SAN FRANCISCO'S TOP 10

TOP 10 San Francisco's Highlights

San Franciscans will, rather candidly, admit that they are the most fortunate people on earth, the occasional earthquake notwithstanding; and most visitors, after a few days of taking in the sights and sounds of this magnificent city, will agree. Ask anyone who has been here and they will tell you it's their favorite US city. The geographical setting evokes so much emotional drama, the light seems clearer, the colors more vivid, the cultural diversity of the ethnic neighborhoods so captivating and inviting, that it's a place almost everyone can fall in love with at first sight.

1 Golden Gate Bridge

The much-loved symbol of the city and of California's place on the Pacific Rim, the Golden Gate Bridge is the third-largest single span bridge in the world, connecting San Francisco to Marin County (see pp8-9).

2 Cable Cars

San Francisco's little troopers have endured technological progress, and are now the only system of the kind in the world that still plays a daily role in urban life (see pp10-11).

3 Fisherman's Wharf

Despite rampant tourism and commercialization, the saltiness and authenticity are still to be found here if you take time to look. The views of the bay are unmatched, and you'll have an opportunity to try great seafood and see barking sea lions (see pp12-13).

4 Alcatraz

Although it was a federal prison for just under 30 years, the myth of "The Rock" continues to capture the imagination of visitors. Even if exploring prison life holds no appeal, the ferry ride makes it well worth a visit (see pp14-17).

5 Chinatown
The exotic feel of one of the world's largest Chinese communities outside of Asia makes this a magnet for locals and visitors alike (see pp18–19).

6 Golden Gate Park
The city boasts one of the largest public parks in the world, with natural beauty and fine museums (see pp20–23).

7 Grace Cathedral
Dominating Nob Hill with its timeless beauty, San Francisco's favorite cathedral offers a host of awe-inspiring and historic treasures, including Italian Renaissance masterpieces and stained-glass windows (see pp24–5).

8 San Francisco Museum of Modern Art
Second only to New York City's Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco's architectural landmark houses 20th-century masterworks of painting, sculpture, and photography, and the edgiest digital installations (see pp26–9).

10 The Wine Country
The wines from this region have become so internationally recognized that French, Italian, and Spanish winemakers have all established vineyards here. A day trip or, even better, a longer stay shouldn't be missed (see pp32–5).

Mission Dolores
The city's oldest building is also the only intact chapel among the 21 California missions that Father Junipero Serra founded in the late 18th century. Its founding just days before the Declaration of Independence makes San Francisco older than the US (see pp30–31).

TOP 10 Golden Gate Bridge

As with most of the world's wonders, many said that the Golden Gate Bridge could never be built – the span was too wide, the ocean too powerful and deep, and the cost too great. But to many more, the Golden Gate, the name John Fremont gave the splendid strait in 1844 (see p39), demanded the realization of its dream bridge. In 1872, railroad tycoon Charles Crocker first conceived the idea, but it took a visionary engineer, Joseph Strauss, to put forth a realistic proposal in 1921. After 10 years of opposition from all quarters, funding was finally secured from A.P. Giannini, founder of the Bank of America (see p39). The bridge opened in 1937, and has been an emblem of San Francisco and America's icon on the Pacific ever since.

Marin Vista Point

For a uniquely powerful view of the bridge while enjoying a Sunday champagne brunch, opt for one of the many cruises on the Bay, departing from the Embarcadero Pier and Sausalito. Quality purveyors are Signature Yacht Events (415-788-9100, www.signaturesf.com), and Call of the Sea/Seaward (415-331-3214, www.callofthesea.org).

- 4 Marin Vista Point
- 5 Star Turns in Movies
- 6 Protective Barriers
- 7 Building the Bridge
- 8 Bridge Celebrations

- 10 Toll System

1 Deco Style
The bridge owes its striking style to the consulting architects Irving F. Morrow and his wife Gertrude. They simplified the pedestrian railings to uniform posts placed far enough apart to allow an unobstructed view.

2 Maintenance
Repairing and painting the bridge (above) is an ongoing task. The paint protects it from the high salt content in the air, which corrodes the steel components.

3 Fort Point Lookout
On the city side stands an 1861 fort (below). This spot provides a view of the soaring underside of the structure and the pounding waters of the ocean.

The orange color was actually the original rust-proof undercoat, but it complements the natural setting so well that it was kept.

4 Marin Vista Point
 Crossing from the San Francisco side, pull off just before you reach the end of the bridge and take in the startling panorama from the specially constructed Vista Point and look back at the hills and spires of the city. If there's fog, note how the bridge's tower tops disappear in the mist.

6 Protective Barriers
 The Golden Gate Bridge is the number one spot in the world for suicides. As yet there are no effective preventative barriers but there are bars (above) for general safety.

10 Toll System
 Beginning May 28, 1937, the toll to cross the bridge was 50 cents each way, with a 5-cent charge if a car had more than three passengers. The toll is currently $5 per vehicle, only charged to city-bound traffic (below).

7 Building the Bridge
 Joseph Strauss introduced the use of hard hats, goggles, and safety belts for the first time, as well as a vast safety net under the bridge, which saved 19 workers.

The Statistics

The length of the steel wires used to make the cables of the bridge is enough to circle the earth three times. It is also brilliantly "over-engineered" and is said to be five times stronger than it needs to be to withstand the winds and tides it endures daily. At the time it was built, it was the longest suspension bridge in the world (it still ranks seventh) and took just over four years to build. More than 41 million vehicles cross the bridge annually, streaming across six lanes of traffic, along its 1.7-mile (2.7-km) length. The bridge is equipped with two foghorns, each with a different pitch, and 360-degree flashing red beacons. The bridge has been closed due to high winds only three times in its history.

5 Star Turns in Movies
 The bridge has starred in many movies, most notably Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo, in which James Stewart pulls Kim Novak from the raging surf, just east of Fort Point (see p53). In the James Bond movie, A View To A Kill, Grace Jones and 007 battle it out, both of them clinging to the bridge's aerial heights.

8 Bridge Celebrations
 The bridge opened on May 28, 1937, with some 200,000 pedestrians. Fifty years later, on May 24, 1987, the ritual was repeated with about 300,000 people (above).

9 Hiking and Biking
 No visit to San Francisco would be complete without a walk or bike-ride across at least part of the bridge.

Pedestrians may access the east sidewalk 5am-9pm daily. In-line skaters and skateboards are not allowed.

10 Cable Cars

It's impossible not to love these sturdy little vestiges of another age, as they valiantly make their merry yet determined way up the city's precipitous hills. Yet these San Francisco icons came perilously close to being completely scrapped in 1947, when a "progressive" mayor announced it was time for buses to take their place. An outraged citizenry, under the leadership of "cable car vigilante" Mrs. Friedell Klussman, eventually prevailed, and the whole system was declared a National Historic Landmark in 1964. In the early 1980s, the tracks, cables, power plant, and cars all underwent a massive $60-million overhaul and retrofit. The present service covers some 12 miles (19 km) and utilizes about 40 cars.

Cable car route

1 Rather than wait in the long lines at a cable car terminus, do what the locals do and walk up a stop or two, where you can hop on right away – then hold on!

The $5.00 fare is for one ride, one direction only, and there are no transfers. Consider getting a CityPass or a Muni Passport for one day ($13) or longer (see p134).

- 1 Cars
- 2 Bell
- 3 Grip Person
- 4 Conductor
- 5 Cables
- 6 Braking
- 7 Cable Car Museum
- 8 Riding Styles
- 9 Turntables
- 10 Routes

1 Cars

Cable cars come in two types: one with a turnaround system, one without. All are numbered, have wood and brass fittings in the 19th-century style, and are often painted in differing colors.

2 Bell

During the course of operation up and down the busy hills, the cable car's bell (above) is used by the grip person like a claxon, to warn other vehicles and pedestrians of imminent stops, starts, and turns.

3 Grip Person

The grip person (below) must be quick-thinking, and strong to operate the heavy gripping levers and braking mechanisms. The grip is like a huge pair of pliers that clamps onto the cable to pull the car along.

Every grip person develops their own signature ring on the car's bell, and a ringing contest is held every July in Union Square.

4 Conductor

The conductor not only collects fares, but also makes sure that everyone travels safely, and that the grip person has room to do his job.

