2000 dazzles with its sensible prices and its covetable Tuscan wrought iron and Venetian painted furniture in sun-drenched or delicate hues.

Spazio Sette, near Largo Argentina, is worth visiting for the building itself. The store has a spectacular showroom on three levels in the Palazzo Lazzaroni, a former cardinal's palace. Spazio Sette is one of Rome's premier home furnishing stores and, as well as furniture, the shop stocks plenty of items that would make interesting gifts. The furniture, including modern, laminated, stack-up chairs, and the vases, glass, bowls, and kitchen equipment, are jumbled together in a fascinating display.

Nearby, on Piazza Cairoli, stands Confalone, a furniture shop that specializes in well-upholstered sofas and armchairs, though dining tables and chairs also crowd the display area. The shop's wide range of classical designs suits any interior.

Benedetti, which occupies a line of shops on the Via Marmorata, offers a range of fine modern wood furniture while Fattorini, on Via Arenula, gives a modern Italian take on 1970s retro styling.

LIGHTING FIXTURES

Lighting fixtures are one of the most popular and more easily transportable items, and there are several superb showrooms in Rome that are worth a visit.

Flos is a merger of two design houses whose Roman showroom displays its lights as if they were museum exhibits. The design style is chic and minimalist, with plenty of black and white, chrome, and steel.

Nearby Artemide is, like Flos, a design house in its own right, and is similarly well-known abroad. Its showroom in Rome is elegant, with expensive, hi-tech lighting design. Borghini sells less famous names, and is therefore more economical.

To see examples of light fittings from all of Italy's leading producers, head to Obor, where hi-tech items are displayed alongside more traditional designs.

Some independent craftspeople take a lead when it comes to lampshade design. Paolo Marj, for instance, is a sculptor working in mixed media such as glass, wood, and plastics to create lamps that are original works of art in themselves. Also on sale is a variety of original sculptures by the artist.

Italian lighting and other electrical equipment is designed for 220–240 volts. If you are going to use it in countries with lower voltage always ask the shop whether the product needs a transformer, as this can depend on the model.

Lighting fixtures generally take screw-bulbs, although some designer models can be ordered with fittings for bayonet-bulbs.

KITCHENS AND BATHROOMS

Although you won't be able to take one home with you, you may like to take a look at the ultramodern hi-tech kitchen designs in Rome.

For an overview of the latest smart, steel designs, visit Arclinea, near Ponte Garibaldi, for its select display of stateof-the-art kitchens. Equally inspiring are the kitchens on display at Emporio Cucina, just off Piazza Navona.

Italian bathroom shops concentrate almost exclusively on modern designs, some of which are luxuriously decadent. Ravasini has very decorative floral fixtures with some matching accessories. Materia is another bathroom shop that sells all the latest styles.

TILES

The Italian ceramic tile tradition is an ancient one. A great variety of tiles is displayed in kitchen and bathroom showrooms, but there are also one or two specialist shops.

Ceramiche Musa specializes in modern tiles incorporating decorative floral and ancient Roman motifs, which are popular, especially with foreign visitors.

GLASS

Decorative glass objects are a popular buy in Rome. Murano Più, just behind Piazza Navona, sells Murano and other glass items at reasonable prices. This shop is one of the few that open on Sundays – which can be useful for visitors on short trips to Rome.

Archimede Seguso also specializes in Murano glass but includes smaller pieces and also offers a range of giftsized items.

Arteque is a very beautiful shop which has a more traditional flavor.

For less expensive gifts, try Stilvetro. It is the ideal place for pasta bowls, glass, and ceramics.

An added advantage is that shipment abroad can usually be arranged at any of these glass establishments so you can make your purchase without worrying about transporting it home.

FABRICS

Beautiful fabrics and wallpapers to order are offered by II Sigillo which has a rich assortment of samples.

At Celsa you can find all manner of fabrics, some at bargain discount prices. If you are looking for further bargains, take a walk round the old Jewish quarter, II Ghetto, that runs from Largo Argentina down to the Tiber; the area contains numerous fabric shops such as Paganini. During sale times (see p334), remnants of fabrics (scampoli) are always sold off cheaply, and if you are lucky you could find just the right fabric for just the right price.

HOUSEHOLD LINEN AND KITCHENWARE

kitchenware, don't miss C.u.c.i.n.a. tucked away in No. 65 Via Mario de' Fiori. It stocks kitchen utensils from all over the world, as well as pots and pans in both rustic and hi-tech styles and countless space-saving kitchen accessories.

Right next to Piazza Venezia, House & Kitchen specializes in articles for the table and kitchen, selling every gadget imaginable.

The Roman pizzeria 'Gusto (see p331) also offers an interesting range of kitchen utensils and essentials for sale in its first-floor shop.

Finally, there is Limentani, whose basement shop in the old ghetto area is well stocked with interesting gift ideas. Here, you'll find an extraordinary array of household and kitchenware, including silver, china, and crystal items.

Books and Gifts

Rome offers huge scope for gift buying, both in the well-established tourist stores in the centro storico (historic center) and smaller shops in less frequented parts of the city. Seeking out the smaller shops can be an adventure in itself, as many are in attractive parts of the city that you might not otherwise visit.

Unusual artisan ceramics, wonderful books on Italian art and architecture, paper products, vintage Italian film posters, beautiful prints of historic views of Rome, and specialist sweets and cakes make ideal souvenirs to take home. While masterworks by Michelangelo, Raphael, and Caravaggio are popular icons for T-shirts, statuettes, and postcards, religious artifacts are also readily available in the city that hosts the papal seat.

BOOKSTORES

Rome is rich in bookstores, from the encyclopedic to the very specialized. Italian books, both hardback and softback, are generally very attractive but also tend to be expensive.

As Italy's largest and most renowned bookstore chain. Feltrinelli dedicates its endless shelf space to both modern and classic Italian literature and also houses a wide selection of nonfiction titles Feltrinelli International in Via Emanuele Orlando has an excellent range of foreignlanguage fiction and specialist nonfiction, covering various subjects including art, cookery, travel, and history. It also stocks some superb photographic, art, and movie posters. Magazines and stationery are available as well and the noticeboard is a lifeline for information on rooms for rent and Italian language courses.

Specialist English bookstores include The Lion Bookshop and the Anglo-American Book Co., both of which are located near Piazza di Spagna. In Trastevere, the Almost Corner Bookshop, though small, has probably the most extensive selection of English language fiction in the capital, as well as non-fiction titles – from ancient Rome to modern Italian culture and politics.

The Libreria del Viaggiatore is jam-packed with maps and travel guides (some in English). Libreria Godel is good for browsing and Remainder sells half-price bargains and games for children. For prospective chefs, fantastic recipe books on Italian and international cuisine can be found at Emporio Libreria 'Gusto (see p351) in Piazza Augusto Imperatore

As an alternative to traditional bookstores, there are lots of cut-price deals at the secondhand book stalls in Via delle Terme di Diocleziano and in Largo della Fontanella di Borghese.

MULTIMEDIA AND MUSIC

The newly-opened Feltrinelli in Galleria Alberto Sordi on Via del Corso and its sister store in Largo Argentina, represent the closest Rome gets to a multimedia megastore. At both these stores, in addition to their stock of fiction and nonfiction titles, there is a reasonable selection of CDs and DVDs that cover mainstream tastes.

For harder-to-find albums visit Ricordi, which is considered Rome's biggest specialist music store. Besides the fine collection of records, cassettes, and CDs, it sells musical instruments and musical scores in its four central outlets.

STATIONERY AND PAPER CRAFTS

Near the Pantheon, the Florentine II Papiro sells a great range of illustrious paper-based products that include notebooks, diaries, envelopes, and beautiful seal and wax sets that make for an ideal gift. In a similar vein. a wide selection of pretty marbled notebooks writing papers, and files and boxes in various sizes are also on offer at Laboratorio Scatole Pineider, stationery suppliers to the Roman gentry, will print sets of exquisite visiting cards for you. The more modern Vertecchi is filled with original paper gifts. including boxes of every shape and size, while Fabriano has its own fabulous line of stationery and notebooks

POSTERS AND PRINTS

Near Piazza Navona, L'Image has an extensive range of artistic, photographic, and movie posters on sale, as well as a decent range of stationery, souvenirs, and calendars. Geared more toward antiques, Galleria Trincia sells good quality and reasonably priced prints of 17th-century panoramic paintings of Rome, as well as watercolors. It also undertakes restoration work.

For superb posters on past exhibitions as well as stylish souvenirs and postcards, visit Rome's museum shops, for example, Il Chiostro del Bramante near Piazza Navona, or Complesso del Vittoriano next to the Forum.

ARTISAN HANDICRAFTS AND DESIGN

The central Via del Pellegrino is a street crammed with small specialist outlets such as Le Tre Ghinee, which sells ceramics and glass objects. La Chiave is a good choice for gifts, selling all things ethnic with the emphasis on bright furnishings and original jewelry.

If you are more interested in contemporary design, visit the Palazzo delle Esposizioni (see p164) where a wide range of objects by famous designers is available. For a really original gift, try Bottega del Marmoraro, a workshop that reproduces ancient Roman and Pompeian inscriptions on marble. The owner will recreate any design you choose to order.

SOUVENIRS AND RELIGIOUS ARTIFACTS

Most of the tobacconists in central Rome sell postcards, stamps, and a variety of souvenirs. Cheap and sometimes appealingly kitsch souvenirs are also found at the mobile stalls around the major tourist attractions.

Bookshops near the main basilicas, such as Libreria Belardetti, sell souvenirs and religious mementos. Other shops specialize in religious articles for both the clergy and the layperson. Facing the Vatican gates in Via di Porta Angelica there are several shops, such as Al Pellegrino Cattolico, selling artifacts to visiting pilgrims.

SWEETS AND COOKIES

In addition to the several bars and cafés that sell cakes and cookies to take out (da portare via), there are a number of specialist stores in Rome well worth taking the time out to visit.

Near Piazza Navona in the center, La Deliziosa (see p331), though small, offers a great range of classic Italian desserts and cakes; the ricotta-based variety deserves a special mention. Farther afield, at the top

Art and Antiques

Rome's art and antique shops range from exclusive establishments to contemporary art galleries. In response to a fashion for collecting early 20thcentury artifacts, new dealers and galleries are springing up throughout Rome – Venini's Murano glass is popular, as are lighting and furniture. Many more sell general bric-à-brac and jewelry. Copies of antique prints can be picked up for a fraction of the original's price. Rome is not good for antique bargains, but it is worth looking in shops along Via dei Cappellari and Via del Pellegrino or going to the Porta Portese Sunday market (see p353).

ANTIQUES AND OLD MASTER PAINTINGS

There are antique shops dotted all over the center of Rome, though the cream tend to be concentrated in distinct areas. Discreet haggling in the shops is accepted practice, but even if you get a reduction in price, make sure the dealer provides you with the relevant export documents.

The famous Via del Babuino, and to a lesser extent Via Margutta, which is better known for its art galleries, are home to around 30 of Rome's grandest showrooms for antique furniture, Old Master paintings, and objets d'art.

Cesare Lampronti is owned by the top dealer of that name. Aided and complemented by his partner Carlo Peruzzi, he sells 16th- to 18th-century European paintings, with an emphasis on Roman and Italian works in general.

Alberto di Castro, situated in Piazza di Spagna, is a fourth-generation dealer specializing in statues, paintings, and other precious objects from the medieval to the Neoclassical periods.

Via Giulia (see p153) has over 20 high-quality antique shops to choose from. Definitely worth a visit is Antichità Cipriani, which is a temple to owner Paola Cipriani's love of simply elegant Neoclassical furniture and paintings. She also sells the occasional modern piece. Another shop not to miss on Via Giulia is Antiquariato Valligiano.

This is the only place in Rome where you can find 19thcentury Italian country furniture, a rustic antidote for those overpowered by the grandiose Baroque.

Via Monserrato, running parallel, is worth scouring for slightly lower-quality pieces at more attainable prices.

The area just to the north of Via Giulia is also a good hunting ground. Mario Prilli, on Via Banchi Nuovi, is tiny, but don't let that deter you. With every inch of space occupied by a wide variety of antiques, this fascinating shop is worth a look even if you are only browsing.

Via dei Coronari is almost exclusively devoted to antiques, with over 40 shops lining both sides of the street. Quality is very high – as are the prices. It is a good place for Baroque and Empire elaborate inlaid vases, secretaries, and consoles. Ad Antiqua Domus is a treasure trove of antique Italian furniture. Pieces dating from ancient Rome through the 19th century are on sale.

L'Art Nouveau specializes in high-quality Art Nouveau (usually called Liberty here). The Art Deco Gallery sells furniture and sculpture from that period.

Piero Taloni has a superb collection of lighting fixtures from the Baroque through Art Deco periods. Antichità Arredamenti also specializes in Italian light fittings and candlesticks.

Slightly farther away is Via della Stelletta, which is home to a handful of unusual and fascinating shops. Acanto is an inexpensively priced Aladdin's cave with an eclectic mix of objets d'art. It is the perfect place to search for religious memorabilia, Italian curiosities, and prints.

Bilenchi is yet another specialist, this time in exquisite, early 20th-century lamps.

Another relatively undiscovered area is the one around Via del Boschetto and Via Panisperna. Shops around here tend to specialize in early 20th-century artifacts, with some English Victorian pieces thrown in.

Tad is a fairly good place to come and browse, with a large collection of weird and original design items from all around the world.

Of course there are many perennial favorites apart from these streets. The best way to discover them is through word of mouth or just by chance as you stroll along. Antichità Carnovale is a shop full of interesting 19th- and 20th-century canvases, while Galleria dei Cosmati is one of the oldest antique shops in Rome, and definitely one of the largest. It offers an impressive collection of European antiques.

Anticaja e Petrella has an eccentric collection of used junk and printed ephemera stored under Sant'Andrea della Valle (see p123).

MODERN ART

Rome is rich in avant-garde galleries exhibiting paintings by recognized Modern Masters through the up-andcoming generation of young, mainly Italian, artists.

Rome's art galleries are usually open 10am–1pm and 5–8pm Tue–Sat. Some open only in the afternoon; others also stay open on Monday afternoon. The best times to visit are afternoons and early evenings.

As with Rome's antique shops, the art galleries tend to be concentrated in a couple of distinct areas. The largest of these covers the triangular area between Via del Babuino and Via di Ripetta and adjoining streets, known locally as the Trident. Via Margutta is also home to several prestigious private galleries.

The Galleria Valentina Moncada exhibits contemporary Italian and international art and also showcases 20thcentury photography, while Monogramma Arte

Contemporanea deals with promising young artists from Italy and abroad.

One of this area's highlights is the Via Margutta art fair (see p353), which usually takes place around Christmas and in springtime.

The enterprising Fontanella Borghese gallery shows works by foreign artists such as Sam Francis and Andy Warhol. Also on view at the gallery are Italian artists like Boetti, Festa, and Turcato.

Via Giulia and its surroundings is the next area to investigate: Galleria Giulia is a gallery-cum-bookshop with works by artists such as Argeles, Boille, Cano, Cascella, Echaurren, Erba, and Lionni, as well as by Bauhaus artists and German Expressionists. Fabio Sargentini at L'Attico follows the latest trends in Italian art from Del Giudice to Corsini and Fabiani.

Another innovative venture in the city center is Galleria Bonomo (owned by Alessandra Bonomo), which spotlights Italian and foreign painters such as Schifano, Boetti, Twombly, Nunzio, Tremlett, LeWitt, and Dokoupil.