5 Cables

The underground cables are 1.25 inches (3 cm) in diameter and consist of six steel strands of 19 wires each, wrapped around a rope, which acts as a shock absorber.

9 Turntables

Part of the fun of cable-car lore is being there to watch when the grip person and conductor turn their car around for the return trip. The best view is at Powell and Market streets (left).

10 Routes

The three existing routes cover the Financial District, Nob Hill (below), Chinatown, North Beach, Russian Hill, and Fisherman's Wharf areas. As these are always important destinations for visitors – and for many residents, too – most people find that a cable car ride will be practical as well as pleasurable.

Cable Cars and Streetcars

Wire rope manufacturer Andrew Hallidie's cable car system dates from August 2, 1873, when he tested his prototype based on mining cars. It was an immediate success and spawned imitators in more than a dozen cities worldwide. However, 20 years later, the system was set to be replaced by the electric streetcar. Fortunately, resistance to above-ground wires, corruption in City Hall, and finally the 1906 earthquake sidetracked those plans. The cable car was kept for the steepest lines, while the streetcar took over the longer, flatter routes.

6 Braking

There are three braking mechanisms. Wheel brakes press against the wheels; track brakes press against the tracks when the grip person pulls a lever; while the emergency brake is a steel wedge forced into the rail slot.

Cable Car Museum 7

Downstairs, look at the giant sheaves (wheels), that keep the cables moving throughout the system; upstairs are displays of the earliest cable cars (right).

8 Riding Styles

There is a choice of sitting inside a glassed-in compartment, sitting on outside wooden benches, or hanging onto poles and standing on the running board (above). The third gives you the sights, sounds, and smells of San Francisco at their most enticing.

The cables, which cost at least $20,000 each, must be replaced every two to three months due to the terrific wear and tear.

TOP 10 Fisherman's Wharf

A certain aura of authenticity still clings to San Francisco's old wharf area, but you'll have to look closely to find the historic details – mostly, it has been overwhelmed by tourism. Nevertheless, it's fun to get a walkaway crab cocktail and a chunk of sourdough bread, and to sidestep the crowds to check out the few remaining fishing boats that still haul in their daily bounty. And after all, what's so bad about taking home a few San Francisco souvenirs?

1 Ghirardelli Square

The Ghirardelli family ran a chocolate factory here from 1859 to 1962. The site (below) is now home to upscale shops and eateries (see pp96–7).

2 Anchorage Shopping Center

In the heart of Fisherman's Wharf, with plenty of stores, restaurants, and entertainment.

3 The Cannery

Built as a warehouse in 1907, a makeover was completed in 1967, and it's now the site of some appealing boutiques, as well as tourist shops.

4 Pier 39

Built over a disused pier, this 1978 commercial venture became an instant success for promoting tourism in the wharf area (below). Two floors of shops and eateries, with a large central promenade complete with an antique Venetian carousel, keep drawing in the crowds.

5 USS Pampanito

This vintage submarine (above) sank six enemy ships and damaged four others in World War II. You can tour its interior and get an idea of what life was like for the crew.

Plan of Fisherman's Wharf

9 Boudin Bakery

This is the home of the famous chain of San Francisco sourdough breadmakers. Stop by to try the distinctive crusty round loaf, best enjoyed warm from the oven with plenty of butter.

10 Ripley's Believe It Or Not! and Wax Museum

These fun-zone denizens (below) – found as “attractions” around the world – are a give-away that these blocks of Jefferson Street are pure tourist trap.

6 Fisherman's and Seaman's Memorial Chapel

This little wooden chapel was built in 1980 as an interfaith memorial to all those who make and have made their living at sea.

Fish Alley

This alley (right) is possibly the last vestige of the authentic, workaday wharf. Here you can see fishing boats come in and watch as the catch of the day is landed and prepared for market.

8 Aquarium of the Bay

The aquarium's transparent tunnel visually immerses you in the San Francisco Bay marine habitat, where thousands of members of diverse ocean fauna disport themselves before your eyes. Video presentations and marine specialist guides help you understand what you're seeing.

The Port of San Francisco

In 1853 the first wharf was built here, and it quickly became a center for maritime-related enterprise, including shipbuilding, and fresh seafood joints. Italians soon monopolized almost every aspect of the fishing industry – even today, most of the eateries along the Wharf bear Italian names. With technology, however, the Bay was fished-out by the 1950s, and any big-time fishing industry went out of business or moved elsewhere.

TOP 10 Alcatraz

To the inmates who were confined on this island prison, in operation from 1934 to 1963, their punishment was not only captivity but also psychological torture. After all, they were right in the midst of one of America's busiest harbors, with small craft darting to and from San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, and Sausalito, and they could probably hear the ceaseless procession of automobiles crossing the bridges and honking their horns. They could certainly see the ocean liners as they glided through the Golden Gate to far away ports – all reminding them that life was near, but freedom very far.

View of Alcatraz Island from San Francisco

1 Picnicking is allowed on the dock, but you'll have to bring your own food. The visitor center does sell water, however.

2 The weather is often blustery and cold on the island, and the trails and walkways rough. Wear warm clothes and strong, comfortable shoes.

The audioguide is well worth the extra few dollars, as is the ranger-guided tour.

Top 10 Features

- 1 Lighthouse
- 2 Cell Block
- 3 Exercise Yard
- 4 Control Room
- 5 D Block
- 6 Dining Room
- 7 Chapel
- 8 Broadway
- 9 Visitor Center
- 10 Warden's House

1 Lighthouse
Alcatraz Island was the site of the very first lighthouse built on the West Coast in 1854. The original lighthouse was replaced in 1909 with an automated one, to tower above the new cell block.

2 Cell Blocks
The cell house contains four free-standing cell blocks (below). The complex was built by military prisoners in 1911 and was once the largest reinforced concrete building in the world. In all, there were 390 cells, but the population averaged only about 260 at any one time.

3 Exercise Yard
With a strict “no-talking” rule and the monotonous gloom of being cut off from life, prisoners whose good behavior qualified them for a turn around the walled-in Exercise Yard (above) must have felt very relieved. Here they could walk, rather than pace in their cells, where they spent 16 to 23 hours every day.

You cannot visit Alcatraz independently – booking a guided tour with the ferry company is required.

4 Control Room

From this bunker-like facility, reinforced to withstand siege, the guards controlled the 24-hour electric security system. Next to the Control Room was the visiting area, where thick glass separated prisoners and visitors, and conversations were held over monitored telephones.

5 D Block

Any prisoner who transgressed the strict rules and regulations would be sent to D Block (above), the 42 solitary confinement cells kept entirely without light.

9 Visitor Center

The Visitor Center is located in the old barracks building behind the ferry jetty (below). It houses a bookstore, exhibits, and a multi-media show providing a historical overview of Alcatraz, and an information counter.

10 Warden's House

Until the house burned down in 1970, the warden's home looked out to freedom. Designed in Mission Revival style, the home had 17 large rooms, and sweeping views of the Golden Gate Bridge and San Francisco lights.

6 Dining Room

Meals were one of the few things prisoners had to look forward to, and they were generally well-fed, to quell rebellion. Note the sample menu on display at the kitchen entrance.

7 Chapel

On top of the guardhouse, a Mission-style military chapel (above) was built during the 1920s. It was used as living quarters and a school, as well as a chapel. During the post-1930s prison phase, the building was used to house prison staff.

8 Broadway

The corridor that separates C and B blocks (left) was jokingly nicknamed by prisoners after New York City's glittering thoroughfare, famous for its nightlife. The intersection at the end was named "Times Square."

The History of "The Rock"

The name "Alcatraz" derives from the Spanish alcatrazes, for the birds that Spanish explorer Juan Manuel de Ayala observed here when he sailed into the Bay in 1775. In 1850, a presidential order set aside the island for the US Army to build a citadel, but defense became less of a priority and, in 1909, it became a military prison. In 1933 the Federal Government decided to open a maximum-security penitentiary here. Yet Alcatraz was not the "Devil's Island" that many think it was – the conditions, such as one man per cell, were better than other jails.

TOP 10 Stories from The Rock

1 Robert "Birdman" Stroud
The most famous inmate was dubbed the "Birdman," despite the fact that he was not permitted to conduct his avian studies during his 17 years here. Due to his violent nature Stroud spent most of those years in solitary.

2 Birdman of Alcatraz
This 1962 movie presented Stroud as a nature-loving ornithologist, bending historical fact to the service of a good story.

3 Al Capone
In 1934 Capone was among the first "official" shipment of prisoners. The infamous gangster was assigned menial jobs and treated like every other inmate.

4 George "Machine Gun" Kelly
Jailed in 1933 for kidnapping, Kelly was given a life sentence, and was sent to Alcatraz for 17 years. He was considered a model prisoner by the officers.

Robert "Birdman" Stroud

5 Alvin "Creepy" Karpis
Karpis robbed his way through the Midwest between 1931 and 1936, and earned himself the title Public Enemy Number One. He was imprisoned on Alcatraz from 1936 to 1962. He committed suicide in 1979.

6 Morton Sobell
Charged with conspiracy to commit treason, Sobell arrived on Alcatraz in 1952 and spent five years as its most famous political prisoner, being a victim of J. Edgar Hoover's witch hunt for Communist subversives. Once freed, Sobell returned to live in San Francisco, where he still resides today.

7 Anglin Brothers
The brothers, John and Clarence, are notable as the only two known inmates to successfully escape from The Rock.

8 Escape from Alcatraz
Starring Clint Eastwood as one of the Anglin brothers, again, this 1979 film is largely Hollywood fiction. However, the depiction of prison life is reportedly accurate.

9 Frank Wathernam
The last prisoner to leave Alcatraz, on March 21, 1963.

10 The Rock
Hollywood has never lost its fascination with Alcatraz, as can be seen in this 1997 action thriller, starring Sean Connery.

Native American Occupation

In 1969 Richard Oakes and 90 Native Americans landed on Alcatraz, set up camp, and demanded the government sell them the island for $24 worth of beads and red cloth. They claimed that this was the price their people had been paid in exchange for an island similar in size nearly 300 years earlier. The government considered forcibly removing the occupiers, but growing public support for the Indians forced officials to renew negotiations. However, in January 1970, while playing on the rooftop of one of the buildings, Oakes' youngest daughter slipped and fell to her death; distraught, he and his family decided to abandon their claim. Sixty Native Americans remained, but as the stalemate dragged on, the majority slowly began to leave – only 15 chose to stay. In June 1970, fires ravaged the warden's house, the recreation hall, the officers' club, and the lighthouse. Following this devastation, government troops staged a pre-dawn raid. The remaining Indians were arrested and the 19-month Indian occupation came to an end.

TOP 10 Chinatown

This teeming, densely populated neighborhood, with its bright façades, noisy markets, exotic temples, and ethnic restaurants and shops, is like a city within the city – and a place every visit to San Francisco must include. The atmosphere recalls a typical southern Chinese town, although the architecture, customs, and public celebrations are distinctly American hybrids on a Cantonese theme. Overlook the tourist tackiness, check out some of the side alleys, and give yourself time to take it all in.

Don't drive into Chinatown: it's very congested, and parking is impossible. Take the cable car – all three lines will get you there (see p11).

One of the best Chinese restaurants in town is Tommy Toy's (see p91).

1 Chinatown Gate
A gift from Taiwan in 1970, this triple-pagoda southern entrance to Chinatown (above) was inspired by traditional Chinese village gates.

3 Golden Gate Fortune Cookies Company
Fortune cookies were invented in San Francisco. Stop by to watch how the skillful workers (left) slip the fortune message in the cookie mixture, then fold it into the traditional shapes.

2 Portsmouth Square
This was San Francisco's original town square – here, on July 9, 1846, the US flag was first raised on the Bay, when the port was seized from Mexico. Locals now use the area for t'ai chi and games of mah-jong.

The finest Chinese antiques shops are found at the Chinatown Gate end of Grant Avenue, just inside the gate.

4 Old Chinese Telephone Exchange

This three-tiered pagoda is now the Bank of Canton, and is the most distinctive work of architectural chinoiserie in Chinatown. It served as the telephone exchange until the 1950s.

6 Stockton Street Chinese Markets

At these authentic produce markets the real smells, sights, and sounds of Chinatown come into sharp focus (above).

9 Chinese Culture Center

The Chinese Culture Center comprises an art gallery and a small crafts shop, featuring the work of Chinese and Chinese-American artists.

10 St Mary's Square

This square is graced by a stainless-steel and rose-granite statue of Sun Yat-sen (below) by San Francisco sculptor Beniamino Bufano.

Gold Rush Cantonese

Chinese immigrants began to arrive with the Gold Rush, to get rich quick and return home heroes. As it happened, things turned politically sour in China at the time, and many Chinese stayed in the new land. Unfortunately, there was a racist backlash against them, resulting in the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882, and Chinatown became a kind of ghetto, full of opium dens and vice. The Act was repealed in 1943, and things have steadily improved ever since.

5 Temples

There are a number of temples that incorporate Confucian, Taoist, and Buddhist elements. The Tin How Temple (below) was founded in 1852 and dedicated to the Queen of Heaven.

7 Chinese Six Companies

This building's brilliant façade is one of the most ornate in Chinatown. The Six Companies was formed in 1882 to promote Chinese interests within the community.

8 Chinese Historical Society of America Museum and Learning Center

This is the home of the Chinese Historical Society's 15,000-piece collection of artifacts, documents, photographs, and replicas that illustrate and explain the Chinese-American experience.

The Chinese Culture Center sponsors a lively series of lectures and seminars, as well as walking tours of Chinatown.

TOP 10 Golden Gate Park

Golden Gate Park is every San Franciscan's beloved backyard. Any weekend finds hundreds of people coming here to play or just to relax and breathe in the heady air. Almost every conceivable sort of recreational activity is available: hiking, running, cycling, golf, tennis, baseball, soccer, volleyball, fishing, and more. There's also the very first children's playground in the US, with the magnificent Herschel-Spillman Carousel, built in 1912 (see p59). Even on a rainy day, the park offers world-class activities in the form of the California Academy of Sciences Natural History Museum, Morrison Planetarium, and, perhaps best of all, the marvelous Steinhart Aquarium (see pp22-3).

2 Victorian Conservatory of Flowers

The park's oldest building, a copy of London's Kew Gardens (below), shelters more than 20,000 rare and exotic plants.

3 Giant Tree Fern Grove and John McLaren Rhododendron Dell

Coming upon the Giant Tree Fern Grove, with its huge, curling proto-flora gathered around a small central lagoon, is like venturing into a primeval forest. Just a bit farther to the west, the Rhododendron Dell contains the largest array of these gorgeous blooms (850 varieties) of any US garden.

Map of Golden Gate Park

4 Music Concourse
This area provides the cultural focus for the park, dating from 1894. There are free concerts on Sundays and events sponsored by the San Francisco Opera (see p56).

5 Japanese Tea Garden
This eternally delightful garden is full of refined detail: bonsai trees, rock gardens, exotic plantings, and pagodas (above).

6 Shakespeare Garden
This charming English garden features the 200-odd flowers, herbs, and such, mentioned in the Bard's works. Bronze plaques quote appropriate passages.

7 Strybing Arboretum and Botanical Gardens
This vast area is home to more than 7,000 species from countries with climates similar to that of San Francisco. Environments include a Redwood Nature Trail, a Primitive Plant Garden, and a Biblical Garden.

8 de Young Museum
Set in a beautiful garden located in the heart of the park, this landmark museum exhibits art from Africa, the Americas, and the Pacific. Also has an astounding collection of textiles, photographs, and modern art (see p40).

9 Buffalo Paddock
American buffaloes were first brought here in 1894. In 1984 a small herd was given a home again, roaming under the eucalyptus trees (left).

10 Dutch Windmill and Queen Wilhelmina Tulip Garden
The windmill (above), and the tulip garden that surrounds it, were both gifts from the queen of the Netherlands in 1902. The windmill is one of the world's largest and was restored in 1981.

A Miracle of Land Reclamation
The park's more than 1,000 acres are some 3 miles (5 km) long and half a mile (1 km) wide, making it the largest cultivated urban park in the US. There are 27 miles (43 km) of footpaths, winding through gardens, lakes, waterfalls, and forests. But it was not always so. Before the 1870s the entire area was sandy wastes and scrubland. William Hammond Hall made great progress over two decades, then hired Scottish gardener John McLaren in 1890. "Uncle John," as he was known, made the park his life's work, devoting himself to its perfection until his death in 1943, at the age of 97.