On the other side of the Tiber, the Galleria Lorcan O'Neill showcases contemporary Italian and international art. In 2010 the gallery hosted its third exhibition of British artist Tracey Emin's work.

ANTIQUE PRINTS AND PHOTOGRAPHS

The justifiably celebrated Nardecchia, named after its erudite owner Plinio, is the cream of Rome's print dealers. Look out for originals by the 18th-century engraver

Piranesi, as well as views of the city and depictions of ancient Roman life.

Another Roman institution, Casali, has been trading for over 100 years. The family now runs two shops specializing in 16th- to 19th-century drawings and engravings of Roman scenes ranging from museum-standard Piranesi down to relatively inexpensive unknown and delightfully decorative floral scenes.

The Florence-based Alinari family is renowned for its old sepia photographs of Italy from 1890 onward, including shots of Rome a century ago. At its Roman outlet, prices of photographs from the original plates start at around €30 and mounted prints at €280. Larger sizes can be mounted on wood or card.

Another place definitely worth heading for in search of that perfect print of old Rome and some enjoyable, relaxing, and maybe persuasive browsing is the Mercato delle Stampe (see p352).

Food and Drink

Having sampled the local cuisine during your stay in Rome, you may be tempted to take home some irresistible delicacies that are typical of Italy. The traditional Italian food stores, alimentari, offer an extensive range of goods and are a great place to start. However, specialist shops are also well worth a visit. Shop around and choose from many typically Italian products such as pecorino romano cheese, Parma ham, extra-virgin olive oil, dried porcini mushrooms, sun-dried tomatoes, olives, and grappa as well as superb wines from Lazio and elsewhere. If coffee or chocolate feature on your list, then there's plenty of opportunity to satisfy those cravings too.

Do bear in mind, however, that customs restrictions can apply to certain foodstuffs. Also, when on your shopping sprees, a decent pocket-sized dictionary can be very useful in helping you unravel the unfathomable.

ALIMENTARI

The well-stocked Fratelli Fabbi, near Piazza di Spagna, has an exceptional selection of delicious cold meats and cheeses from every corner of Italy, as well as carefully chosen quality wines and sparkling wines to accompany them. A few doors down Via della Croce, Focacci is a stiff competitor with its wonderful array of Italian delicacies, while nearby Cambi caters to its loyal clientele with similarly first-rate fare.

Elsewhere in the center, near Campo de' Fiori, the renovated Rosciol (see p328), with a reputation for quality and friendly service, is a favorite among locals.

Farther afield. Franchi (see b329) in Prati is recognized as one of the best delicatessens in the capital for its tempting window display of seafood platters, pâtés, regional cheeses, and cold meats that continue to pull in the crowds. The historic but expensive Volpetti in Testaccio is synonymous with great service and uncompromising quality. Aside from specializing in unusual cheeses, olive oils, vinegars, and a fabulous selection of food hampers, it stocks a variety of Italian lard and caviar - you can even try before you buy. Nearby is the well-stocked La Fromagerie, though those who prefer organic produce may wish to head to Canestro.

The Ferrara Store in Trastevere sells almost everything from fresh pasta to chocolate, in addition to an amazing range of hams and cheeses, and great wines to complement them. In the vicinity of Via Veneto is Carlo Gargani with its elaborate variety of food items.

A savior for commuters and tourists is Vyta (see p329) located inside Termini station; you can choose from a selection of appetizing sandwiches or wines by the glass (alla mescita) and enjoy them at the bar. You can even make a last-minute gift purchase from the wide array of preserves, pasta, and wines at your disposal. Vyta opens its doors on Sundays too.

CHEESE SPECIALISTS

For the ultimate cheese lover. a wider choice of regional and national cheeses, including the best buffalo mozzarella in town, can be found in a select number of specialist shops. In the Pinciano district. the Casa dei Latticini Micocci sells a comprehensive range of cheeses from even the most remote regions of Italy. While in Trastevere, the family-run store Antica Caciara Trasteverina also has a vast assortment of local and regional products, which include sheep's ricotta and the Piemontese toma del fen. Branches of Cisternino sell well-priced local cheeses.

CHOCOLATE SPECIALISTS

The capital now hosts a number of specialist shops designed to fulfil the needs of the ever-expanding luxury food market. In the centro storico Chocolat sells brand name and homemade chocolate and also organizes. occasional tastings and dinners for connoisseurs. In Santa Croce. La Bottega del Cioccolato is known for its creativity - try their chocolate Colosseums. Elsewhere. close to the Pantheon, the landmark Moriondo e Gariglio has been in operation since 1850, serving up strictly Piedmontese treats Across the Tiber in Trastevere. Dolce Idea produces bizarre but interesting concoctions such as white chocolate with lemon liqueur filling and dark chocolate laced with ginger. Rivendita di Cioccolato e Vino (see p330) can also be recommended for its selection

ENOTECHE

Although most alimentari and supermarkets stock a decent selection of reasonably priced Italian wines, Rome's many enoteche (see p328) represent a more characteristic and gratifying alternative. As well as being wine bars and sometimes even restaurants, they also sell carefully selected wines, after-dinner liqueurs, spirits, and beers to take out.

In the center, the cramped but friendly Mr Wine displays a superb range of mainly Italian and a few French wines, as well as a host of sparkling wines, whiskies, grappa, rum, liqueurs, and some classic Italian food. La Vineria (see p328) in Campo de' Fiori, while maintaining its status as an institution for many bohemian drinkers, also successfully doubles up as a well-stocked and competitively priced wine shop.

Better known for its Neapolitan pizza parlor, chic restaurant and lively wine bar, 'Gusto (see p328) in Piazza Augusto Imperatore offers an outstanding assortment of wines for sale too. Don't pass by the shop either, as it is full of designer kitchen accessories and specialist cookbooks with recipes for both Italian and international cuisine.

The central Achilli Enoteca al Parlamento (see p328) and L'Angolo Divino both warrant a visit for a refined alternative, especially if you want to relax with an apéritif while you select wines to carry home. Ferrazza (see p362) in San Lorenzo and II Vinaietto near Campo de' Fiori also deserve special mentions for their extensive wine lists and memorable ambience.

In Trastevere, the wellstocked enoteca Bernabei is good value for money as is the family-run Trimani (see p328) near Termini, which has an astounding variety of wines and spirits.

Others that should not be overlooked include the impressive Costantini in Piazza Cavour, the beeroriented Palombi in Testaccio and Marchetti in Pinciano, which is the wine experts' not so closely guarded secret.

COFFEE SPECIALISTS

Italian brand coffee has been internationally available for many years but if you are looking for something rarer or more exotic then make your way to Antico Caffè del Brasile (see p330) in Monti for four mouth-watering blends. from Brazilian gem (the 90 percent pure variety) to economy and family mixes. In the shadow of the Pantheon the historic Tazza d'Oro (see p104) also offers a fantastic selection of blends, including the Oueen of Coffees and Jamaican Blue Mountain.

Street Markets

Rome's open-air markets are essential to visit if you are interested in soaking up the bubbling exuberance and earthiness for which Romans are renowned. They are wonderfully vivid experiences too, as Italian stallholders have raised the display of even the humblest vegetable to an art form.

The city is dotted with popular, small local food markets, and there are several fascinating wellestablished markets near the center, along with the famous flea market over in Trastevere.

It is important to keep your wits about you in markets because pickpockets work with lightning speed in the bustling crowds. But this said, Roman markets provide a vibrant source of entertainment and it would be a shame to let such caveats deter you from joining in.

The street fairs that take place throughout the year are fun to go to, if they coincide with your visit, as they normally sell a good variety of local produce, handicrafts, and clothes. Seasonal fairs also occur, especially around Christmas, when you can stock up on Italian specialties.

Campo de' Fiori

Piazza Campo de' Fiori. Map 4 E4 & 11 C4. , 40, 46, 62, 64, 70, 81, 116, 492, 628. , 8 Open 7am-1:30pm Mon-Sat. See p146.

Right in the heart of the old city. Rome's most picturesque market is also its most historical. Its name. Campo de' Fiori, which translates as field of flowers, sometimes misleads people into expecting a flower market. In fact the name is said to derive from Campus Florae (Flora's square) - Flora being the lover of the great Roman general Pompey. A market has actually been held in this beautiful piazza for many centuries. Every morning, except Sunday, the piazza is transformed by an array of stalls selling fruit and vegetables, meat, poultry, and fish. One or two stalls specialize in pulses, rice, dried fruit, and nuts and there are also flower stalls situated near the fountain. But the huge open baskets of broccoli and spinach. chopped vegetables, and freshly prepared green salad mixes are the main attraction for visitors. They provide a real visual display as well as an edible feast.

The excellent delicatessen shops on the square, and bread shops nearby, complement the market. They make it a great place to stock up for an impromptu picnic if the weather turns out fine and you are tempted to do some alfresco dining in one of Rome's many parks. The market gets extremely busy on Saturdays, so be prepared to fight your way through the crowds.

Mercato delle Stampe

Open 7am-1pm Mon-Sat.

This market is a veritable haven for lovers of old prints, books (both genuine antiquarian and less-exalted secondhand), magazines, and other printed ephemera. The quality varies, but it is a good deal more specialized than the hanche or stalls near Termini station which are a more obvious tourist trap. Italian-speaking collectors can enjoy a field day leafing through back issues of specialist magazines. Other visitors might prefer the wonderful selection of illustrated art books and old prints of Rome. It is a good place to pick up that Piranesi print of your favorite Roman vista, ruin, or church – but be prepared to bargain hard.

Mercato dei Fiori

Via Trionfale. Map 3 B1. M Ottaviano S. Pietro. . 23, 51, 70, 490. Open 10:30am–1pm Tue.

Essentially a trade market, the Flower Market, just north of Via Andrea Doria, is open to the public only on Tuesdays. Housed in a covered hall, it has two floors brimming over with cut flowers upstairs and all kinds of pot plants on the lower floor. Anyone who has an interest in flowers will enjoy this wonderful array of Mediterranean blooms, which are on sale at giveaway prices.

Mercato Andrea Doria

Via Andrea Doria. Map 3 B1. M Ottaviano S. Pietro. 23, 70, 490. Open 7am−1:30 pm Mon–Sat.

The market used to stretch the whole length of this wide avenue. It has now been transferred to a modern covered state-of-theart building. Apart from the magnificent displays of fruit and vegetables, it has numerous stalls selling meat, poultry, fish, and proceries as well as an interesting clothes and shoe section. Situated northwest of the Vatican Museums. it is a little off the normal beaten track and has remained very much a Roman market that caters for the needs of the large local population.

Nuovo Mercato Esquilino

Via Principe Amedeo. Map 6 E5. Wittorio Emanuele. 105. Open 7am–2pm Mon–Sat. See p174.

Bustling Piazza Vittorio was once perhaps the most Roman of the city's larger markets.

Now renamed, it has moved to covered premises, but it is still the place where bargainhunting popolari, Rome's bustling shoppers, buy their food. Stallholders offer cheap prices if you buy by the kilo, but watch out for bad fruit.

Lately it has become more international and now features African and Asian food stalls which cater to the area's many ethnic groups. Definitely a place to go to to capture the atmosphere of a traditional but changing city.

Mercato di Testaccio

Piazza Testaccio. Map 8 D3. Piramide. 23, 75, 280. 3. Open 7:30am–1:30pm Mon–Sat.

The covered market at Testaccio occupies the central area of its eponymous piazza. The few cheap clothing and shoe stalls skirting the outside are unremarkable, but the inside is well worth a visit. Lined with butchers, grocers, and fishmongers, the whole central area is given over to fruit and vegetables - a theater-set array of seductive colors and textures. Very popular with local residents, it offers super-fresh, high-quality produce and reasonable prices. Much of this market's charm for visitors lies in its compact size and relaxed, friendly atmosphere.

Porta Portese

Via Portuense & Via Ippolito Nievo. Map 7 C3. H, 23, 44, 75. 3, 8, 000 A, 100 A, 100

The mercato delle pulci or flea market is a relatively new market in Roman terms. Established shortly after the end of World War II, it is said to have grown out of the thriving black market that operated at Tor di Nona opposite Castel Sant'Angelo during those lean years. Stallholders come from as far away as Naples and set up shop in the early hours of the morning – if you are strolling in that direction after a late night in Trastevere, it is well worth pausing just to watch them.

Anything and everything seems to be for sale, piled high on stalls in carefully arranged disorder – clothes, shoes, bags, luggage, camping equipment, linen, towels, pots, pans, kitchen utensils, plants, pets, spare parts, cassettes and CDs. old LPs and 78s.

Furniture stalls tend to be concentrated around Piazza Ippolito Nievo along with what they call "antiques," though you may have to sort through an awful lot of junk before finding a real one. And then you will have to bargain for it. The technique is to offer them half the asked price and then walk away. A lot of people go just for the fun of it and always end up buying something.

There are also secondhand clothes – leather or sheepskin coats and jackets go for 610 – with many of the Via Sannio stallholders relocating here for the Sunday trade. In recent years Porta Portese has become much frequented by customers belonging to the various immigrant groups in the capital. If you have a Sunday morning to spare, a visit to the market is now one of the most cosmopolitan experiences that the city offers.

Mercato di Via Sannio

Via Sannio. Map 9 C2. M San Giovanni. 🔜 16, 81, 87. Open 8am–1pm Mon–Fri, 8am–6pm Sat.

In the 1960s and 1970s this used to be Italy's answer to Carnaby Street. Today, at first glance, it seems not to have anything very special to offer random stalls selling inexpensive casual clothes, shoes, bags, belts, jewelry, toys, kitchen utensils, and music cassettes. But toward the end of the street there is a large covered section which extends back to the Aurelian Wall (see p196) with many stalls piled high with secondhand clothes at very low prices for those who like to rummage.

There is also a section that sells military-style goods plus some camping and fishing equipment.

Some of these stalls move their wares to Porta Portese on a Sunday morning.

Local markets

Generally open 7am-1pm Mon-Sat.

Piazza delle Coppelle (map 4 F3 & 12 D2), near the Pantheon, is probably the most picturesque of the food markets sprinkled around the city. A tiny market devoted to food and fruit and flowers, it

STREET FAIRS

A special and interesting feature of shopping in Rome is the street fair:

The Tevere Expo exhibition starts each year between mid-June and mid-July on both sides of the river bank between the Sant'Angelo and Cavour bridges. Its stalls display Italian regional arts and crafts and also sell pasta, iam, olive oil, wines, and liqueurs. Some items are cheaper than in the shops. The exhibition opens in the evening (6pm-1am). The entrance fee occasionally includes ferry transport across the Tiber.

There are two antiques fairs, both known as the Fiera dell'Antiquariato, that take place in Via dei Coronari. The first starts in the second half of May. 10am-1pm and 4-11pm daily. It makes a memorable event at night when lighted torches line the carpeted street. The second goes along Via dell'Orso as well and normally occurs in mid-October (but has also started in late September). Mon-Thu 3-11pm & Fri-Sun 10am-11pm. Stalls also sell leatherwork. jewelry and gifts.

The Via Margutta Art Fair usually takes place around Christmas and in springtime. Set in one of the most charming and exclusive streets of the city, this is an event not to be missed, although it is more for browsing as prices are very high. offers a charming splash of color in the heart of the city.

Piaza San Cosimato (map 7 C1) in Trastevere hosts another lively local market with some tempting cheeses and salami.