The Garden of Fragrance in the Strybing Arboretum is specially designed for the visually impaired to enjoy.

TOP 10 California Academy of Sciences

1 Swamp

Part of the Steinhart Aquarium, which now holds about 38,000 animals from around the world, the Swamp is home to alligators and alligator snapping turtles. There are also exhibits on rattlesnakes, frogs, and salamanders.

2 Discovery Tidepool

Stroke a starfish, get cozy with hermit crabs, or pick up a sea slug in this hands-on, hands-wet attraction, part of the California Coast exhibits. The pool is staffed by volunteers who will tell you what you're handling and keep the animals safe, too. Hours vary, since the creatures get a much deserved time-out from time to time.

3 Coral Reef

This is the deepest living coral reef display in the world,

Discovery Tidepool

exhibiting a range of aquatic life from the coral reefs and mangroves of the Philippines. Corals, sharks, rays, sea turtles and reef fishes can be viewed from the surface, and close-up through underwater windows and a glass bridge.

4 The Water Planet

Over 100 tanks and a range of interactive media are used to inform all ages of what it takes to survive under water. A variety of fish, reptiles, amphibians and insects are on display.

5 Rainforests of the World

Visitors can experience four diverse rainforest environments in a vast glass dome: the Amazonian Flooded Forest, the Borneo Forest Floor, the Madagascar Rainforest Understory, and the Costa Rica Rainforest Canopy. This includes a diverse range of creatures: piranhas, flying lizards, poison-dart frogs, parrots, chameleons, and butterflies.

6 California Coast

Explore habitats from salt marshes to turbulent rocky inlets and meet a variety of native birds, fish, and invertebrates. The main tank – an exhibit featuring the marine habitats of the Gulf of the Farallones National Marine Sanctuary – is 100,000 gallons in capacity, with large viewing windows, and a crashing wave surge system.

7 African Hall

Magnificent dioramas show a range of African fauna, such as cheetahs, rhinos, lions, giraffes, and the straight-horned oryx, in their natural surroundings. The exhibit ends with a fine colony of African penguins, which can be viewed through a vast window.

8 Penguin Feeding Time

The nine pairs of black-footed penguins located in African Hall are fed twice daily, and it's always a spectacle that the whole family enjoys. Penguins may waddle on land, but their grace is evident when you observe them dive and glide effortlessly through the water to catch their meal.

9 Morrison Planetarium

Embark on a guided tour of the universe. The night skies never looked more real, and you can travel to the very limits of the known universe with state-of-the-art exhibits and technology including an all-digital dome. Shows are presented daily.

TOP 10 Grace Cathedral

Inspired by Notre Dame in Paris, the third largest Episcopal cathedral in the US stands on the site of Charles Crocker's Nob Hill mansion, which was destroyed in the 1906 disaster. Work began on it in 1910 but was not finally completed until 1964. It is constructed of steel and concrete, despite its Gothic look, so as to withstand the city's seismic vagaries. The interior is replete with marble and abundant stained glass, and other sumptuous touches both within and without make it one of America's most lavish religious structures.

1 The cathedral has a simple café, located downstairs on the north side of Cathedral Close, along with a shop.

1 Carillon Tower

The belfry contains a carillon of 44 bronze bells, cast in England in 1938. The bourdon bell, which tolls the hour, is the largest European-style bell in the US. Many of the bells have evocative names, such as Loving Kindness, and Joy to the World.

2 Rose Window

This 25-ft (8-m) work of faceted glass (below) symbolizes the themes of the Canticle of the Sun, a famous devotional poem written by St. Francis of Assisi.

3 Chapel of Grace

This chapel (above) was the first completed unit of the cathedral (1930). Its architecture, windows, and apse mural were inspired by the royal Sainte Chapelle in Paris. Its furnishings are a mix of ages and origins, including the medieval French stone altar, the 17th-century German altar cross, the English Gothic prayer desk, and the painting of the Madonna and Child inspired by Italian Renaissance artist Giovanni Bellini.

3 The Chapel of Grace seats 120 people and is used for daily services, weddings, and special events.

4 Doors of Paradise

Floorplan of Grace Cathedral

10 Maze and Bufano St. Francis of Assisi

Just beyond the entrance is another floor labyrinth, and an appealing statue of St. Francis of Assisi (above) by the late San Franciscan sculptor Beniamino Bufano.

Nob Hill

"Nob" was one of the kinder names reserved for the unscrupulous entrepreneurs who built their mansions on this, San Francisco's highest hill (see p83). Some say the name derives from "nabob," the title for a provincial potentate in India; others say it's simply a contraction of "snob," a theory that would also seem plausible. Despite the loss of almost all of the mansions in the 1906 earthquake, the hill's poshness remains, as home to the city's most celebrated luxury hotels.

5 New Testament Window

The theme of this window is brotherhood and the church. Christ stands with a welcoming gesture, with His disciples flanking.

6 20th-Century Windows

The theme of these windows is human endeavor and they depict creative 20th-century Americans, including physicist Albert Einstein, and astronaut John Glenn.

7 Keith Haring's Altarpiece

8 The Organ

This monumental organ dates from 1934. The carved English oak organ screens show angelic musicians, songbirds, and dragons, as well as the instruments of Christ's Passion in the lower portions.

9 Marble Labyrinth

The Interfaith Outdoor Labyrinth is a replica of the one at Chartres Cathedral in France. Such labyrinths were used in medieval times to mimic the arduous pilgrimage to Jerusalem; today this practice has been revived.

San Francisco Museum of Modern Art

Founded in 1935, the SFMOMA is the only museum in the western US devoted to collecting and exhibiting the full scope of modern and contemporary art, and second only to New York's MOMA. The landmark museum moved to its wonderful Post-Modernist setting in the burgeoning South of Market neighborhood (see p29) in January 1995. Its permanent collections include major works by the most important 20th-century European and American artists, extensive photography holdings, and challenging multimedia installations.

Exterior 1

The building was designed by renowned Swiss architect Mario Botta. The 125-ft (38-m) truncated cylindrical turret (right) is decorated with Art Deco-style chevrons.

Atrium 2

The atrium is illuminated by the central skylight and takes in the full height of the building. It acts as a dramatic entrance and public space, hung with two vast, brightly engaging Sol LeWitt geometric paintings (above).

➔ The SFMOMA regularly rotates its collections so not all the artworks mentioned may be on display at the time of your visit.

3 20th-Century European Artists

These works are located on the second floor. Here you will find important works by Matisse, Miró, Degas, Picasso, Braque, Klee, Mondrian, Duchamp, Dalí, and Magritte, among others.

5 Bay Area Artists

San Francisco Bay Area artists are also represented on the second floor, and include Richard Diebenkorn, Wayne Theibaud, and Clyfford Still, all with international reputations. Bay Area figurative painters in the collection include Elmer Bishoff, and David Park. Most noteworthy, perhaps, is California Artist (1982), a humorous sculptural self-portrait by Robert Arneson in glazed stoneware (right).

6 Latin American Artists

Latin American art is represented most forcefully by the work of muralist Diego Rivera and his wife Frida Kahlo. Other Latin American painters represented include Wilfredo Lam, and Joaquín Torres-García.

9 Temporary Exhibitions

The museum's temporary exhibition spaces may include educational programs, interactive programs, or retrospective exhibitions of the work of contemporary artists such as Yoko Ono and Eva Hess, or the photography of Victorian author Lewis Carroll.

10 The Catwalk

Suspended high up inside the cylindrical turret, visitors can walk the see-through 35-ft (10-m) steel bridge that cuts across the skylight (left), providing dramatic views of the Sculpture Terrace and the Atrium.

7 Photography

One of the museum's strengths; exhibits may include masterpieces by Man Ray, Ansel Adams, and Edward Weston, as well as more avant-garde works.

8 Electronic & Digital Art

Established in 1987, the collection includes multimedia works, moving-image pieces, and video installations by such artists as Brian Eno, Bill Viola, Dara Birnbaum, Matthew Barney, and Nam June Paik.