There is a fairly big market on Via Alessandria (map 6 D1) in Nomentana, and other smaller ones in Via della Pace (map 4 E4 & 11 C3) near Piazza Navona, and in Via Balbo (map 5 C4) and Via Milazzo (map 6 E3) near Termini station.

All markets usually have at least one stall selling household goods and basic Italian kitchen gadgets.

The utterly glamorous Spanish Steps Alta Moda Fashion Show is a fairly new event and does not have a set date. The limited seating space is filled by invitation only. However, the public can squeeze in behind to enjoy this display of all-Italian designer fashion. So far it has been held mid- to late July.

The traditional Christmas Fair held in Piazza Navona from mid-December until January 6 is now rather down-at-heel, but still fascinating for those who have not seen it before or for children. Stalls selling clay statues for nativity scenes and sweets that look like pieces of coal are the main attraction.

Natale Oggi is a wellestablished event taking place near Christmas at the Fiera di Roma in the Portuense district, and worth visiting to have a look at the Italian Christmas treats.

Via Giulia hosts art fairs now and then, and open evenings when the antique and art galleries stay open late offering food and wine to all visitors.

Every year Trastevere hosts its very own carnival, the Festa de' Noantri, in late July, when Viale Trastevere is overrun with the typical porchetta stalls (see p355), party lights, gift stalls, and people.

The details given here may change, so check the local listings, the tourist office or phone the tourist call center (see p377).

ENTERTAINMENT IN ROME

attached to Roman entertainment. Soccer and operal for example are both worth experiencing for sheer atmosphere alone, whether or not you are a fan. The jazz scene is especially good with international stars appearing alongside local talent. And concerts and films take on an added dimension when performances take place beneath the stars in the Gregory Peck and Audrey Hepburn in Roman Holiday many open-air arenas spread

PRACTICAL INFORMATION

A good source of information about what's on is Trova-Roma, the weekly Thursday supplement to La Repubblica newspaper. It has a day-byday rundown of what's on and where, and covers music. exhibitions, theater, movies, guided tours, restaurants, and children's entertainment. The weekly listings magazine Roma c'è has an English section. Daily newspapers like Il Messaggero, Il Manifesto, and La Repubblica usually list that evening's entertainment.

Saxophonist at Alpheus (see p358)

The magazine Wanted in Rome, found at Via Veneto newsagents or English bookstores, provides less detailed listings in English. Also worth getting hold of is L'Evento, a free booklet that is available from tourist information offices around the city (see p377). Published every two months, it gives details in English of classical music, festivals, theater, exhibitions, and more in the city and surroundings. Up-to-date information can also be found on various websites

Punctuality is not what Italians are renowned for so don't be surprised if events start later than advertised

RESERVING TICKETS

Reserving in advance is not part of Italian lifestyle, though this is slowly changing. Two ticket agencies that will book tickets for some performances for you (for a small fee) are Orbis and the Intenet-based Ticketeria. Many theaters themselves do not accept telephone bookings - you have to visit the box office in person. They will charge you a brevendita supplement (about 10 percent of the normal price) for any tickets sold in advance. The price of a theater ticket can be anything between €8 and €52.

Tickets for classical concerts are usually sold on the spot, and are sometimes for that night only, an arrangement that favors the last-minute decision to go. Opera is the exception. Tickets are sold months in advance, with just a few held back until two days before the performance.

here's a particular excitement across the city. Unexpectedly, given the general shutdown among shops and restaurants the summer remains Rome's liveliest time for live music and other cultural events Rome's graceful Renaissance squares, vast parks, villa gardens, Classical ruins and other open spaces host various major arts festivals. If you prefer sport, or want to try out some Roman nightclubs, there's plenty on offer too.

Stage at Caffè Latino (see pp358-9)

It is usually easier (and also a bit cheaper) to get tickets for the open-air summer performances.

The Teatro dell'Opera box office (see p357) handles sales for both summer and winter seasons, and they have a high-tech booking system. with a computer which colorcodes unsold seats

Tickets for most big rock and jazz events can be bought at Orbis and at larger record shops such as Ricordi.

> Remember that if you are trying to get hold of a ticket for a particular performance that has already sold out, you are extremely unlikely to be able to obtain one from unofficial sources - there are very few ticket scalpers in Rome, except at major soccer matches such as important finals.

Member of contemporary dance group Momix (see p357)

REDUCED-PRICE TICKETS

Theaters and concert venues tend not to offer discounts directly, although there is a centralized service (Sportello Last Minute) offering up to 50 percent off seats on the day of performance.

Movie theaters occasionally offer people aged over 60 and disabled people a 30 percent reduction on weekclays. Many movie theaters also have cheaper ticket prices for weekday afternoon screenings and for all shows on Wednesdays.

Some clubs offer reductions: look out for due per uno coupons in local bars that allow two people entrance for the price of one.

FACILITIES FOR THE DISABLED

Few Roman venues provide easy access for people with restricted mobility, and any disabled visitors and their companions are likely to find the lack of provision for them very frustrating.

The situation does improve a little in summer, however, when a great many performances in the city are held at open-air venues. The classical concerts held in the beautiful gardens of Villa Giulia (see pp262–3) have wheelchair access.

For more general information on provision for disabled people visiting Rome, see pages 376–7.

The Teatro dell'Opera (see p356)

Summer night outdoor performance among Roman ruins

OPEN-AIR ENTERTAINMENT

Open-air opera, movies, classical music, and jazz concerts fill the calendar from late June through the end of September. These performances outdoors can be wonderful, with spectacular settings and enthusiastic audiences. Some of them are grand affairs, but small events may be just as evocative - a guitar recital in the cloisters of Santa Maria della Pace

Singers performing the Barber of Seville gardens of Villa Celimontana (see p193).

Some movie theaters roll back their ceilings in summer for open-air screenings, or else move to outdoor arenas. and there are also annual open-air movie festivals. The Cineporto along the Tiber and the Festival di Massenzio offer movies, food, and small exhibitions in July and August. Theater, too, moves outside in summer. Greek and Roman plays are staged at Ostia Antica (see p270) and other shows take place at the Anfiteatro del Tasso (see p361).

Rome's most important fall performing arts festival is RomaEuropa, with occasional performances in the grounds of the Villa Medici. There are other, smaller festivals too, but times and venues change from year to year, so it is best to consult listings in newspapers, magazines, or websites (see p354) or watch for posters around the city for the most up-to-date information. More traditional is Trastevere's community festival. Festa de Noantri (see p59), with music, fireworks, and processions. This religious festival begins on the Saturday after July 16 but celebrations continue into August. The Festa dell' Unità, run by the DS (the former Communist Party). but not limited to politics, is generally held in summer. The program includes games, stalls, food, and drink.

Finally, if you like your entertainment less structured, do as the Romans do and take part in the passeggiata (early evening stroll) – the city's favorite spots are Piazza Navona (see p120) and along Via del Corso.

USEFUL WEBSITES

www.helloticket.it www.listicket.it www.romaturismo.it www.ticketeria.it

Classical Music and Dance

Classical concerts take place in a surprising number of venues: tickets for opera premières may be hard to get, but soloists, groups, or orchestras playing in gardens, churches, villas, or ancient ruins are more accessible. World-renowned soloists and orchestras make appearances throughout the year; past visitors have included Luciano Pavarotti and Placido Domingo, the Berlin Philharmonic and prima ballerina Sylvie Guillem.

Programs are generally international in scope but sometimes you will find a festival dedicated to one of Italy's own, like Palestrina, the great 16th-century master of polyphonic church music, or Arcangelo Corelli, inventor of the Baroque concerto grosso.

MUSIC IN CHURCHES

One of Rome's main attractions for classical music is the rich repertoire in the city's churches. Always sacred in theme (by decree of Pope John Paul II), music is mainly performed as concerts rather than during services.

Programs are posted around the city and outside the churches. You will often find very good musicians playing in the main churches, while the smaller, out-of-the-way churches frequently have young musicians and amateur choirs as well.

St. Peter's (see p230) hosts one major RAI (national broadcasting company) concert on December 5 attended by the Pope and free for the general public. It has two established choirs. The Coro della Cappella Giulia sing at the 10:30am mass and 5pm vespers on Sunday. The Coro della Cappella Sistina sing whenever the Pope celebrates mass here, as on June 29 (St. Peter and St. Paul's day).

Important choral masses also take place on January 25 in San Paolo fuori le Mura (see p267), when the Pope attends, on June 24 in San Giovanni in Laterano (p182), and on December 31 at the Gesù (pp114-5) where the Te Deum is sung. The church of Sant'Ignazio di Loyola (p106) is another favorite venue for choral concerts.

Plainsong and Gregorian chant can be heard in Sant' Anselmo (p204) every Sunday (Oct–Jul) at the 8:30am mass and 7:15pm vespers. Easter and the Christmas festivities are a great time for cheap and chilly concerts.

ORCHESTRAL, CHAMBER, AND CHORAL MUSIC

A significant event on the music scene was the opening of the Renzo Piano-designed Parco della Musica on the Via Flaminia in spring 2002, Up to then the Auditorium Conciliazione and the Teatro dell'Opera had been Rome's two main auditoriums, with their own resident orchestras and choirs. Both offer varied seasons that include visiting groups and soloists from all over the world. It remains to be seen how the Orchestra e Coro dell'Accademia di Santa Cecilia, formerly housed in Via della Conciliazione, fares in its new home

The season at the Teatro Olimpico usually offers good chamber music, some orchestral concerts, and ballet with at least one concert a week.

Although a variety of classical concerts take place at the Accademia Filarmonica Romana, the emphasis is on chamber and choral music, with an internationally renowned series of concerts running mid-October through mid-May. Performances take place in the Sala Casella, which seats around 180.

Ticket prices for classical concerts depend a lot on performers and venue. The Auditorium del Foro Italico sells tickets for most concerts for under €15; a ticket for the Teatro Olimpico costs between €15–€25, but seats for an important concert at Teatro dell'Opera may cost as much as 680.

The Associazione Musicale Romana, dedicated to Renaissance and Baroque music organizes three annual festivals in the Palazzo della Cancelleria (see  $t_149$ ). the Festival Internazionale di Cembalo (harpsichord festival) in March. Musica al Palazzo in May: and the Festival Internazionale di Organo in September. Classical music fans should also watch out for performances by the Orchestra di Roma e del Lazio at Teatro Argentina or Teatro Valle (see b361).

It is always worth checking which musicians are due to be playing at the Teatro Ghione, the Oratorio del Gonfalone, and especially the Aula Magna dell'Università La Sapienza, which has one of the most innovative programs of classical and contemporary music.

OPEN-AIR SUMMER CONCERTS

In the summer music lovers can enjoy concerts in cloisters, palazzo courtyards, and ancient ruins. Concerts can be one-offs or part of a festival program, regular fixtures or impromptu. Do as the Romans do, wait until the last moment and keep an eye on the posters and listings pages (see p354).

Open-air opera and dance once had their home in the Baths of Caracalla, but this venue is seldom used. Classical concerts are often part of festivals like RomaEuropa (see p355) but there are also open-air festivals and concert series dedicated to classical music. Among the more interesting is the Stagione Estiva dell'Orchestra dell'Accademia di Santa Cecilia held at the Ninfeo (nympheum) in the grounds of Villa Giulia (see p263). Also listed as the Concerti a Villa Giulia, the concerts take place in July and tickets are around €12.

The Associazione Musicale Romana organizes Serenate in Chiostro – a lively and varied program of concerts during July in the cloisters of Santa Maria della Pace (see p121) with tickets at reasonable prices. The Concerti del Tempietto are a real summer treat with concerts held almost every evening from July through September in the Area Archeologica del Teatro di Marcello (see p151) or in the park of the Villa Torlonia.

Festival Villa Pamphilj in Musica, in July, is a series of concerts in the gardens of Villa Doria Pamphilj (see p267). Programs range from comic opera to jazz and 20th-century classical music.

Brass bands can be heard in the Pincio Gardens (see p136) on Sunday mornings from the end of April until mid-July – they usually strike up at around 10:30am.

CONTEMPORARY MUSIC

The Parco della Musica and the Accademia Filarmonica Romana (usually at the Teatro Olimpico) often include contemporary pieces in their programs but these are less popular than the classical pieces and there is no set venue with a regular contemporary program.

International names appear on festival programs and at one-off concerts at the Aula Magna dell'Università La Sapienza. The most interesting contemporary music festival is organized by the Nuova Consonanza in the fall. Modern Italian composers are performed in the Rassegna Nuova Musica Italiana concert series two or three times a year. Also worth keeping an eye out for are performances by scholars of the French Academy at Villa Medici (see p135).

OPERA

Italy and opera are to many people synonymous. Critics will tell you (justifiably) that Rome's opera is not up to the standard of Milan's La Scala or Naples's San Carlo, But that doesn't mean it is not worth visiting - world-class singers do appear here (see p40), mainly in premières or solo recitals. However you judge the quality of the performances, the surroundings in which they take place are often incomparable. In summer the visual spectacle of Aida, say, performed in the open air, is simply magnificent.

The season starts late at Teatro dell'Opera, between November and January. In recent years programs have concentrated on the great popular operas, rather than staging experimental productions. Tickets range from €17 to €130.

The Teatro dell'Opera moves outdoors in July and August to stage opera and ballet in the ancient Baths of Caracalla (see p197). Popular works by Verdi and Puccini are performed, and although the acoustics are not perfect, the unique setting makes up for it.

BALLET AND DANCE

Opportunities to watch ballet or contemporary dance can be limited in Rome. The opera house's resident company Corpo di Ballo del Teatro dell'Opera di Roma performs the great classics as well as Roland Petit-style modern choreographies. Performances are staged at Teatro dell'Opera.

Contemporary dance is best seen during the Equilibrio Festival in February or at summer festivals, but foreign companies also perform at Teatro Olimpico. American modern dance groups of the Moses Pendleton school – Pilobolus, Momix, ISO, and Daniel Ezralow – are popular visitors. Teatro del Vascello is another venue noted for its experimental dance performances.

In late summer and fall, entertaining performances are organized during the RomaEuropa Festival.

For information about festivals and open-air concerts, see Trovaroma or similar listings (see pp354 & 375).

Rock, Jazz, Folk, and World Music

Rome's non-classical music scene is unpredictable and subject to vast seasonal changes, but there is a huge variety of music at the many clubs and stadiums, with visiting foreign and home-grown stars. Recent years have seen the emergence of many new Italian bands who are well worth seeing. Summer months bring excellent open-air rock, jazz, and world music festivals.

The music sections of Trova-Roma and Roma c'è (see p354) give a good idea of what's on, and ticket agencies at Orbis and Feltrinelli will have details of the latest tours. For smaller venues you might need to buy a tessera (monthly or annual membership card) costing anything from £2 to £11, which often includes the entrance fee for smaller bands.

ROCK MUSIC

Big-name Rock concerts are held in sports venues at the Palalottomatica and the legendary Stadio Olimpico. The Palladium and Testaccio's Villaggio Globale at the Ex-Mattatoio (a converted abattoir) are other largescale venues for concerts and other events, while the new Parco della Musica also hosts top acts. Entrance can cost above €25, but there are plenty of opportunities for smaller pockets. If you're in Rome for May 1, join the crowds at the massive open-air concert which is usually held at Piazza San Giovanni. Bands also play for free during the European Festival of Music celebrations on and around June 21. For all mega-concerts it is always a good idea to turn up an hour or so before the act gets under way to be sure of a good place.

Not far from the Vatican, Fonclea and The Place are also worth checking out.

One of the city's most interesting venues is Forte Prenestino, a former prison taken over by squatters a few years ago and turned into a social center with a characteristically alternative feel. It now hosts rock concerts, debates, and art exhibitions. Nearer the center of town is the enterprising Akab-Cave which usually has a season full of interesting rock and ethnic fixtures. Meanwhile, Locanda Atlantide, with its low entrance fee and central location, is a place where many up-and-coming Roman bands and soloists cut their teeth. Init is also worth checking out.

Discos often double as live music venues too, and so check to see if there are any midweek surprises at Piper or weekend concerts at the Circolo degli Artisti and the slightly more alternative Brancaleone.

JAZZ

Rome's taste for jazz has developed over the years as a result of visits from American and other foreign musicians. Miles Davis played one of his last concerts here and other jazz gurus such as Pat Metheny, Michael Brecker, Sonny Rollins, and Joe Zawinul's Syndicate are all frequent visitors.

On no account should aficionados miss a visit to the excellent Casa del Jazz. Top musicians also play at Alexanderplatz and Trastevere's Big Mama club, one of the city's legendary addresses for important names, offering punters everything from trad r'n'b to progressive jazz and rock. It is also worth checking out what's on at Greaory's, Boogie Club, and Be Bop jazz and blues club. Alpheus is unique in offering separate concert halls and interesting festivals featuring high-quality ensembles. Otherwise check local listings to see what's on at Caffè Latino or Caruso – Café de Oriente. Some of Rome's smaller venues, like Charity Caffè, also showcase formidable new talent

If you want to mix music with your meal, then try 'Gusto, a slick pizzeria / restaurant in the city center with live jazz performances on most nights. If Creole cuisine is more to your taste, then book a table in advance at Alexanderplatz.

Local names to look out for include pianist Antonello Salis, who mingles jazz and Caribbean rhythms, and respected soul-singer Fulvio Tomaino. Other leading lights on the blues scene are Roberto Gatto and Maurizio Gianmarco, frequent visitors at Big Mama.

The Roman summer abounds in jazz. The principal event is the Alexanderplatz Jazz Image festival in June and July with nightly alfresco performances at the Villa Celimontana park, just behind the Colosseum. Tickets cost around €10 and are available at the park itself. Another important fixture is the yearly Roma Jazz Festival in the fall, with big names from the Italian and international jazz scenes visiting the Parco della Musica.

FOLK MUSIC

Since the sad demise of Rome's historic Folkstudio, there is no single venue for folk aficionados in the city, though those prepared to scour the listings may uncover a country evening at Four Green Fields, an interesting acoustic set at Caffé Latino, or a soulful soloist at Lettere Caffé.

Traditional Roman folk music has been more or less reduced to touristdiluted serenades at outdoor restaurants; besides, young locals tend to favor the folk music of other regions and countries. Many bands from various parts of Italy, such as Mau Mau and Agricantus, have found success by drawing on regional rhythms and singing in dialect. The Italians' love of all things Irish also means that strains of the fiddle and drum can be heard in many of the Irish pubs dotted throughout the city. If you have to choose one, then make it the Guinnessenriched Fiddler's Elbow near Santa Maria Maggiore.

WORLD MUSIC

As capital of a Latin country which has strong links with other Mediterranean cultures, Rome is a place where world music flourishes. Whether you are looking for South American salsa, African rhythms, or Arab cadences, you are unlikely to be disappointed.

Latin American music is no passing fad, as the wellestablished festivals, danceschools and sell-out tours by the likes of Brazilian megastar Caetano Veloso testify. Many venues offer opportunities to enjoy Latin American music throughout the year. Arriba Arriba serves up a choice menu of strictly spicy Latin rhythms. Check too what's on at Caruso – Café de Oriente in Testaccio, where you can enjoy a cocktail or two along with the predominantly Cuban music.

But it is summer when Latin American music really comes into its own. The two-month Fiesta festival at the Ippodromo delle Capannelle has become by far the most popular feature of the long list of Roman Summer events, clocking up in excess of one million ticket sales.

World music is also well-served at the aptlynamed Villaggio Globale, which hosts regular events. For a rather more eclectic experience, try Lettere Caffè, Rome's first literary café, which offers a variety of world music on Fridays with performances of anything from Australian aborigine to Greek syrtaki sounds.

Movies and Theater

Moviegoing is very popular in Rome, with around 40 films on show during the week. The excellent Casa del Cinema and high profile International Festival of Cinema reflect the city's enduring love of the big screen.

The great majority of Roman movie theaters are prima visione (first run) and show the latest international movies in dubbed version. The smaller art theaters are more likely to show subtitled versions of foreign movies.

Theater productions are performed in Italian whether the plays are national classics or by foreign playwrights. The main theaters offer a selection by great Italian playwrights. There are also performances of traditional cabaret, avant-garde theater and dance theater. Theater tickets cost between 68 and 650 and can be bought in advance by visiting the theater box office, or through the last-minute booking service (see p355).

PRIMA VISIONE

There are over 80 prima visione movie theaters in the city. The best for decor and comfort are the Fiamma (two screens) and Barberini (three screens).

Foreign movies are usually dubbed. Movies in the original language are shown at the Metropolitan and the Nuovo Olimpia (daily) and on Mondays at the Alcazar.

Tickets for new movies cost around 67, but a few theaters listed as prima visione charge less, namely Farnese and Reale. Seniors and the disabled are normally entitled to a 30 percent reduction on weekdays. Tickets are reduced in many theaters on weekday afternoons and on Wednesdays. Check the newspaper or listings such as Trova-Roma or Roma c<sup>2</sup> for details (see p354).

ART THEATERS

True movie buffs flock to Rome in October for the International Festival of Cinema (www.romacinemafest.it) with events centering on the Parco della Musica.

There are two main types of art theaters in Rome: the cineclubs and the cinema d'essai. Both are good if you're interested in catching older classics and new foreign movies as well as movies by contemporary Italian directors.

The d'essai cinemas now and then show movies in the original language (indicated by v.o. for versione originale in the listings). Try the Azzurro Scipioni (one of the few to be open throughout summer), Filmstudio, or Nanni Moretti's Nuovo Sacher. Some of the smaller theaters are called cine-clubs and require membership.

The Palazzo delle Esposizioni shows interesting series of international movies though you should head for the Casa del Cinema for the real art-house experience.

ENGLISH-LANGUAGE MOVIES

In addition to occasional undubbed showings of American, British, and Australasian movies in art theaters and at the Nuovo Olimpia and Warner Village Moderno, the excellent Casa del Cinema has a policy of screening all movies in their original language.

SUMMER MOVIES

Some Roman movie theaters have roll-back ceilings used in summer, while others close down. The Nuovo Sacher has an outdoor arena. Rome also has various summer film festivals: Cineporto and Massenzio to name but two. These show several movies each night from 9pm until the small hours, with food and drinks on sale and often live music during the intervals. Cineporto takes place in the Parco della Farnesina nightly between July and September, but Massenzio moves around (see listings).

Sci-fi enthusiasts should keep an eye out for the Fantafestival (early June), a science fiction, fantasy, and horror movie festival. The Venezia a Roma event in September gives movie buffs the chance to see movies presented at the summer Venice Film Festival

The listings pages (see p354) have details on retrospectives and avant-garde movie seasons at the Azzurro Scipioni and the open-air arts festivals like RomaEuropa (see p355) and Festa dell'Unità (see p355).

MAINSTREAM THEATER

The backbone of Rome's theatrical repertoire are Luigi Pirandello's dramas and comedies by 18th-century Venetian Carlo Goldoni and 20th-century Neapolitan Eduardo de Filippo. Major foreign playwrights are also performed from time to time.

The best classic productions are staged at the Teatro Argentina, Teatro Ouirino, Teatro Valle, Teatro Eliseo, and Teatro Piccolo Eliseo. Teatro Argentina is state-owned and home of Rome's permanent theater company. Its sister theater, Teatro India, stages more innovative works. The Ouirino and Valle host productions from other Italian cities. The latter shows both great Italian classics by famous companies to lesser known modernist works, and occasionally hosts prestigious foreign companies. Plays at the Ouirino often feature famous Italian actors. The Eliseo and Piccolo Eliseo are among the city's best private theaters.

At Teatro Sistina and Teatro Brancaccio you can see hit musicals by visiting foreign companies and shows by popular Italian actors, while Teatro Vittoria goes in for plays by Noël Coward or Neil Simon.

CONTEMPORARY THEATER

The home of contemporary theater is the ever-dynamic Vascello, the Orologio and, beyond these well-known names, in a host of small theaters, ingeniously rigged up in cellars, garages, small apartments or even tents.

The Colosseo hosts some alternative fringe-type productions (known here as teatro off) while the Palladium and the Vascello tend to stage works by contemporary authors and occasional avant-garde productions. Some of them, like Teatro India and Orologio, also put on foreign-language productions.

FOLK, CABARET, AND PUPPET THEATER

Roman and Neapolitan folk songs and cabaret can be enjoyed in Trastevere's touristtrade restaurants, like Meo Patacca, while Tina Pika Village offers more alternative cabaret.

Puppet theater is another Roman tradition. Shows take place early in the evening on weekends, and sometimes during the week, at Teatro Verde and Teatro Mongiovino. In the Villa Borghese, the Teatro San Carlino also presents plays with the younger audience in mind. Among the most popular are the adventures of Pulcinella (the Italian Punch).

OPEN-AIR THEATER

The open-air summer theater season usually features Greek and Roman plays at Ostia Antica (see pp270–71).

The Anfiteatro Quercia del Tasso in the Janiculum park takes its name from the oak tree under which 16thcentury poet Tasso used to sit. Comedy shows are staged here in July to September, when the weather permits. In winter the company performs at the Teatro Anfitrione.

Nightlife

Rome's nightlife has never been as diverse or vibrant as it is today. Recent years have witnessed a sharp rise in the number of bar and club openings that cater for an ever more demanding clientele. Where once the choice was limited to the Irish theme bars near Termini, the few well-established but crowded bars in the center, and the hugely popular clubs in Testaccio, the capital now offers a wide range of options designed to satisfy all tastes and budgets. Depending on your mood, head first for a stylish pre-clubbing bar and then on to one of the center's exclusive clubs, or simply relax with friends and a bottle of good wine in an earthy wine bar in one of the historic center's breathtaking squares. For a memorable first stop, enjoy spectacular views with an apéritif from a rooftop terrace bar.

On the downside, despite the greater number of bars and clubs, prices have soared in Rome since the euro was introduced – today you can be charged up to  $\notin 10$  for a cocktail! For cheaper alternative nights out, away from the tourist traps, visit a bar in San Lorenzo.

WHAT'S ON

As in any major city, Rome's nightlife is constantly evolving. Roman clubgoers are an extremely varied group and most clubs arrange different nights to appeal to the diverse range of tastes – so it is essential to keep up-to-date on what's happening by checking listings magazines (see p354) that hit the newsstands every Thursday.

Flyers for many nightclubs are handed out in some of the busier squares in and around the center, such as Campo de' Fiori and Piazza del Fico. They are also distributed inside the many pre-clubbing bars dotted around Testaccio such as II Seme e La Foglia.

PRACTICALITIES

Preferred clubbing nights are Friday and Saturday, when the cars and scooters of revelers block the streets of the city center. Lines at the most popular venues can be very long at peak entrance time (around midnight), so it is advisable to get there an hour or so earlier. However, if you are unable do so, and don't feel like waiting, try calling in advance and charming your way onto the guestlist. Instead of an entrance fee, some smaller clubs require a tessera, a monthly or yearly membership card, which you can buy and fill out on the spot. If you're paying just to get through the door that night, hold on to your entrance ticket as it usually entitles you to a free first drink (la consumazione); your second could be expensive and cost as much as €15.

As a general rule, remember that all-male groups are rarely welcome, and in some exclusive clubs neither are unaccompanied men. Also, to enter any of the more select venues you'll need both an introduction from one of the regulars and clothes that aim to impress.

BARS

Despite increased competition, especially from the revitalized rustic wine bar Il Nolano, La Vineria (see p328) in Campo de' Fiori has maintained its cult status among Romans of all ages and backgrounds for unpretentious, lively drinking at reasonable prices. Just around the corner, L'Angolo Divino (see p328) is less wellknown, and consequently not as bustling. It nonetheless remains a perfect spot for socializing over great wines and heartwarming food.

Another landmark in the centro storico (historic center) though for a more well-to-do and fashionconscious crowd, is the in-vogue Antico Caffè della Pace, a popular choice near Piazza Navona for those who want to see and be seen Fluid on Via del Governo Vecchio, is much livelier and has made its mark in the capital as the perfect venue to get you in the mood for late-night clubbing. A few doors down but really a world away, the comfortable and candlelit Mimi e Cocò is a great place to relax (alfresco or inside) and linger over subtle wines, served with a smile. Just off the top end of the same street, moving away from Corso Vittorio Emanuele II is Giulio Passami l'Olio a warm, welcoming, and animated enoteca, tucked away from the usual passaggiate (promenade) routes. Closer to Piazza di Spagna, the striking interior and extensive choice of wines by the glass make the Antica Enoteca di Via della Croce a favorite spot for wine connoisseurs. Although it's definitely not cheap, the impressive bar buffet is well

In Trastevere, too, the romantic streets are full of tinv bars aimed at diverse crowds. Find a table if you can outside Ombre Rosse in the wonderful Piazza Sant'Egidio and watch the world go by. If Ombre Rosse is too crowded. Caffè della Scala, just a few minutes' walk away, is a good alternative. Other bars in the area include the sophisticated Beige and Friends Art Café, which is a perfect spot to enjov a refreshing, though expensive apéritif with complimentary but elaborate snacks - a growing trend in the Eternal City. The simple, but vintage, Bar San Callisto, located just off Piazza Santa Maria, draws strictly nonconventional patrons. Elsewhere in the city,

the sophisticated Ferrazza

(see p351), in San Lorenzo. serves up exceptional wines for more sophisticated customers while the monumental student bar Rive Gauche does great business as the biggest pub in the area. The slick surf-bar Duke's in Parioli is slightly away from the center but is worth it for star-spotting. Duke's has tried to curb its soaring popularity by closing on Saturday nights but to no avail. It remains the number one place to be seen in north Rome

Finally, and not just for hopeless romantics, breathtaking views of Rome can be had at the lavish rooftop terrace bars at Hotel Eden (see p308), near Via Veneto, and the Radisson Hotel (see p305) near Termini. At dusk, particularly after a sunny day, these stunning venues offer a great place to start an unforgettable evening out.

CLUBS

To brush shoulders with TV starlets and parliamentary under-secretaries, head for Gilda. Its glitzy dance-floor and restaurant have made it a favorite with the Roman jet set and hangers-on. The famous Sixties nightclub, Jackie O, revamped in lavish style with a lush interior, a piano bar, and an expensive eatery, draws an international thirty-something crowd.

Boeme is a safe option for commercial music among Roman twenty-somethings, though Heaven is slightly funkier with its marked preference for house. More challenging is the eclectic Micca Club with the chance to hear live sets while the more traditional disco is at its best at Piper, which changes look each season and organizes imaginative floor shows and other events. There are a few disco-pubs in the city center which offer a compromise between a straightforward bar and an all-out club. The Nag's Head is one that is especially worth noting.