Museum Guide

The MuseumStore, the Caffè Museo, and the Wattis Theater are all on the first floor. The second floor is the main event for most visitors, with paintings and sculptures from the permanent collection, as well as exhibits relating to architecture and design. The third floor focuses on photography and other works on paper, while media arts are on the fourth. The rooftop terrace features sculptures by established and emerging artists.

4 20th-Century American Artists

Kids love the Koret Visitor Education Center, on the second floor, where there are multimedia displays and art activities.

The Rise of South of Market

Formerly a doggedly industrial area full of warehouses and factories, this flat stretch attracted few residents. For nearly 100 years, it was considered unattractive, if not downright dangerous. All that began to change in the 1970s, when slums were cleared away and the Moscone Center was built. Upscale interior designer showrooms soon followed, ensuing decades brought premier nightclubs, and, more recently, the digital boom added more than virtual life to the place. Public structures have sprung up, and the whole district is now seen as a desirable neighborhood – at least for creative types.

TOP 10 Mission Dolores

The old Misión San Francisco de Asís acquired its popular name, Mission Dolores, from a small stream that once flowed nearby, Arroyo de Nuestra Señora de los Dolores. It is the oldest building in the city of San Francisco and the only intact mission chapel in the chain of 21 (of which it was the sixth) established under the direction of Franciscan friar Father Junipero Serra. The site was consecrated in 1776, and the chapel was built in 1782–91, with the labor of Ohlone Indians. Its adobe walls are 4 ft (1.2 m) thick and its red-tile roofs are typical of the “Mission Style” which can be seen all over California in both old and new buildings. Reportedly, 36,000 handmade and sun-dried adobe bricks were needed to complete the structure.

1 Cemetery and Serra Statue

Chapel 2

The central building (right) still retains the original redwood beams, lashed together with rawhide. The amber-colored window glass gives the interior warmth, reflected off gold-leafed fixtures.

3 Altarpieces

The hand-carved, gilded and painted wooden reredos and side altars (above) were brought from Mexico in the late 1700s and early 1800s.

4 Beamed Ceiling Decoration

The imaginative painted ceiling design derives from Ohlone basketry.

5 Diorama and Museum

Just outside the chapel is a diorama showing what life was like at the mission 200 years ago. A small museum at the back of the chapel contains documents that pertain to the mission's history.

7 Sorrows of Mary Panels

These images along the front of each of two side balconies in the basilica detail the seven moments when Mary was overcome with sorrow (above).

8 Choir Windows of St Francis

At the rear of the basilica, jewel-like stained-glass windows depict scenes from the life of Saint Francis of Assisi, revolutionary patron saint of San Francisco. The lower side windows depict the 21 California Missions.

9 Dolores Street

Undulating like a rollercoaster, this is one of the loveliest streets in San Francisco. Palm trees grace its center all the way along (above).

Plan of Mission Dolores

10 Dolores Park

One of the few large green spaces in the Mission District, this park is situated high on a hill and affords excellent views of the city. It was originally the site of San Francisco's main Jewish cemetery, but was transformed in 1905.

Junipero Serra and California's Missions

In 1769, Gaspar de Portola led an expedition to establish missions in California, in the company of Father Junipero Serra and 60 men. They founded Mission San Diego, and then worked their way up to Monterey. Continuing up the coast, within seven years Father Serra had established a mission in San Francisco, with the assistance of Father Francisco Palou. In all, Serra founded 21 missions in Upper and Lower California, many of which survive.

Mission Façade 6

The modest white façade of the chapel (right) is typical of the Mission Style. Its four columns support niches for three bronze bells, which are inscribed with their names and dates. They were added to the mission in the late 18th century.

Note: Dolores Park is popular during the day, but at night it can become a connection point for drug dealers.

TOP 10 The Wine Country

The world-famous Wine Country comprises two picturesque valleys, Napa and Sonoma, and the extensive hills and dales surrounding them. Altogether, this bucolic zone boasts over 300 wineries, from which countless award-winning wines have emerged. Napa, the slightly more distant of the two, is more developed for visitors, while Sonoma is more low-key but equally inviting. Both are convenient for a day trip, but it's worth spending a day or two here – not only to sample the fruit of the vine but also to take a dip in one of the rejuvenating hot springs that abound throughout the area (see pp34–5).

1 Napa Valley Train
Leaving from Napa and arriving in St. Helena, or vice versa, you can avoid the traffic and partake of a gourmet meal complemented by local wines. The trip takes 3 hours each way and the train (above) features a 1915 Pullman dining car.

Sonoma 2
This appealing town, nestled in the Valley of the Moon (right), is filled with high-end restaurants, small hotels, and shops. The town also features a State Historic Park with a mission building and structures from the early to mid-1800s.

3 Clos Pegase
Housed in an award-winning Postmodern structure, this beguiling winery offers free tours and features an extensive collection of modern art. The wine is memorable, too – specialties include Cabernet, Merlot, and Petite Syrah port.

The Napa Valley Wine Train offers informative wine tours, some including lunch; tours range from $49.50 to $184.

4 Sterling Vineyard

These whitewashed buildings perched on top of a mountain (above) can be seen for miles. The self-guided tour is well marked. Notable wines include Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot.

7 Hess Collection

The tours here are a pleasure, including not only wine-making facilities but also the owner's private art gallery of contemporary European and American artists. The Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Chardonnay are especially good.

Map of the Wine Country

10 "Old Faithful" Geyser

One of only three known geysers in the world that erupt with near-perfect regularity (below). Every 40 minutes, it spews boiling water 60 ft (18 m) into the air.

5 Opus One

Legendary winemaker Robert Mondavi and Baron Philippe de Rothschild have put their skills together to produce Bordeaux-style reds in their state-of-the-art facilities, modeled on the Château Mouton Rothschild winery in France.

6 Domaine Chandon

Lovely gardens, a fine restaurant, and sweeping views complement the sparkling, champagne-style wines of this Moët Hennessy showcase. The winery produces 500,000 cases every year.

8 V Sattui

Extensive gardens (above) and a gourmet deli make this the ideal place along the main Napa Valley road to stop for a picnic. Also on offer are wine-tastings of lesser products free of charge – you have to pay for reserve tastings.

9 Beringer Vineyards

The oldest Napa Valley winery, established in 1876, and the most beautiful. Tours include a visit to the 1,000-ft (300-m) wine tunnels, which Chinese laborers carved out of volcanic stone.

California Wine

Since 1857, wine-making has been the mainstay of this area. A phylloxera blight in the early 1900s nearly put an end to it all, but Europe was hit harder, and it was resistant California vines that brought back the wine business to parts of Italy, France, and Spain. In 1976 California wines were put on the international map, when they trounced France in a blind taste-test in Paris. Now, many European producers have wineries in the valley.

There were settlements in the Bay as early as the 11th century BC, made up of hunters and gatherers who enjoyed a rich diet of seeds, shellfish, and game. Historians group these peoples into the Coast Miwok, the Wintun, and the Ohlone.

2 Sir Francis Drake

In 1579, the English privateer landed near Point Reyes and claimed Alta California for Queen Elizabeth I. Along with other early explorers of the area, he failed to notice the marvelous bay just inside the straits. England didn't follow up its claim to Northern California, leaving it to the Spanish to conquer.

3 Spanish Control

About 200 years after Drake's wanderings, Spain got serious about establishing a presence in Alta California. In

Statue of Father Junipero Serra

1776, an expedition led by Juan Bautista de Anza arrived at San Francisco Bay and established the Presidio (fort). A mission was also founded by Father Junipero Serra (see pp30–31).

4 American Takeover

Impending war with Mexico in the 1840s inspired US leaders to arouse the interest of Bay Area settlers in joining the Union. In 1846, a party of Yankees in Sonoma declared California's independence from Mexico, christening it the Bear Flag Republic. Shortly after, Commodore John Sloat claimed California as US territory.

5 Gold Rush Days

In 1848 landowner John Sutter noticed a curious glitter in the sediment of the American River in the Sierra Nevada foothills and realized it was gold. Despite attempts to keep the discovery quiet, word leaked out, and businessman Sam Brannan displayed a bottle of gold dust and nuggets for the whole city to see. The subsequent stampede of '49ers turned the city into a boom town overnight.