In and around Testaccio. the undisputed clubbing heart of Rome, you'll find it difficult to decide which club to visit Akab-Cave is cool and unashamedly commercial: the stylish Caruso – Café de Oriente concentrates on Latin R&B and salsa sounds while the multifunctional Distillerie Clandestine and Joia clubs are the places for eating, drinking, relaxing, and dancing. Still on the crest of the 70s revival wave is the trendy La Saponeria. while the Neo is a stronghold of underground music. Saturday night at Big Bang signifies all things dark and new wave, while at the equally alternative Alpheus you can drift between three rooms offering three completely different DI sets Last but by no means least, the legendary Goa remains the champion of Roman clubs, attracting the best of Italian as well as international DIs

The wine bar at 'Gusto offers live music and the chance to explore the venue's various restaurant areas while enjoying a glass of wine from the vast selection available. On the other side of Corso Vittorio Emanuele, the select La Maison attracts a slightly older crowd with its less commercial music and elegant ambience. However, if you're in the mood for a mainstream alternative that is free of charge and easier to gain entry to, then head to the upbeat Habana Café for a continuous program of live music and DJ sets every evening.

For something a little different, the Radio Café is a multifunctional venue with a lounge, café, disco, and meeting spaces frequented by a trendy media set.

GAY SCENE

Rome is no longer the provincial backwater it once was. This is clearly reflected both in the rise in the number of gay bars and clubs and their increasing popularity. While some are exclusively gay, others attract a mixed clientele.

Across the river from the centro storico in Trastevere is the exclusive II Giardino dei Ciliegi, a living-roomstyle bar that specializes in cocktails. It also stocks a wide variety of teas and serves exciting salads and an excellent Sunday brunch - even on public holidays. For livelier social drinking, head for Anfiteatro My Bar and Coming Out. between San Giovanni and the Colosseum, to mingle with a mixed crowd that usually spills out onto the street. Nearby, the men-only bar Hangar continues to pack them in

When it comes to clubbing, the ever-growing number of gav one-nighters in both alternative and mainstream clubs in many ways present the best venues for drinking and dancing until the early hours. Goa, iust off Via Óstiense. occasionally hosts gay nights such as the womenonly Venus Rising once a month. Mucca Assassina (quite literally "homicidal cow") pulls in the crowds every Friday at the monumental Oube in Tiburtino: the rival Omogenic crew take over the Circolo degli Artisti on the same evening. while the Alpheus hosts the Gorgeous one-nighters every Saturday. These clubs are in addition to the justly famous gavfriendly disco Alibi in Testaccio with its explosive mix of house music and retro classics.

Pride Week, a yearly event held at the end of June/early July, is a time when gay Romans hit the streets for seven days of nonstop partying. The program and date change from year to year, so it is wise to consult listing magazines for full details.

In summer, as with most clubs, Rome's gay venues move outdoors in an attempt to beat the stifling heat. In recent years, many of these have been hosted at Gay Village, a summer-long outdoor beanfeast. This is yet another important indication that gay culture is finally beginning to be accepted on the mainstream entertainment scene.

CENTRI SOCIALI

Centri sociali, or illegally occupied buildings that have been converted into centers for the arts and entertainment, give an alternative edge to Rome's vivacious nightlife and cultural scene. While some centers are run on a professional basis and are able to successfully compete with many of the capital's swankier and established venues, others have continued to maintain their staunch antiestablishment stance.

Top billing must go to Brancaleone in north Rome, which regularly features progressive Italian and international DJs for the very best in electronic and house tunes. This well-run establishment is also home to an organic café and shop, superb art exhibitions, and a movie club.

Near the Baths of Caracalla, the Angelo Mai Center regularly organizes a multitude of cultural events, including exhibitions and showings of art house movies – sometimes even in their original nondubbed version. On weekends, the venue dedicates its space primarily to club nights, covering a spectrum of tastes from underground and ethnic live bands to wild DJ sets. They also boast their own eatery.

Farther away from the center the abandoned fort Forte Prenestino, is a magical maze of spooky rooms and endless corridors and represents the most bizarre of Rome's social center venues Famous for its antiestablishment Labour Dav concert - the official and free rock concert is held in Piazza San Giovanni in Laterano – it also holds theater productions, film festivals and club nights throughout the year for a young but alternative crowd. Closer to the center. Villaggio Globale. situated on a vast area of

JAZZ, SALSA, AND AFRICAN SOUNDS

Rome offers countless venues for jazz, from trad and swing to modern fusion (see p358). Several jazz and Latin American clubs combine live music with dancing, eating, and drinking. For South American style music, Fonclea and Arriba Arriba (see p359) or Alpheus all pay homage to Latin American and world music, although Caffè Latino in Testaccio is by far and away the best place to check out on the weekend.

CLUBBING IN SUMMER

At the height of the sweltering summer, when virtually everything closes down in the capital, Art Cafè in Villa Borghese stands out as the supreme club venue for the fun-loving, young, and hip. A number of floating venues open up on the Tiber too, while some of the bigger clubs hit the coast from July through to December most notably in Ostia and in Fregene, where the legendary Gilda On The Beach is a permanent fixture. # Sports

Do not be surprised if the peace of a Sunday afternoon in Rome is interrupted by the honking of car horns and people shouting. It simply means that one of the home soccer teams has won at the stadium and the whole city will vibrate with the excitement.

Soccer is Italy's national sport but other sports also attract a large following and Roman sports fans are never at a loss for varied events and activities.

You will find times and venues for most spectator sports listed in Trova-Roma or Roma c'è (see p354), as well as the local sections of La Gazzetta dello Sport or Corriere dello Sport.

SOCCER

An Italian soccer match is an experience not to be missed for the quality of the play and the fun atmosphere, though hooliganism has begun to raise its ugly head.

Rome has two teams, Roma and Lazio, and they take it in turns to play at the Stadio Olimpico on a Sunday afternoon at 3pm, in the Campionato Italiano (Italian championship league).

Seats can be scarce, so get tickets in advance from the stadium ( $\in$ 15 to ( $\approx$ 0) from noon onward on the day itself, or through club websites (www.sslazio.it and www.asroma.it). The cheapest seats are in the Le Curve stand; the middle-range and most expensive are in Le Gradinate and La Tribuna respectively.

On Wednesday evenings there may be international competitions – the UEFA cup or the Coppa dei Campioni (European Championship Cup). In between these, teams battle it out for the national Coppa Italia.

TENNIS

A major event, the International Championships go on at Foro Italico for two weeks in May. The world's top tennis stars thrash it out on clay courts at 1pm and 8:30pm from Tuesday to Friday, and at 1pm only on weekends. Buy tickets in advance either directly from the Foro Italico or from a ticket agency.

If you wish to play yourself, there are now more than 350 tennis clubs in Rome. It is often essential to book at least a week in advance and there is usually a moderate court fee.

Clubs where membership is not required include Tennis Club Nomentano and the Circolo Tennis della Stampa in northern Rome and the Oasi di Pace, just off the Via Appia Antica. The big hotels offer tennis for a reasonable price. The Crowne Plaza requires a small annual membership fee on top of the court price, which includes the gym and the pool (in the summer).

HORSE RACING, TROTTING, AND LEISURE RIDING

Important races include the Derby in May and the Premio Roma in November. There are trotting races at the lppodromo di Tor di Valle and both flat races and steeplechases at the lppodromo delle Capannelle.

The International Horse Show is held in May in Piazza di Siena, Villa Borghese (see p258). It is organized by the Federazione Italiana Sport Equestri (FISE) and is one of the most important social and sporting events in the calendar. The setting makes it a great attraction.

Through the FISE, it may be possible to find a riding club that will take you on a hack in the countryside around Rome, but most do not accept shortterm members.

GOLF

Even the most elite golf clubs will accept a touring golfer with a home membership and handicap. Most clubs are shut on Mondays and on weekends when they host competitions, and when guests cannot play. Prices range from €55 to €100.

The Olgiata Golf Club is open to everybody from Tuesday to Sunday, though it is best to phone first if you want to play on the weekend. Country Club Castel Gandolfo is the newest club and Circolo del Golf di Roma Acquasanta the oldest and most prestigious. Within the city beltway is the course at the Sheraton Golf Hotel (closed Tuesdays).

One of the many important competitions on the various golf courses around Rome is the Circolo Golf Roma Coppa d'Oro (Gold Cup) in April.

CAR AND MOTORBIKE RACING

Formula 1 and Formula 3 races take place on Sundays at Vallelunga; be prepared for some expensive entrance fees. Frequently on Saturdays official trials are open to spectators, and on some nonracing Sundays Italy's car designers show new models.

RUGBY

Rugby has taken off in Italy recently, particularly since Italy joined the Six Nations tournament. This means that in winter (usually Feb–Mar) there are a couple of international matches in Rome. The home team is drawn against two other member "nations" each year: France, England, Scotland, Ireland, or Wales.

ROWING

In mid-June a British Oxbridge crew challenges the historic Aniene crew to a race taking place alternately on the Thames and the Tiber. The best place to view this from is between the Margherita and the Sant'Angelo bridges. The race usually starts at around 6pm. Another event is the battle between the Roma and Lazio crews, from Ponte Duca d'Aosta to Ponte Risorgimento, on the same variable date as the Roma-Lazio soccer match.

SWIMMING

Swimming pools are few and definitely not geared to the short-term visitor. It is often necessary to pay an expensive membership plus a monthly tariff. Most pools also require you to produce a medical certificate assuring your good health, and have lane-only swimming, so check to see if free swimming (nuoto libero) is possible. The state-owned pools can be slightly cheaper, but you still have to pay an initial membership fee.

The Shangri-La Hotel opens its pool to nonresidents in the summer months, as does the Cavalieri Rome Hotel, for a higher entrance fee. The best deal is on a Sunday when the sports club and swimming pool La Margherita opens to nonmembers 10am–1pm, for a reasonable entrance charge. Piscina delle Rose in EUR is an Olympic-sized pool open from June to September 9am–5:30pm during the week, 9am–7pm on weekends.

HEALTH CLUBS

Like the swimming pools, Roman health clubs usually require both a membership fee and monthly payments. For a short stay in Rome, it is more sensible to try the facilities in your hotel, or, if you are willing to pay, head for one of the private clubs. Use of club facilities may be negotiable.

The Roman Sport Center welcomes daily members for a reasonable price (€30) and you can use the pools, the gym, and the sauna. The facilities are open 7am–10:30pm on weekdays and until 8:30pm on Saturdays and 9am–3pm Sundays. Shorts must be made of Lycra.

JOGGING AND CYCLING

Rome's perfect climate and stunning scenery attract thousands of well-dressed joggers and cyclists into the city's many parks. Early on weekday mornings or at any time on a Sunday you'll find the more popular locations looking more like a high-speed fashion show than sweat tracks. Each March, however, more serious runners take part in the Rome Marathon.

Villa Doria Pamphilj (see p267) is an extensive park situated above the Janiculum, where you can choose from various tracks, plenty of open spaces, and a network of paths. Villa Borghese (see p258) is another vast popular place with a running track.

Alternatively, jog under the acacia trees and palms at Villa Torlonia, on the spotlit track at Villa Glori, or combine sport with culture by running the Via Appia Antica (see p265) branching off into Parco Caffarella. Other favorite places are Viale delle Terme di Caracalla, Circo Massimo, Parco degli Aquedotti, and Parco di Colle Oppio.

CHILDREN'S ROME

talians love having children around, and you can be sure yours will be made welcome wherever they go. But there are few special facilities for children, and the heat, crowds, and lack of clean public bathrooms mean that Rome is not an ideal city for a vacation with babies and children under seven. It does, however, have plenty to offer slightly older children, Renaissance cherub to offer slightly older children, especially those who are keen

PRACTICAL ADVICE

If you are planning to bring your children to Rome, try to come in early spring or late fall, when the weather is good, but not too hot. Easter is best avoided, as the city is more crowded than usual, and you're constantly jostled on packed buses and streets.

Where you stay is crucial. A hotel near the Villa Borghese park will give your children plenty of chance to relax and let off steam, though you may end up spending a lot of time and money to get to and from the town center. A hotel in the old center is ideal, as you can easily pop back during the day for a rest and a clean bathroom. As hygienic toilets and changing facilities are rare within the city, it is really not advisable to bring a baby to Rome unless you are visiting friends or family. As with many historic cities, Rome may not instantly appeal to all children, but there is plenty to inspire their imaginations. Use this book to make the buildings and history come alive. Children might also enjoy learning a few Italian words and phrases so they can order food and buy things by themselves. If lingering over drinks on the café terraces is what vou eniov best. bring your offspring something to keep them busy once they have finished with their treat: cravons and paper, a computer game or a Walkman. Alternatively, most other adults are very tolerant of children running around and making a noise while they relax and, if yours are reasonably outgoing, they could join in with the local children playing ball games in early evenings on piazzas like Campo de' Fiori.

If you feel the need for a total break, most hotels will be able to provide a babysitter or help you to contact a qualified babysitting agency.

In the event of bad luck, see pages 378–9 for information on what to do and a list of emergency numbers.

on history or art. The temptation may be to wear yourself and your children out by packing too many sights into one day. Plan in advance and leave plenty of time to wander around the city: looking at the quirkier fountains and monuments, watching knifegrinders at work in the markets, and spending hours agonizing over the choice of ice-cream flavors and special pizza toppings.

GETTING AROUND

Bumpy cobbles, narrow streets without sidewalks, and overcrowded buses make pushing children around in strollers tiring work. Mothers with young children are, however, usually allowed ahead in lines. Outside rush hours, the Metro is often less busy. Kids under 1 m (3 ft 3 in) tall travel free on public transportation.

Although the city is not good for cyclists, families with older children could rent bikes to ride along the Tiber on the cycle tracks to the north of the city, or to take on a regional train into the country. The bikes, tandems, and rickshaws for rent in Villa Borghese are good fun, and the bike rental hut in the Pincio gardens has free baby seats.

Anyone over the age of 14 is permitted to ride a scooter under 50 cc, although Rome is not the best place for novices (see p394).

EATING OUT

Children are normally warmly welcomed in neighborhood pizzerias and trattorias, and highchairs are often available for toddlers and babies. If there is no highchair, be prepared for the waiters to improvise for you with armloads of cushions or telephone directories. Most places are perfectly happy to serve half portions, or to let children share meals.

In trattorias it can sometimes be difficult to be exactly sure what a certain dish contains (especially when there is no menu and the dishes of the day are reeled off, usually at top speed, by the waiter), so faddy eaters are likely to be happier in pizzerias (see pp328–33). Here they can choose their own topping (remember that prosciutto, which is usually translated in menus as ham, is cured). The most entertaining pizzerias for kids are the old-fashioned ones where they can watch the chefs pound, stretch, and flip the pizza dough. Restaurants open in the evening at or soon after 7pm and the best places get busy from around 8:30pm, so it is wise to go early to avoid waiting in line.

PICNICS

Picnics in the parks are ideal, and shopping for the food is often half the fun. There is no problem finding small cartons of fruit juice and branded canned drinks, but these are expensive unless you go to a supermarket – the branch of Oviesse on Viale Trastevere is the most convenient.

Investigating some of the hundreds of Italian ice-cream flavors

Water from the drinking fountains is potable, so it is worth carrying plastic cups around with you.

As well as picnic food from bakeries and markets, there are lots of scrumptious takeout foods. Many of them are appealingly messy, so it is wise to take paper napkins. Try deep-fried fruit and vegetables from Cose Fritte on Via di Ripetta and suppli al telefono, rice croquettes with a gooey string of mozzarella inside, from pizza al taglio or pizza rustica outlets. A tramezzino comes quite close to an American sandwich but if your kids are miserable without peanut butter, you can find it (and other foreign foods) at Castroni on Via Cola di Rienzo.

ICE CREAM

Rome, of course, is famous for ice cream; you and your children are likely to be tempted at every turn. Real ice-cream fans may even want to plan their day's sightseeing round one of the best gelaterie (see pp330-33). It is far cheaper to buy either a cone or tub of ice cream to eat in the street, but in some of the more traditional places it is worth paying to sit down. At Fassi, they have an oldfashioned ice cream-making machine on display and at Giolitti, you can enjoy gargantuan sundaes in the elegant parlor (see p109).

GENERAL TIPS

Rome does not have many museums with the sort of hands-on exhibits that many other cities lay on for children However, Bernini's marble elephant (see p108) and the fat facchino, or porter (p107). appeal to kids. The Capuchin cemetery at Santa Maria della Concezione (p254), the catacombs (pp264-6), and the Mamertine Prison (p91) will grab the more ghoulish imaginations, and children will enjoy putting their hands into the Bocca della Verità (b202).

Look for details like the dirty toenails on figures in Caravaggio's paintings, the Etruscan votives, which were offered to the gods, at the Villa Giulia (pp262-3), and the illusory collapsing ceiling in the Chiesa Nuova as well as the fake dome of Sant' Ignazio di Loyola (see p106).

Museums your children will enjoy include Museo Explora, full of interesting hands-on exhibits for children, and the Museo delle Mura, which explores a short length of the Aurelian Wall (p196). Among the churches, St. Peter's (see p230) and San Clemente (see pp186-7) are the most fun.

At the Vatican children will like the animal statues and mosaics in the Animal Gallery and also the Sistine Ceiling (p246), especially once they know that Michelangelo had to paint it hunched up on a scaffolding platform. Remember that Vatican dress etiquette (see p231) applies to kids too.

ANCIENT RUINS

The ancient ruins best appreciated by children are the Colosseum (see pp92–5), and Trajan's Markets (see pp88–9). You can still make out what both these buildings looked like from their remains. The scant ruins of the Forum and Palatine, on the other hand, may not appeal so strongly. Ostia Antica, where the remains include a theater, shop, and 20-seater public toilet, is much more likely to interest them (see pp270–71).

Mosaic from the Vatican

MOSAICS

There are scores of vivid, sometimes quirky, mosaics in buildings all over Rome. Many of these are particularly appealing to children. Details in the mosaics range from brilliantly colored flowers, leaves, animals, and buildings (in the churches of San Clemente, Santa Prassede, and Santa Maria in Trastevere, see p186, p171, and pp212– 13) to the debris of a banquet (in the Vatican's Museo Gregorio Profano, see pp234–5).

ENTERTAINMENT

To find out what's on for children in Rome, scour the movie pages of newspapers and the listings in Trova-Roma, Roma c'e, Wanted in Rome, and on entertainment websites (see pp354–5). For older children, Time Elevator presents 3,000 years of Rome's history in an educational yet entertaining way. Most theaters and movie theaters have reduced entry fees for children, but shows are often only in Italian.

There are cartoons shown at Villa Borghese's Cinema dei Piccoli and traditional puppet shows every afternoon, except Wednesday, on Janiculum hill.

An appealing time for children to be in Rome is over Christmas, when Piazza Navona hosts a Christmas

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES

Italians adore dressing their children up, and on Sunday afternoons in particular, you are likely to encounter young children dressed as if they had walked straight out of a costume drama: girls in frills and flounces and boys in velvet breeches or knee-length shorts.

Many shops sell beautifully handcrafted children's shoes and clothes – the downside is that they can often be expensive and impractical: dry-clean-only clothes are common and shoes are not made for mud.

PARKS

Villa Borghese (see p258) has rowboats to rent; pony-cart rides: bikes to rent: a mini movie theater: a small funfair: and a zoo. Villa Celimontana (see p193) has bike trails, and open-air theater performances in the summer. Technotown, a multimedia playhouse in the grounds of Villa Torlonia, is fun. At EUR (see p266) is the Piscina delle Rose, a swimming pool open in the summer (see p367). The Bomarzo Monster Park. 60 miles (95 km) north of Rome, was built in the 16th century for a mad duke.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION

Romans often seem unconcerned by the priceless art treasures and ancient ruins that lie casually among the buildings and workings of their hectic 21stcentury city. However, it's not always easy for visitors to make the most of these wonders; relaxed local attitudes make for dozens of variations in opening hours, and many places – including stores, banks, and offices – closed for 2 or 3 hours over lunch, reopening in the late afternoon. On a more positive note, most of the main sights are within easy walking distance of one another. Start your day early and wear comfortable shoes. Rome can be a delightfully informal city to visit, but remember to observe dress rules and cover up in churches, since this is one area where regulations are strictly enforced.

WHEN TO GO

Rome enjoys a Mediterranean climate, with hot, dry summers and mild-to-cold, rainy winters. From late March to June and from September to October, the pleasant, sunny weather allows for plenty of time outdoors. Visitors can expect to pay more to stay during the high season, between March and November. In hot August, most Romans are on vacation and the smaller stores and restaurants are closed, but all tourist sights stay open, the city is quieter, and you can find good hotel deals.

VISAS AND PASSPORTS

Italy is part of the Schengen agreement, which means travelers moving from one Shengen country to another are not subject to border controls, although there are occasional spot checks.

All visitors to Italy must register with the police within eight working days of arrival. If you are staying in a hotel, this will be done for you. Otherwise, contact the local questura (police station). European Union nationals and citizens of the US, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand do not need visas for stays of up to three months.

Anyone wishing to stay for more than three months (eight working days for citizens from countries other than those mentioned above) will have to obtain a permesso di soggiorno (permit to stav). European Union citizens can apply for a permit at any main police station. Non-EU citizens must apply in advance in their home country for a permit to stay; it is very difficult for non-EU citizens to obtain a work permit. If you lose your passport, contact your embassy (see p377).

Tourist information sign

CUSTOMS INFORMATION

Duty-free allowances are as follows: non-EU citizens can bring into Italy: 200 cigarettes or 50 cigars or 100 cigarillos or 250 grams of tobacco. 1 liter of spirits or 2 liters of wine and 50 grams of perfume. EU residents do not need to declare goods, but random checks are often made to guard against any drugs traffickers. To find out what you can take back from Italy to a non-EU country. contact that country's customs department. The refund system for Value Added Tax (IVA in Italy) for non-EU residents is very complex (see p335).

TOURIST INFORMATION

Information kiosks run by the Comune di Roma have English-speaking staff who provide free maps, leaflets, and advice. Alterna> tively call their Rome City Council Tourist Information Call Center for information in English. The Center's useful website has detailed information on all the sights as well as on current exhibitions, events, and hotels in the city. The Italian Government Tourist Board (ENIT) and the American Express office can also be helpful to visitors. A privately run company called Enjoy Rome has an informative website and offices situated close to the Termini train station. A word of warning: admission prices and opening times change often and sights can be closed for what seems to be unbelievably long periods for restoration (chiuso per restauro) or because of a strike (sciopero).

OPENING HOURS AND ADMISSION PRICES

Museums are generally open all day, although most close on Mondays and on some public holidays. Open-air sights such as the Forum are open daily year-round, closing 1 hour before sunset.

The three-day Roma Pass costs 625 and allows free transportation within Rome, free entrance to two museums or archaeological sites, and discounts for various exhibitions, events, and services. National and city museums offer entrance free of charge to EU passport-holders who are under 18 and over 65, and discounted entry for those aged between 18 and 25 with a valid student ID card.

Entrance to churches is free and many contain extraordinary works of art: keep in mind that you may be charged a small fee to see a certain area, such as a chapel, cloister, or underground ruins.

Some of Rome's sights, such as Nero's Aqueduct and the Vatican gardens, are accessible only on personal application or by written appointment (see below). The Area by Area section of this guide gives opening times for each sight and tells you whether there is an admission charge.

The weekly supplement Trova-Roma (see p383) has a small English section with details of current exhibitions.

SIGHTSEEING PERMITS

To visit certain sights in Rome, you need to obtain a written permit and book your visit in advance, particularly for archaeological sites, which may sometimes be closed during excavations. Call the Rome City Tourist Office number on page 377, giving your name, the number of people in your party (individual visits are generally not possible), and when you would like to visit. You may be asked to send written confirmation by email or fax.

SOCIAL CUSTOMS AND ETIQUETTE

Romans are generally courteous and friendly to foreign visitors. Italians are delighted at any effort to speak their language, so it is worth learning a few phrases (see p447). Italians tend to drink only with meals and are unlikely to be seen drunk – obvious drunkenness is frowned upon. Smoking is banned on public transportation and in restaurants, bars, and cafés.

VISITING CHURCHES

Many of Italy's churches are very dark, but they usually have electric, coin-operated light meters to illuminate chapels and works of art. Recorded information in several languages is also often available. Dress codes (see below) are firmly upheld in churches and should be respected; St. Peter's (see pp230–33) is especially strict – you cannot wear shorts.

CATHOLIC SERVICES

For many Catholics, a visit to Rome means an audience with the pope. General audiences are usually held every Wednesday at 10:30am either in St. Peter's Square, indoors at the Sala Paolo VI or at Castel Gandolfo. To attend an audience, call the Prefettura della Casa Pontificia (see p231) or go in person to the office through the bronze doors on the right of the colonnade in St. Peter's Square (9am–1pm). Travel agencies can also arrange an audience as part of a coach tour.

Unacceptable dress in church: both sexes should cover torsos, upper arms, and legs

Pope Benedict XVI during an audience in St. Peter's Square

Mass is held daily in the main churches of Rome (High Mass is on Sunday). Confession is heard in St. Peter's (see pp230-33), San Giovanni in Laterano (pp182-3), San Paolo fuori le Mura (p267), Santa Maria Maggiore (pp172-3), the Gesù (pp114-15), Santa Sabina (p204), and Sant'Ignazio (p106). English-speaking Catholic churches include San Clemente (see p187) and Santa Susanna (see p255).

For details of non-Catholic services see p377.

TIPPING

Service is sometimes included in the check at restaurants, bars, and cafés. Italians usually tip a few euros if the service was good. It is not necessary to tip taxi drivers, though you should round up to the next euro. Keep small change handy for sacristans, cleaners, doormen, and porters.

ACCESSIBILITY TO PUBLIC CONVENIENCES

Public restrooms are few and far between. There are clean ones by the Colosseum (with facilities for the disabled) and at St. Peter's. Most cafés will let you use theirs if you ask.

Disabled access sign at the Vatican

TRAVELERS WITH SPECIAL NEEDS

Rome is not particularly well organized to cater for disabled visitors. The Disabled Customer Assistance center at Termini station offers help and advice on train travel. Disabled travelers needing assistance getting on and off the train need to reserve a special elevator service 12 hours in advance, clearly stating the names of all the stations at which they require help. A limited number of buses and streetcars have wheelchair access and only a few metro stations have elevators. Ramps. elevators, and modified WCs are available in an increasing number of places, including Termini station, although you may find an elevator is broken down indefinitely, or a ramp is blocked by an illegally parked car. Some restaurants have wheelchair access to the dining area, but not to the WC.

If you are traveling without an escort to Rome, consider a specially designed package tour, or contact an organization for disabled travelers before you set off.

The Vatican Museums, Sistine Chapel, and St. Peter's are all accessible by wheelchair.

SENIOR TRAVELERS

EU citizens over 65 have free entry to many museums, and discounts for anziani (elderly citizens) are available at most other sights and on some Trenitalia (see p387) tickets.

STUDENT INFORMATION

If you are an EU passport holder, it is worth having an International Student Identity Card (ISIC) or a Youth International Educational Exchange Card (YIEE) because you will receive reduced admission prices to national museums. Non-EU members with an ISIC or a YIEE card can also benefit from discounts at some private museums.

Contact the Centro Turistico Studentesco for general student information. The Associazione Italiana Alberghi per la Gioventù (the Italian YHA) operates four hostels across the city.

International Student Identity Card

GAY & LESBIAN TRAVELERS

The main venue for Rome's gay community is the gayfriendly bar Coming Out (see p363), near the Colosseum. The Gay Pride parade takes place in June. The two-monthlong Gay Village event (one of Europe's largest gay festivals) begins in July. In Rome, displays of public affection between same sex individuals are not common, and some violence against homosexuals has been reported in the past.

ROME TIME

Rome is 1 hour ahead of Greenwich Mean Time (GMT) Examples of the time difference with Rome for other major cities are as follows: London: -1 hour: New York: -6 hours: Dallas: -7 hours: Los Angeles: -9 hours: Perth: +7 hours: Sydney: +9 hours: Auckland: +11 hours: Tokyo: +8 hours. These figures can vary slightly for brief periods during local changes in summer. For all official purposes. Italians use the 24-hour clock

RESPONSIBLE TOURISM

Rome is aware of the need to become more "green" and environmental initiatives are taking place across the city. Italian cookery has traditionally placed an emphasis on local seasonal food, but Italians are now also starting to understand the importance of reducing additives and carbon emissions. Choosing to eat local is a good way for visitors to support the area's economy, as well as helping the environment.

Organic stores and restaurants are springing up across Rome. A good place to buy regional food is Spazio Bio, inside the Città dell Altra Economia, a large expo space dedicated to the the promotion of an organic and sustainable lifestyle, fair trade, ethical tourism, and recycling (which still needs to improve in Rome). Those dreaming of greener nights can reserve a room in one of the miniboutique hotels and B&Bs offering an eco-friendly stay. Two such establishments are EcoHotel and Bed & Breakfast Bio, both of which guarantee energy- and water-saving rooms, serve organic breakfasts and offer free bicycles for rides in the surrounding parks and natural reserves.

Personal Security and Health

On the whole, Rome is a safe, unthreatening place for visitors, but petty street crime is a problem. Do not carry more money than needed for the day and leave other valuables or documents in a hotel safe. Cameras are less likely to be snatched if they are in a plastic grocery bag rather than an obvious case. Take particular care in crowded places, such as stations, or on full buses, and steer clear of bands of innocent-looking children – they may be skilful professional pickpockets.

Carabinieri in dress uniform

POLICE

There are several different police forces in Rome. The polizia (state police) wear blue uniforms with white belts and berets. They deal with all kinds of criminal offenses and are the ones who issue permessi di soggiorno (residence permits) to foreigners and passports to Italian citizens (see p374).

The vigili urbani (municipal police) wear blue uniforms in winter and white in summer, and can issue heavy fines for traffic and parking offenses. They can usually be seen patrolling the streets, enforcing laws, or regulating traffic.

The carabinieri (military police) wear red striped pants. They deal with everything from fine-art thefts to speeding offenses.

The guardia di finanza are the tax police and wear gray uniforms. They deal with tax evasion and with customs; you will see them at the airport, behind the "goods to declare" counter.

To report stolen or lost items, go to the nearest police station (questura) or carabinieri office. If you believe your car may have been towed away, you should find a member of the vigili urbani on the streets or have the Comune put you through to them by calling 06-0606.