6 Wells Fargo

Stagecoaches of Wells Fargo & Co began carrying freight and passengers in 1852, taking full advantage of the momentum set up by the Gold Rush. It was also instrumental in the development of the Pony Express (see p41).

7 Panama-Pacific Exposition
Held in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal, the real raison d'être for the festivities was that San Franciscans had resurrected their city after the 1906 disaster (see p94).

8 Bay and Golden Gate Bridges
The Bay Bridge's inauguration in 1936 heralded the end of the age of ferryboats by linking the city to the East Bay. The inauguration of the Golden Gate Bridge took place a year later (see pp8-9).

Hippie reveller, Summer of Love

9 "Summer of Love"
San Francisco counterculture burst forth in the summer of 1967. Suddenly, hippies were everywhere, and the eerie, poetic music that embodied a new way of thinking filled the air. It was a socio-political shift that affected the whole world.

10 Senators Feinstein and Boxer
California has always been several steps ahead of the rest of the country. In 1992 it became the first state to send two women Senators to the US Congress, Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer.

Top 10 Scandals and Disasters

1 Native Americans' Near-Extinction
In the late 1800s Native Americans were hunted down by settlers, with a bounty paid for each scalp.

2 Gold Rush Lawlessness
Gold Rush frontier life was so criminal that vigilante justice was proclaimed in the 1850s, leading to secret trials.

3 1906
The earthquake and consequent fire devastated much of the city, and 250,000 people were left homeless.

4 "Bloody Thursday"
On July 5, 1934, police fired shots at striking long-shoremen, leaving two dead.

5 Howl
On October 13, 1955, Allen Ginsberg read his revolutionary poem in San Francisco, which was later banned as obscene.

6 Freedom & Anti-War
Pro-Civil Rights and anti-Vietnam War riots occurred from 1964 to 1970.

7 Rock Icons Die
Part of hippie legend, Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix died in 1970.

8 White's Revenge
In 1978 ex-Supervisor Dan White shot dead Mayor George Moscone and gay Supervisor Harvey Milk (see p39).

9 AIDS
The AIDS epidemic reached overwhelming proportions in the city in the 1980s.

10 Loma Prieta Earthquake
In October 1989, the quake destroyed the Victorian center of Santa Cruz (see p78) and part of the Bay Bridge.

TOP 10 Historic Sites

1 Mission Dolores
The 18th-century Spanish mission, site of the area's earliest settlement, is worth a visit for its tranquility, as well as for the education it provides about the city's early history (see pp30–31).

2 Jackson Square
The area that witnessed the worst misbehavior of the Barbary Coast days contains some of the city's oldest, loveliest buildings. One of the very few areas that were spared in the 1906 conflagration (see p84).

3 Nob Hill
Erstwhile site of the mansions of Golden Age moguls and potentates, from these lofty heights now rise the city's most lavish hotels and the Gothic spires of one of its best-loved cathedrals (see p83).

Jackson Square

4 Fisherman's Wharf
Remnants of the early fishing industry that contributed to San Francisco's growth are still found here, just layered over with a slick veneer of tourism. Fishing boats still come in and deliver their catch of the day, and nature makes its presence known with a colony of sea lions that lounge on the pier (see pp12–13).

5 War Memorial Opera House
This building was inaugurated in 1932 with a performance of Puccini's Tosca, giving the art form a permanent home here. Modeled on its European forbears, with a marble lobby, huge chandelier, balconies, and vaulted ceilings, it is dedicated to the memory of World War I soldiers. In 1945 the Opera House hosted the plenary sessions that preceded the founding of the United Nations and, in 1951, it was the site of the signing of the peace treaty between the US and Japan (see p56).

6 North Beach
The entire area resonates with the history of the early Italian residents, but even more with the iconoclastic legacy of the revolutionary Beats, who brought the neighborhood worldwide fame. Historic churches stand as clear landmarks, while equally historic saloons and cafés take a little snooping around to find (see p83).

Café sign, Haight-Ashbury

7 Haight-Ashbury
The matrix of yet another Bohemian movement that San Francisco has given birth to, this area nurtured idealistic hippies in the late 1960s. They brought international awareness to alternative ways of life, living in harmony with nature (see p108).

8 Fillmore Auditorium
One of the legendary homes of psychedelic rock during the 1960s. Along with the Avalon Ballroom and the Winterland (both now gone), this is where the San Francisco Sound found its first audience. 📍 1805 Geary Blvd • Map E3

9 City Hall
On November 28, 1978, ex-Supervisor Dan White went to City Hall and assassinated Mayor George Moscone and gay Supervisor Harvey Milk (see p37). In a botched trial, he was convicted of manslaughter, sparking riots (see p84). 📍 1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place • Map R1 • Free tours 10am, noon & 2pm Mon–Fri

10 Sutro Baths
Built in 1896 by silver magnate Adolph Sutro, these were at one time the world's largest heated swimming pools, over-arched by a stunning glass roof. The complex was destroyed by fire in 1966, but you can access the ruins by steps at the Merrie Way parking lot (see p116).

Top 10 Historic Figures

1 Junipero Serra
This 18th-century Spanish cleric traveled up and down California establishing missions, including Mission Dolores (see p31).

2 John C. Fremont
Instrumental in the US annexation of California in the mid-1800s, it was Fremont who dubbed the Bay straits the "Golden Gate."

3 John Muir
Muir was a keen promoter of the National Parks movement. The Muir Woods are named in his honor (see p78).

4 Leland Stanford
One of the "Big Four" who masterminded the Transcontinental railroad also founded Stanford University (see p125).

5 Mark Hopkins
Another of the "Big Four" who struck it super-rich and lived on Nob Hill.

6 Charles Crocker
Another "Big Four" accomplice. The Crocker Galleria recalls his legacy (see p50–51).

7 A.P. Giannini
Founder in 1904 of the Bank of Italy, later the Bank of America, Giannini financed the Golden Gate Bridge.

8 Harvey Milk
The first openly gay politician to become a member of the Board of Supervisors was assassinated in 1978.

9 Dianne Feinstein
One of the movers and shakers of San Francisco politics in recent decades, she became a US Senator in 1992.

10 Jerry Brown
Buddhist monk and former mayor of Oakland, this learned free spirit ran for president.

1 Transamerica Pyramid
Hated by many at first, the Pyramid is now loved as an icon of the city. Recalling pyramids of ancient cultures, to some it is a symbol of the mysticism that has always played a part in the San Francisco mentality. At 853 ft (260 m), it is the tallest building in the city, but its shape keeps it from casting a shadow on the neighborhood. 📍 600 Montgomery St • Map N5

2 Bank of America
This 52-story structure was the first skyscraper to be erected in the city, in 1972. The color was a mistake – the granite that faces it was supposed to be pink, not brown, but by the time delivery was made, it was too late. 📍 555 California St • Map N5

3 San Francisco Museum of Modern Art
Quoting Renaissance architecture in thoroughly modern ways, SFMOMA has established itself as the city's premier Post-Modern effort. The interior has a flexibility and functionality that works perfectly with the collections displayed (see pp26–9).

4 Coit Tower
Perched on Telegraph Hill, this Art Deco sentinel takes the form of a giant fluted column. Reminiscent of Renaissance towers, the column is 63-meters tall and is perforated around the top with arched openings and windows, which visitors can reach by elevator for stunning views of the city (see p88).

5 Palace of Fine Arts
This bit of Neo-Classical fluff was designed by Bernard Maybeck for the Pan-Pacific Exposition of 1915. It is patterned on an 18th-century engraving by Giovanni Piranesi entitled The Isle of the Dead (see p94).

6 Civic Center
Centered on the City Hall that would do any state proud, the core buildings are in a grand Beaux-Arts style; and befitting the city that started the Gold Rush, gilt is everywhere (see p84).

7 Haas-Lilienthal House
This Queen Anne-style mansion, built in 1886, is one of the few Victorian beauties in the city that accepts callers. It's a wonderful glimpse into the way of life among San Francisco's upper-middle classes from about 1890 to 1920. Outside, it features

4 The Presidio
This vast swathe of greenery only entered the city's repertoire of parklands in 1994. It has the potential to be even more amazing than Golden Gate Park, providing that the right decisions are made by the Presidio Trust, whose job it is to make the national park financially self-sufficient by late 2013. Filmmaker George Lucas has created a $350 million headquarters here for his production company LucasFilm and up to 1,500 employees.