WHAT TO BE AWARE OF

Be wary of bag-snatchers on mopeds who operate in quiet streets. Carry your bag at your side away from the road, or carry a discreet money belt or a securely fastened, longstrapped shoulder bag across vour body. Equipment like video cameras should be disguised. Pickpockets (sometimes children) adopt highly sophisticated distraction techniques with pieces of card or newspaper while they sever you from your possessions in seconds. Take extra care of valuables in market places or on public transportation. Bus routes 40 and 64, which run between Termini station and > the Vatican, are notorious for pickpockets.

Thefts from cars are also rife. Jackets or bags should never be left visible inside a car parked on Rome's streets, and do not carry luggage on a roof rack. The streets to the east and south of Termini station are well-known for prostitution and drug-peddling, and are unsavory at night.

Women traveling alone (or even in small groups) may need to take extra care. Women without male escorts attract more attention than they do in much of the rest of Europe and North America.

Beware of unauthorized minicab drivers who are probably not insured and frequently overcharge. They operate in particular at the airport and Termini station, waiting to profit from new arrivals. Hotel touts and unofficial tour guides are also best avoided; instead stick to the official tourist agencies (see p295 and p377).

IN AN EMERGENCY

For emergency phone numbers see the Directory. For other medical attention, contact the First Aid (Pronto Soccorso) department of a main hospital such as Policlinico Umberto I or Ospedale di Santo Spirito, or check the Yellow Pages (Pagine Gialle) for a doctor (medico) or dentist (dentista). For children, the Ospedale Pediatrico Bambino Gesù is renowned. Emergency care in public hospitals is free, even for foreigners.

LOST PROPERTY

For items lost on a bus or on the Metro, contact the numbers in the Directory. Otherwise, ask at a police station. To make an insurance claim, report your loss to a police station and get a signed form. For lost passports, contact your embassy or consulate (see p377); for lost credit cards or traveler's checks, contact the issuing company's office (see p380).

HOSPITALS AND PHARMACIES

English-speaking doctors can be found at Rome American Hospital or by looking in the English Yellow Pages, which is available at some hotel receptions and international bookstores. For access to pediatricians, visit the Ospedale Pediatrico Bambino Gesù. The Ospedale Odontoiatrico G. Eastman can help with serious dental problems.

Pharmacists display lateopening rosters (several stay open all night), and can usually supply the local equivalent of foreign medicines. The Vatican Pharmacy stocks some American and British pharmaceutical products. For minor problems, pharmacists can give advice and recommend over-thecounter medications.

MINOR HAZARDS

No inoculations are needed for Rome but take mosquito repellent and sun screen in the summer Be sure to wash your hands frequently if vou use public transit. especially in winter when colds and flu are passed around easily The Tiber is polluted but water from faucets and potable street fountains is piped straight from the hills, and is fresh and palatable.

TRAVEL AND HEALTH INSURANCE

EU residents are officially entitled to reciprocal medical care, but the bureaucracy involved can be daunting. Before you travel, make sure you obtain the European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) from the UK Department of Health (www.dh.gov.uk) or a post office. The card comes with a booklet of advice and information on the procedure for claiming free medical treatment. All visitors should take out insurance to cover everything. When booking air travel, ask if there are any waivers included in your particular ticket for medical problems, death in the family or other emergencies.

Take out adequate property insurance before you travel (it is difficult to arrange once you are in Italy), and look after your belongings while you are in Rome. Be particularly careful when using public transportation and when visiting crowded tourist sights, where pickpocketing is common. If possible, leave valuables at your hotel instead of carrying them around with you. Some hotels provide personal safes in the bedrooms. You can set these with your own memorable number. (Do not use your date of birth; it is on your passport and registration slip.) To be prepared for all eventualities, it is advisable to keep a separate photocopy of vital documents, such as your passport and air tickets, to minimize the problem of replacing them if they are lost or stolen. It is also useful to take a spare passport-sized photograph or two.

Banking and Local Currency

ATMs are easily found across Rome. Many businesses will accept credit cards, but some smaller familyrun establishments still only accept cash. Exchanging money and traveler's checks can involve a lot of paperwork. Banks and post office

Eagle sculpture on the Ministry of Finance ministry of Finance paperwork. Banks and post office exchange rates are generally more favorable than those offered in travel agencies. Carry some small change, since coins are needed for tips and to illuminate works of art and chapels in churches (see p375).

A branch of Banca d'Italia, one of the major Italian banks

BANKS AND CURRENCY EXCHANGES

It is best to have a few euros when you arrive, so you won't have to change money immediately. However, ATMs are found everywhere, including the airports.

For the best exchange rates, change money at a bank (look for the sign Cambio). Exchange offices and hotels tend to give poor rates, even if they charge modest commissions. At the Vatican Museums (see p235), you won't be charged any commission. The American Express office (see p377) offers good rates and is open on Saturday mornings.

Lines in banks can be long and the form-filling involved in changing money can take up a lot of valuable vacation time. Take some form of identification with you, such as a passport. You may be asked to leave handbags, shopping bags, and metal objects in the small lockers outside the bank.

Post offices also give good exchange rates, but lines can be long here as well. Currency can only be changed at the main post offices, such as the one near Piramide Metro station.

Banks are usually open 8:30am–1:20pm and 3–4:30pm Mon–Fri, but opening times vary. They are always closed on public holidays.

Currency exchanges have more generous opening times, similar to store hours. The two exchange offices at Termini station (see p386) are also open on Sundays.

ATMS

ATM machines (Bancomat) can be found throughout the city and accept a wide range of credit and debit cards. The daily limit for withdrawals is usually €250. A fee is charged for each withdrawal. ATM crime (mainly related to card cloning rather than to theft) has been reported in the past. Always use caution at an ATM machine: cover the hand that is typing the PIN with the other hand, and avoid withdrawing cash from any machine you are unsure about.

CREDIT CARDS AND TRAVELER'S CHECKS

Credit cards, which used to be regarded with great suspicion in Italy, are now much more widely accepted in hotels restaurants and stores. All major credit and debit cards (American Express MasterCard Visa Diners Club) are well known. Banks and cash dispensers are more likely to accept Visa cards for cash advances but MasterCard is accepted by many retail outlets in Italy. Take both if you have them. Paying for anything in foreign currency will almost always be expensive.

Some restaurants and stores set a minimum expenditure level, below which they will not accept credit card payment. Ask first or check you have some cash just in case.

Traveler's checks are not as popular as they used to be and tourists are finding it increasingly hard to cash or spend them. If you decide to use them, choose a wellknown name such as American Express. Record the traveler's check numbers and refund addresses separately from the checks themselves in case they are stolen.

Communications and Media

With the most recent advances in technology, it is easier and cheaper than ever to stay in touch with family and friends while abroad. Even if you don't have a cell phone with Internet capabilities, you'll find that Wi-Fi and Internet cafés are everywhere in Rome and phone cards offering very reasonable call rates abound. You can stay abreast of the news at home through BBC World (most likely available in your hotel) or the English-language publications available at many newsstands in the center of Rome

They come in either €5 or €10 cards, which give 120 (or more) minutes of calling time. When using, dial the main number on the card, key in the pin code, and then dial the number required.

Anv Italian landline telephone number dialed needs to have the full relevant local code (including the zero) dialed in front of it, even if you are calling within the same city. Cell phone number prefixes begin with a 3 and do not require a 0.

Keep in mind that telephone calls from hotel rooms are usually very expensive, sometimes marked up by as much as several hundred percent.

CELL PHONES

If you are staving in Rome for a considerable period of time. it is probably worth buying an Italian SIM card, with its own unique telephone number to use with your own cell phone. You must show an official ID (such as a passport) when buying a SIM card. There are four main cell phone providers: Vodafone. TIM Tre and Wind The SIM cards cost around €15 and usually come with €5 of free credit. They can be purchased, and topped up. from various cell phone outlets throughout the city.

Once you have the SIM. you can also top up your credit with a scratch-off card (ricarica) bought at tobacconist's stores or some newsstands. Some tobacconist's stores have a computerized system where they insert your cell phone number and put the credit on your phone for you, which is easier and quicker than following the instructions on the scratch-off card

Internet café sign

INTERNET ACCESS

Many hotels now offer Internet connection or Wi-Fi access so you can access the Internet and email with your own laptop (often for an extra fee). There are also a number of Internet cafés (Italians call them Internet point) throughout Rome where you can go online and use email: some even offer headphones and webcams so customers can use Skype or other chat programs.

There are plenty of Internet cafés found all around the city center Many Internet points have Wi-Fi so you can access the Internet through your laptop with a password provided by the assistant. An antiterrorism law requires Internet café staff to take your information from an official ID (such as a passport), so staff may want to take a photocopy before allowing customers to use the Internet on their computers. This does not apply to customers using their own laptops.

POSTAL SERVICES

Post offices are multifunctional in Italy, used not only for postal services, but also for paying bills, managing certain bank accounts, and more, Lines can be long and disorganized. so if you are just sending a regular letter or postcard, save vourself the exasperation and buy a stamp at a tobacconist's store. Then drop your letter in the mailboxes on walls around the city: most are red. with a slot for mail within Rome (Roma e provincia di Roma) and one for mail outside Rome (ber tutte le altre destinazioni). There are also some blue mailboxes exclusively for foreign destinations (marked estero).

The mail itself is quite reliable and efficient, though it tends to be slower around

Christmas time. For urgent items, use the post office's express or registered service.

The Italian post office offers a poste restante service, where letters and parcels addressed to you can be picked up directly at the post office. Mail should be sent care of (c/o) Fermo Posta and the name of the relevant post office. Print the surname clearly in block capitals and underline it to make sure it is filed correctly. To collect your mail, you have to show your passport and pay a small fee.

Regular post office hours are generally from around 8:30am to 2pm (8:30am to noon on Saturdays and on holiday eves), but main offices stay open until well into the evening for some services (such as registered mail).

NEWSPAPERS, TV, RADIO

Rome's main newspapers are La Repubblica and Il Messaggero. British and American newspapers are readily available, with the International Herald Tribune and the Guardian on sale on the day of issue. The Trova-Roma supplement, in the Thursday edition of La Repubblica, and the weekly magazine Roma c'è are the main guides to what's on. The magazines Wanted in Rome. The Roman Forum (www. theromanforum.com), and Where Rome (www.where rome.it) also have English listings. Some of these publications also have websites full of information.

The state TV channels are RAI Uno, Due, and Tre, matched by four private channels. Analog TV has been replaced by digital across the region, so all TVs must now and mainly caters to low-cost airlines travel overland. The trains are often crowded during the summer.

ARRIVING BY AIR

If you are flying from the United States. Delta. United. US Airways, and Alitalia operate regular direct scheduled flights to Rome. with services from New York Flying time is about 81/2 hours. Air Canada and Oantas operate from Canada and Australia respectively. There are also direct flights from Boston, Atlanta, Miami, Philadelphia, and Toronto. However, it may be considerably cheaper for intercontinental travelers to take a budget flight to London Paris Athens Frankfurt or Amsterdam and continue the journey to Rome from there. British Airways and Alitalia both operate direct scheduled flights from London Heathrow to Rome (Fiumicino), and you can also fly from Gatwick. Swiss and KLM also fly to Rome from London and other British cities. A change in Zurich or Amsterdam is usually involved.

Excursion fares generally offer the best value in scheduled flights, but you must purchase them well in

In addition to BA and Alitalia, you can book lowcost tickets direct from the UK on easvJet and Ryanair, which have daily flights from London and other locations to Rome. Hotels and car rental can also be booked via these airlines' websites, and both offer their own privately chartered bus to transport incoming passengers from Ciampino airport to Termini.

Alitalia flight tickets

Regular charter flights for Rome's Ciampino airport run all year round. Most leave from Stansted, Gatwick, and Luton, but there are also a few flights that leave from Manchester, Glasgow, and Birmingham.

The price of fares varies, peaking in summer and in Holy Week for the Pope's Easter blessing. In Rome, the American Express travel office (see p377) will also book flights.

FIUMICINO AIRPORT

Rome has two international airports. Leonardo da Vinci known as Fiumicino - is the largest one and handles most scheduled flights, as well as several easyJet routes. It is located about 18 miles (30 km) southwest of the city and has four terminals: 1 for domestic flights, 2 for EU flights, 3 for international flights, and 5 for flights to the US or Israel. The vast shopping area inside the airport offers a variety of stores, selling the most important Italian brands

From Fiumicino there are two types of train to Rome:

Check-in area at Fiumicino, Rome's main international airport one (€5.50) runs every 15–30 minutes (5:57am-11:27pm) to Fara Sabina station, stopping at Trastevere Ostiense Tuscolana and Tiburtina but not Termini. The other train known as the "Leonardo Express " is faster and more expensive (€11), running nonstop to Termini every halfhour (6:36am-11:36pm). If the ticket office is not open try the automatic ticket machine (vou can choose to see the instructions in English) Remember to specify which train you want when buying your ticket

Ostiense station is linked with Piramide Metro (Line B) where you can catch an underground train to the city center from 5:30am until 11:30pm daily (to 1:30am Fri and Sat). It can be hard to find a taxi at Ostiense after 9pm, but there are buses (Nos. 95 and 30) to Piazza Venezia. At night there is a coach service from Fiumicino to Tiburtina station. Car rental is available from offices at the airport (see p395).

Train linking Fiumicino airport to Stazione Termini

CIAMPINO AIRPORT

The other airport that serves Rome is Giovanni Battista Pastine Airport, known as Ciampino. It is located approximately 12½ miles (20 km) southeast of the city and used by the majority of charter flights and low-cost airlines. Ciampino airport is always busy and sometimes chaotic, so it is advisable to arrive there well in advance of your departure time.

Major car rental firms have a rental office at the airport (see β395), though you may find it less harrowing to travel into the city center on public transportation or by taxi.

The swiftest way to get to the center of Rome is by the private Terravision, Atral/ Schiaffini. or SITBusShuttle coach services. Coaches go direct to Termini station and tickets cost between £4 and €6 one way. You can buy them on board the bus. A cheaper option is by COTRAL bus to Anagnina Metro station, then by underground train to Termini. Tickets (€1. plus €1 for each large bag) can be bought on the bus. A local bus service also links the airport to Ciampino mainline station.

AIRPORT TAXIS

Always use the official white taxis with a "taxi" sign on the roof. They usually line up in the yellow TAXI lanes in front of the airports and stations. The Rome Comune recently established a flat fee for taxi rides from and to the airports: €40 to/from Fiumicino from/ to anywhere in the center (inside the Aurelian walls) and €30 to/from Ciampino from/to the center. The fare covers a maximum of four people with baggage included. If a taxi refuses to apply the flat fee, you should report the driver by calling 06-6710 70721 and stating the cab number, which is found on both the inside and the outside of the car.

Arriving in Rome by Train, Coach, or Car

Any overland journey to Rome is fastest by train, though there are coach connections to most major European cities. Within Italy, journeys between large cities are usually also best done by train, but when traveling from towns that are not on the main Intercity rail routes, coaches can be quicker. For drivers, the Italian Automobile Club (see p387) provides free assistance and excellent maps to members of affiliated automobile clubs from all over the world.

The concourse at Stazione Termini

STAZIONE TERMINI

Stazione Termini, Rome's main train station, is also the hub of the urban transportation system. Beneath it is the only interchange between the city's two Metro lines, and outside, on Piazza dei Cinquecento, is the central bus terminus. Though it is one of Rome's most stunning 20th-century buildings, it also has some unsavory aspects, so don't linger longer than necessary at night.