5 Alta Plaza
Pacific Heights's double block of verdant hill is a popular place to take the sun when it ventures to break through the fog. Basketball and tennis courts and a children's playground are in the center, while to the south there are terraced lawns, onto which some of Pacific Heights' oldest homes face. 📍 Map E2

The park itself is a sloping patch of green, while the surrounding streets are lined with so many grand old houses that it has been declared a historic site. Two of them have been turned into hotels, although the areas immediately outside the square are not the most salubrious at night. 📍 Map E4

7 Embarcadero Park

The last few years have witnessed a welcome transformation along the entire stretch of the Embarcadero. The 1989 earthquake put an end to the idea of running a freeway into the city center, so the old shipping piers are now set off by greenery and sidewalks, and the area is being promoted as a breezy park. In-line skaters and cyclists disport themselves where concrete embankments once held sway (see p93).

8 Yerba Buena Gardens

A small but very welcome patch of green in an otherwise paved-over area. When the weather is fine, the lawn is populated by sunbathers, while other parts of the gardens feature beautiful memorial fountains and sculptures (see p28).

9 Lafayette Park

This is another of Pacific Heights's double-blocked hilltop gardens – a leafy green haven of pine and eucalyptus. Steep stairways lead to the summit, with its delightful views. The city did not manage to set aside these oases without a fight. Squatters' buildings occupied some of the land in the center of this park until as late as 1936, when they were finally pulled down, liberating the lush gardens for all to enjoy. 🗺 Map F2

10 Walton Park

This tiny park is a much needed break from concrete and asphalt for Downtown workers, whom you will see picnicking here at weekday lunchtimes. The park evokes a peaceful mountain meadow. A wonderful sculpture by Georgia O'Keeffe adds contrast, while a central fountain sends droplets of water falling across cement blocks below. 🗺 Map M6

TOP 10 Writers

1 Jack London
 Adventurer and author of frontier tales such as White Fang, The Sea Wolf, and The Call of the Wild, Jack London (1876–1916) grew up in Oakland. There a museum of his memorabilia is housed in a reconstruction of the log cabin he lived in while prospecting for gold in the Yukon Territory. His fiction is based on his experiences in the untamed West and the social inequality he saw in boom town San Francisco.

2 Dashiell Hammett
 The author of The Maltese Falcon and creator of the classic hard-boiled detective Sam Spade made San Francisco his home from 1921 to 1929. He used the fog-swirled slopes of the city's hills as the perfect backdrop for his stylish crime stories. Hammett (1884–1961) was himself employed briefly at the famous Pinkerton Detective Agency.

3 Gertrude Stein & Alice B. Toklas
 Stein (1874–1946) was raised in Oakland, Toklas (1877–1967) in San Francisco, and both were members of the wealthy Jewish bourgeoisie that has played such an important part in the city's cultural life. But these two larger-than-life women soon deserted the Bay Area for Paris, where they became Queen Bees of a circle of brilliant international artists and writers, including Pablo Picasso and Ernest Hemingway.

4 Jack Kerouac
 Arriving from New York in 1947, it was Kerouac (1922–69) who coined the term "Beat." He and his companions – Neal Cassady, Allen Ginsberg, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, and others – initiated the new politics of dissent and free love, all of which led, within a decade, to the Hippie Movement (see p37). His classic novel On the Road (1957) galvanized a generation.

5 Allen Ginsberg
 Ginsberg (1926–97) cleared the way for the eventual Gay Liberation Movement by openly declaring his homosexuality in his literary milestone Howl, first unveiled to the public in 1955 (see p37). His epic poem soon attracted charges of obscenity in the buttoned-down, witch-hunting 1950s. Ginsberg's spiritual mysticism also set the tone for the Hippie Movement.

Jack Kerouac

Armistead Maupin

6 Armistead Maupin
Maupin's Tales of the City were serialized in the San Francisco Chronicle before being published in book form. They are lighthearted paeans to the idiosyncrasies of gay San Francisco in the 1970s, before the specter of AIDS changed everything.

7 Alice Walker
African-American feminist and dedicated San Franciscan, Walker's novel The Color Purple (1985) set the tone for a new vision of black heritage, as seen from the woman's point of view.

8 Wallace Stegner
A Stanford professor of creative writing, Stegner's novel Angle of Repose won the Pulitzer Prize in 1972.

9 Amy Tan
When Tan's The Joy Luck Club (1989) hit the scene, San Francisco's Chinese community at last found its voice. It illustrated Chinese culture and its clash with uprooted Americana.

10 Danielle Steele
Steele's "bodice-rippers" have had such success that she can now afford to be mistress of the very finest Pacific Heights mansion (see p99).

Top 10 Movies Set in San Francisco

1 San Francisco
Clark Gable and Jeannette Macdonald star in this 1936 film set amid the rubble of the 1906 earthquake.

2 The Maltese Falcon
Classic Bogart (1941), in which he embodies detective Sam Spade. The four-year-old Bay Bridge is in evidence.

3 Dark Passage
This Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall vehicle (1947) makes use of San Francisco's moody climate.

4 Vertigo
A classic Alfred Hitchcock thriller (1958) memorably shows the crashing waves under Golden Gate Bridge.

5 Bullitt
Probably the most famous car-chase ever filmed, due to the city's infamous hills (1968).

6 Dirty Harry
Yet another detective story (1971) set in the city that invites such mysteries, perhaps due to its fog.

7 Invasion of the Body Snatchers
This 1978 remake of the 1950s classic stars Donald Sutherland as the last survivor of a chilling alien takeover.

8 Basic Instinct
This 1992 thriller sees Sharon Stone and Michael Douglas cross Golden Gate Bridge to a love-pad at Seadrift.

9 Mrs Doubtfire
Native San Franciscan Robin Williams is in drag in this 1993 spoof. Golden Gate Park is shown to full effect.

10 The Pursuit of Happyness
A 2006 Will Smith drama set in the gritty Tenderloin district.

One of Wallace Stegner's most famous students was Ken Kesey, author of the bestseller One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

TOP 10 Eccentric & Noteworthy Characters

1 Sally Sanford
The Sausalito Chart House Restaurant is the former purview of Sally Sanford (1903–82), the one-time bawdy house doyenne, and then Honorary Mayor of Sausalito. Since Gold Rush days, San Francisco has loved and even honored those who stand for the city's sexual liberality.

2 Joshua Abraham Norton
Born in 1819, Norton made his fortune in San Francisco but lost it all in 1852. The event left him unhinged but harmless, and he declared himself "Emperor of the United States and Protector of Mexico." He issued his own money, and was lovingly indulged by the city's populace until his death in 1880.

3 Jello Biafra
Punk rock lead vocalist for The Dead Kennedys, Biafra ran for mayor of San Francisco in 1979. His basic belief was that corrupt governments and corporations should be fought, not trusted. He chose the name Jello Biafra because of "the way the two images collide in people's minds," with "Jello" as the embodiment of American blandness and "Biafra" as the universal symbol of starvation. His platform included having businessmen wear clown suits to the office. He finished fourth out of a field of ten, with 3.5 per cent of the total votes.

Jello Biafra and The Dead Kennedys

4 Sister Boom-Boom
One of the original Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, a self-described order of gay male nuns, Sister Boom-Boom took part in street theater with them in the late 1970s and early 1980s. In 1982 he ran for a seat on the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, winning 23,125 votes. He is also a recognized astrologer and uses New Age science to interpret gay issues for the community.

5 Melvin Belli
Known as the "King of Torts," the flamboyant Belli was a pivotal figure in fostering today's litigious society as an innovator in the area of personal injury law. He took on big corporations and controversial clients, including Errol Flynn, Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker, Lana Turner, Mae West, Muhammad Ali, and Jack Ruby. Belli died in 1996 at the age of 88, just a few months after filing for bankruptcy.

6 Joan Baez

Known in her youth as "The Voice," girlfriend of Bob Dylan, and peacenik, the Palo Alto native later came out as a lesbian, continuing to work for peace and social justice. In 2001, Baez created a cabaret character, the Contessa ZinZanni, in a show that has enjoyed good reviews in San Francisco.