If you do arrive here late, there are usually taxis available (go to the official taxi stand) even in the small hours, and many of the city's night buses start at Termini. In summer the station gets crowded. and you can expect long lines. . Termini has a left luggage office. a police station, a currency exchange, and tourist and travel information offices. Other facilities include many tobacconists and newsstands (where you can buy bus and Metro tickets).

as well as various bars and restaurants on the mezzanine floor, with more eateries and stores, including a bookstore, on the lower Termini Forum level. A post office is adjacent to platform 24, as are desks for car-rental firms. There is only one waiting room, located next to platform 1.

Of Rome's other stations, four are most likely to be of interest to tourists. They are Ostiense and Trastevere, for trains to Fiumicino airport and Viterbo (see p271); Tiburtina, for some of the late-night

trains on the north-south line

through Italy; and Roma Nord, for trains to Prima Porta.

A Eurostar train

TRAVELING BY TRAIN

Trenitalia, the Italian State Railroad, has several levels of service, including the Regionale trains. These stop at almost every station, often have no air-conditioning and are much cheaper than the other trains. Regionale trains have a coach-like seating arrangement, and sometimes first-class seats are "declassed" so second-class ticket holders can sit there. The Eurostar, a newer, cleaner, faster train, offers a first- and second-class service. It runs between Rome and Milan, Turin, Genoa, Bari, Naples, and Venice, with an extra fast (alta velocità) service called TBIZ operating on the Naples-Rome-Milan line, You have to reserve a seat and you are charged hefty sks supplements for the privileges of speed and hostess service. Intercity trains, which are for fast long-distance journeys, also charge a supplement. First- and second-class tickets are available from Rome to Venice, Milan, Florence, Naples, and other cities. From Rome you can also take international or Eurocity (EC) trains to destinations all over Europe.

Reservations are compulsory on all trains

except the Regionale ones. Tickets for immediate travel can be bought at the station, but you should allow plenty of time to wait in line.

The Trenitalia website (see below) is useful for planning trips, checking scheduled train times, and buying tickets. If you book in advance or are a family with a child, you may be able to get a cheaper rate. However, it is easiest to go to a travel agency when trying to book a discounted ticket because Trenitalia's offers and fares change all the time.

TRAVELING BY COACH

Long-distance coaches terminate at Tiburtina, which is the city's main coach station Information and tickets for Eurolines coaches to European cities are available from Lazzi Express. The Appian Line offers regular services within Italy. Its itineraries include Florence, Naples, Capri, Sorrento, and Pompei, and, in summer, Venice and Assisi. Local buses, serving villages and towns within the Lazio region, are run by COTRAL. All bus stations used by COTRAL in Rome are linked to Metro stations. Tickets are purchased on the spot and cannot be reserved in advance. Some day trips from Rome by bus are described on pages 268-71.

TRAVELING BY CAR

To drive your own car in Italy vou need vour driver's license. an international Green Card (for insurance purposes), and the vehicle registration document. A translation of your driver's license, available at Italian tourist offices abroad. is useful. Wearing seatbelts is compulsory in Italy. You must also carry a warning triangle and a reflective orange or vellow vest to wear if you leave your car in case of breakdown. Main routes to Rome connect with the Grande Raccordo Anulare (GRA). Rome's beltway. Tolls are charged on all Italian freeways. You get a ticket by pressing the red button at the toll booth as you enter the freeway and pay when you leave by presenting the ticket to the person in the booth. Prices vary on the different roads. Official speed limits are 30–50 km/h (18–30 mph) in town, 80–110 km/h (50–70 mph) on two-lane roads outside town, and 130 km/h (90 mph) on freeways.

last bus leaves from the end of the line at midnight. There are also a few night buses.

Apart from some small electric minibuses (like the 116 and 119), no buses can run through the narrow streets of the historic center. But there are plenty of bus routes to take you within a short walk of the main sights (see inside back cover).

SPECIAL BLIS SERVICES

There are two tourist bus services: the 110 and the Archeobus service The 110 a red. open-topped doubledecker, is a hop-on hop-off service, which passes many of the city's tourist attractions. It leaves from Piazza dei Cinquecento every 20 minutes between 8:30am and 8:30pm. Linking the center with the catacombs and the monuments on the Via Appia Antica, the Archeobus leaves Piazza Venezia everv half-hour between 8:30am and 4pm.

USING BUSES AND STREETCARS

The main terminus is on Piazza dei Cinquecento outside Termini station, but there are other major route hubs throughout the city, most usefully those at Piazza del Risorgimento, Piazza San Silvestro, and Piazza Venezia. Information on public transportation can be obtained from ATAC kiosks, the customer service office, or the ATAC website You should board the bus at the front or the back: the central door is reserved for people getting off. You must stamp your ticket in the yellow machine once you get on the bus. Timed tickets, biglietto integrato a tempo (BIT), can be used on all means of transportation.

TICKETS

Tickets for buses, streetcars, and Metros should be bought in advance and stamped in the appropriate machine as soon as you start your journey. You can buy tickets at bars, some newsstands and tobacconists, as well as in Metro stations and at bus terminals. There are automatic ticket machines at main bus stops and Metro stations that accept coins. Some buses have a machine on board for buying tickets, but there is no way of knowing which buses have one, so purchase a ticket before you board. BIT tickets are valid for 75 minutes, during which time you can take one Metro ride and as many buses and streetcars as you like. If you plan to make four or more journeys in a day, buy a daily (BIG) ticket. There are also three-day, seven-day, and monthly passes. To go farther afield in Lazio, consider a regional BIRG ticket. Fare-dodging incurs a hefty on-the-spot fine.

METROPOLITANA

Rome's underground system, the Metropolitana, has two lines (A and B) which cross the city in a rough X-shape, converging at Termini station (see inside back cover). Line A (red) leads from Battistini in the west to Anagnina in the southeast of the city, from where buses go to Ciampino airport. Line B (blue) runs from Rebibbia in the northeast, down to EUR in the southwest, where buses leave for the coast. Stations are clearly marked by the Metro logo, a white M on a red background. Among the most useful stations are Colosseo, Spagna, San Giovanni, Ottaviano S. Pietro and Piramide (for trains to Fiumicino). Both lines run from 5:30am until 11:30pm every day (to 1:30am Friday and Saturday). For more details, visit www.atacoroma.it. A third Metro line, C, is scheduled to open in 2015. A fourth line is also planned.

USEFUL BUS ROUTES

This map shows some of the buses that go through interesting parts of Rome with good views of major sights. The 40 Express is always full of tourists, since it goes from Termini to St. Peter's and the Vatican. The other routes are likely to be less crowded.

WALKING

Wandering through Rome's old center is one of the most enjoyable aspects of the city You can take in the architectural details absorb the streetlife make diversions at will, and peek into any church, store, or bar that catches vour interest. You can easily visit several of the main tourist sights in a few hours.

Explore the city area by area, using public transportation when distances are too far. Although some parts of the historic center are now pedestrianized, a street which is closed to cars may still be used by bicyclists and, illegally, by scooter riders. There have been many plans to create more traffic-free zones but imposing such measures on a population as insubordinate as Rome's is not easily done

During the height of summer. vou'll have a more enjoyable time if you follow the example of the Italians. Walk slowly on the shady side of the street: have a long lunch followed by a siesta during the hottest part of the day. Continue exploring in the late afternoon when churches and stores reopen and the streets are at their liveliest. Wandering at night is delightful, since the streets are cool and many facades floodlit.

Nuns walking in Rome's city center

CROSSING ROADS

First impressions suggest there can be only two sorts of pedestrian in Rome: the quick and the dead. Even if you cross roads at traffic lights and pedestrian crossings strictly in your favor, there is sure to be some van or Vespa hurtling toward you with apparently homicidal intent. Fortunately, Roman drivers have quick reactions and accidents are relatively rare. The best tactic is to be as alert and confident as Romans. The roads are very busy. When crossing, you should try to leave as large a gap as possible between vourself and oncoming traffic. Step purposefully into the road. making eve contact with approaching motorists, and don't hesitate or change vour course. Once a driver sees that you are determined to cross, he will stop, or at least swerve. Pedestrians must take particular care at night, when the traffic lights are switched to a constantly flashing amber, turning the crossings into free-for-alls

Passengers sightseeing on an open-top tour bus

STREET SIGNS

Theoretically, although it may not always seem to be the case, pedestrians have right of way at crossings when the green avanti sign is lit up. The red sign alt means you must wait. Underground crossings are indicated by a sign reading sottopassaggio.

It is easy to get lost in the maze of streets and piazzas of the historic center. Until you know your way around you can follow the yellow signs marking routes between the sights

Avanti: go! Pedestrians have right of way

Alt: stop! Traffic has right of way and piazzas of particular interest to tourists. Routes leading to other landmarks are indicated by signs on a brown or gray background.

GUIDED TOURS

Several companies offer guided tours in English these include American Express (see p373). Green Line Tours. Context, and Carrani Tours. Full-day city tours including lunch cost around €75: half-day tours around €35. Alternatively the No. 110 Bus passes many of the main sights on a 2-hour circuit Tickets cost around €20 and the bus leaves from Termini every 20 minutes between 8:30am and 8:30pm; the website has further details as well as information on the Archeobus tours of the ancient monuments. Tour guides can often be hired at major sights, such as the Roman Forum (see pp 78–87). Employ only official guides and establish the fee in advance; they usually charge around €50 for a half-day tour.

DRIVING

Driving in Rome can be an extremely intimidating experience for visitors. The flambovant aggression of Italian drivers is notorious. pedestrians step out into the roads without warning, and the one-way system operating in much of the center makes retaining a sense of direction impossible. You'll also find motorists overtaking on the wrong side, while scooters and Vespas zoom among the lanes of traffic and go the wrong way down one-way streets. One rule to remember is to vield to the right. Additionally, nonresident drivers cannot enter the city center's ZTL (Limited Traffic Zone) during the day and on some weekend nights. There are cameras at the entrance of the ZTL, and cars without a permit will receive a fine each time they pass in front of the camera. The cameras are very visible, and there is always an electronic sign saying whether access is open to everyone (varco aperto) or restricted (varco chiuso). You can call

One-way street

Dead-end road

06-570036 or check www. atacmobile.it for ZTL times. Unless you are accustomed to driving in Italian cities and fully aware of the ZTL regulations and zones, leave your car at home – or, failing that, in a guarded parking lot.

Thefts from cars are rife in Rome, so never leave anything of value in your vehicle, even out of sight: areas such as Campo de' Fiori are patrolled by gangs on the lookout for anyone leaving cameras and other costly items in the car. You should

ILLEGAL PARKING

Rome's traffic police are vigilant. If you've parked illegally, your car may be clamped or (if it's causing an obstruction) towed away, so phone 06-67 691 or 06-0606 before reporting it stolen. No-parking zones should be clearly marked, but check in case the sign is hidden by a tree.

A tow truck at work

also remove the car radio and GPS device if you can – you won't be the only person carrying these with you.

Take extra care if driving late at night. Not only do traffic lights switch to flashing amber, but some drivers are astonishingly cavalier about driving under the influence of drink or drugs. In case of a breakdown, call the ACI (see pp394 & 395).

PARKING

The most convenient parking lot is below the Villa Borghese. Much of the city center is reserved for residents with permits but there are around 2,000 metered parking spaces marked with a blue line (from 8am-8pm or 8am-11pm. depending on the area). If vou do find a legal place to park, however, you may return and find that you have been hemmed in by doubleparked cars. Locations of some of the most useful parking lots are listed on page 395.

Beware of illegal parking attendants, found especially at night in busy areas where parking is free, who direct you to a space (sometimes even an unauthorized one) in exchange for some change. This practice is against the law, but Italians often pay, for fear the attendant will damage their car if they don't.

GASOLINE

Gas is very expensive. It can be bought from roadside pumps (many of which are self-service, which is cheaper, operated by banknotes or debit/credit cards), as well as from regular garages. Check whether your car uses lead-free gas (benzina

senza piombo

The state petrol company logo

or benzina verde) or not. Late-night gas stations are listed on page 395. At night, most self-service stations are attended by illegal gas station attendants, who will put the fuel in for you in exchange for a tip.

CAR RENTAL

Major international firms (Avis Hertz Europear) and Italy by Car Thrifty have rental offices at the airports. Termini station, and in the city. However, you may get a better deal by reserving a car before you arrive through a travel agent or online. or by using a local firm (such as Maggiore). Check that breakdown service and collision damage waiver are included. Prospective drivers usually need to be at least 25 years old and have held a driver's license for at least a year. You will also need to leave a deposit – a credit card number is usually enough. Some firms also ask for an international license (available from your national automobile association)

Accident rates on Italian roads are high, so make sure you are fully insured against all eventualities. It is a good idea to join an internationally affiliated automobile association (such as the AA in Britain or the AAA in the US) so that if you do break down, the ACI (Italian Automobile Club) will tow your car without charging.

Details of road and traffic conditions (in Italian) are available from a special Road Conditions number. For more information on driving and parking in the city, as well as understanding road signs and buying fuel, see page 393.

MOPED AND BICYCLE RENTAL

Rome's narrow streets and heavy traffic, combined with the seven steep hills on which it was built, make it a challenging place for even the most serious of bicyclists. However, there are a few areas, such as the Villa Borghese, the banks of the Tiber, and some pockets in the historic center (around the Pantheon and Piazza Navona), where bike lanes make for a relaxing way to see the city.

Mopeds (motorini) and scooters – like the classic Piaggio Vespa, meaning "wasp" – are good for getting through the traffic. You may want to stick to quiet streets to begin with, though.

Bikes and scooters can be rented from Collalti, Scoot-a-Long, and Scooters for Rent. There are also several Bike Rental spots dotted around the city. Motorcyclists, scooter drivers, and their passengers must wear helmets by law; these can be rented from most rental stores. You may be asked to leave a credit card number or cash as a deposit when you pick up the vehicle (see p367).

The Roma Bikesharing scheme is good for short rides in the city center. You must first enrol and pay a £10 deposit for an electronic "smartcard," which can be topped up. You then have access to bikes at various stands across the city.

TAXIS

Official taxis in Rome are white, say "Comune di Roma" on the side, and bear a "taxi" sign on the roof. Do not use the taxis offered by touts at stations and tourist spots. official taxi drivers do not tout for customers. Official taxis can be hailed at specially marked taxi stands or on the street (drivers are not meant to stop in the street but many of them do). You can nearly always find them at the main tourist sights, at airports, and at stations (including Termini and Ostiense). Roman taxi drivers are not renowned for their friendliness and may even refuse to take you if you're going too far from the lucrative city center or, conversely, if the ride is too short.

Taxis are not particularly cheap, so, unless you have heavy luggage or screaming toddlers, public transit is usually a better option. Taxi drivers charge supplements for baggage, night journeys (10pm–7am), and journeys on Sundays or public holidays.

Customers should ensure the meter is turned on and visible. The meter continues running while you are at a standstill, so traffic jams can become expensive. Drivers may take suspiciously circuitous routes. Italians don't tip taxi drivers: they simply round up to the nearest euro. You can phone for a taxi (but you will pay from the time the driver gets the call from the switchboard) from: Mondo Taxi, Cooperativa Autoradiotaxi Romana 35-70.

or La Capitale Radio Taxi. Taxi rides to and from the city's airports incur a flat fee for up to four passengers and their luggage (see p385).

RIVER TOUR

The service offered by Battelli di Roma runs from an embarkation point near the Ponte Sant'Angelo and Tiber Island. Boats depart every half-hour, starting at 10am, and all-day tickets cost €15 (see website for details). There are also dinner cruises on weekends