7 Mrs. Madrigal

Olympia Dukakis brought this wonderful Tales of the City character to vibrant life in the mini-series based on Armistead Maupin's books (see p53). Anna Madrigal is a transsexual landlady who rents out apartments to young singles, both gay and straight, and tends to her marijuana plants and her charges with equal wisdom and spirituality.

8 Francis Ford Coppola

The director of The Godfather makes San Francisco the home of his Zoetrope productions, and has also branched out into other enterprises. His Niebaum-Coppola winery in the Napa Valley is one of the best.

9 Herb Caen

For nearly six decades Caen's newspaper column was required reading. To his many devoted fans he was, and remains "Mr. San Francisco." He coined the term "Beatnik" in his April 2, 1958, column.

10 Willie Brown

San Francisco's first African-American mayor was famous for his bon vivant ways. His high-living, fast-shuffling style did not detract from his popularity, however, and the city seemed to prosper under his tutelage.

Top 10 Sixties Figures
1 Janis Joplin

This troubled singer from Texas became the queen of the San Francisco sound, until her death by heroin overdose.

2 Ken Kesey

A powerful, revolutionary writer, his Magic Bus and Trips Festival set the tone for the entire Hippie Movement.

3 Jerry Garcia

Patriarch of the San Francisco sound, his Grateful Dead band continued to tour until his death in 1995.

4 Mario Savio

The UC Berkeley student launched the Free Speech Movement on the campus in the late 1960s.

5 Owsley Stanley

The most famous source of pure LSD in the 1960s.

6 Grace Slick

The other queen of San Francisco's influential bands, in this case Jefferson Airplane.

7 Huey Newton

Oakland's founder of the Black Panthers, a group committed to violent change if necessary.

8 Patty Hearst

The newspaper heiress, kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army in 1974, apparently converted and took part in an armed robbery.

9 Jim Jones

The leader of a Fillmore District religious group who moved en masse to South America ended his days and those of some 900 followers in 1978, in a mass suicide by cyanide-laced Kool-Aid.

10 Charles Manson

This commune leader and his followers murdered actress Sharon Tate in 1969.

TOP 10 Children's Attractions*1 Exploratorium

Kids can experience one of the finest, uniquely San Francisco interactive days at this superb science museum. They'll learn all about their senses and how they work, as well as delve into all the laws of physics through first-hand experiments. The top draw, however, is the Tactile Dome, a totally dark sphere in which you feel your way along, touching a range of sensorially stimulating objects and textures (see p94).

Crazy Castle, San Francisco Zoo

2 San Francisco Zoo

Direct encounters with farm animals at Family Farm, and visits with zoo babies, which may include gorillas, snow leopards, rhinos, or alpacas, make this a must-do for the youngsters. Although perhaps not the biggest or best zoo in the world, its attention to top-quality children's programs, such as the many feeding times and the creepy-crawly insect denizens, make it one of the tops for budding zoologists. The whole landscaping of the place, from quirky castles to natural habitats, is also designed for maximum fun (see p116).

3 Aquariums

Part of Golden Gate Park's California Academy of Sciences (see pp22-3), the Steinhart Aquarium is a big hit with kids. The darkened corridors are filled with softly glowing tanks in which some of the weirdest creatures on the planet disport themselves. Then there's the Touching Tidal Pool if kids want to get up close and personal with their finny friends. At Fisherman's Wharf, UnderWater World gives an even greater undersea experience, with walk-through transparent tunnels surrounded by sea life (see p13).

4 Zeum

This elaborate complex, aimed both at entertaining kids and spurring their creativity to the max, is part of the greater Yerba Buena Center. There's a wonderful old-fashioned carousel; a labyrinth; a studio where they can script, produce, and star in their own videos; art studios; and a digital workshop, plus lots more to keep them busy and productive all day long. Ages 5 to 18 (see p28).

Alcatraz

5 Randall Museum

Perched above the city, in Corona Heights Park, this small, welcoming complex is primarily a petting zoo, with farm animals, raccoons, reptiles, and birds. But it also offers hands-on experience with woodworking, pottery, painting, theater, photography, model railroads, storytelling, gardening, and more. The aim is to teach children respect for nature and the environment.

6 Alcatraz

“The Rock” is always a hit with older children, particularly boys, who relate to the grim, quasi-military aspects of the place. The wildness of the island’s natural beauty, as well as the ferry ride out and back, will also delight. Smaller kids might find it a bit frightening (see pp14–17).

7 Bay Area Discovery Museum

This hands-on museum is aimed directly at children. Kids will be able to enjoy an art studio, a science lab, a wave workshop where they learn about sea and plant life, and a media center.

- 📍 557 McReynolds Rd, Sausalito • (415) 339-3900 • Open 9am–4pm Tue–Fri, 10am–5pm Sat–Sun • Closed public hols & last two weeks in Sep • Dis. access
- Adm • www.baykidsmuseum.org

8 Golden Gate Park Playground

At the southeastern corner of the park, kids will love the old carousel, a treehouse, and some great swings, slides, and other kid-driven rides. In the summer, there are often Punch and Judy shows to tickle and delight children of all ages (see pp20–23).

9 Angel Island State Park

An ideal place for a full-day family outing. You can picnic, swim, hike, kayak, camp, or take the tram tour that goes all around the island, with a guide who points out sites of historic interest – dating from the days when the place was a rather forbidding immigrant clearing station (see p93).

10 Metreon

Intended as a lively, high-tech, multilevel amusement arcade for adolescents, so far the only thing that seems to have clicked is the superb cinema complex. Here you can see the latest Hollywood blockbusters with full digital sound effects amped up to the highest possible level. Otherwise, the Metreon’s darkened rooms, designed for checking out the latest video games, are largely abandoned by the teens who were supposed to be flocking (see p29).

TOP 10 Scenic Drives

1 49-Mile Drive
This all-in-one driving tour is marked with blue-and-white seagull markers, and winds its way through the most picturesque parts of the city. It can be challenging to follow, keeping an eye out for the markers and the traffic at the same time, but you can get a map of the route from the Visitor Information Center (see p132).

49-Mile Drive marker

2 Mount Tamalpais
The road that leads up to the top of "Mount Tam" is appropriately called Panoramic Highway. All the way along, it provides you with dramatic views of the Marin Headlands, both on the Bay and ocean sides, and as you approach the summit, far-reaching views of the Bay Area (see p124).

3 Conzelman Road
This road hugs the bluffs, high above the waves, on the southern edge of the Marin Headlands. It affords some of the most famously beautiful views of the north tower of Golden Gate Bridge, looking back at the city in the distance. The way is punctuated with old military bunkers, since this entire area was once given over to the army to guard the western shores. Marin County

4 Twin Peaks
More famous panoramas await you here, as you wind your way up the two mountains. You can get 360-degree views of the city to the east, the ocean to the west, the Bay to the north, and the valleys to the south (see p107).

5 The Great Highway
Broad and straight, this coast highway begins at Cliff House at the northern end and eventually meets the famous Highway 1, which takes you, via dramatic cliffs, down to Half Moon Bay, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Carmel, Big Sur – and eventually, to Mexico. Map A4

6 Divisadero
This street cuts a great swathe through the city centre. It starts in the south at Duboce Street, then rises to glorious mansions and Bay vistas after Geary Expressway. Map E4

7 Berkeley & Oakland Hills
Blending gently with the Berkeley Hills, the Oakland Hills offer some beautiful parks, such as Redwood Regional Park. Skyline Boulevard provides access to most of this ridge area, with many picnic groves and hiking options along the winding way. Hwy 24

8 Skyline Drive

Pick up this bucolic road (Highway 35) at Lake Merced (see p117), and it will take you all the way down the woody spine of the Peninsula to Santa Cruz. It's a total immersion in nature, just minutes from the populated areas around the Bay.

9 La Honda & Old La Honda Roads

Behind Stanford University (see p125) is the quiet town of Portola Valley. From here, these picturesque switchback roads ascend to meet Skyline Drive. They are very narrow in places, and you can't go more than 10 mph (16 kmph), but the timeless beauty of the Bay Area forests makes it worthwhile.

10 Highway 9 and Big Basin State Park

This gently mountainous region is almost entirely undeveloped. The main town, Boulder Creek, is like a small frontier settlement, where craftspeople sell their wares, and country stores cater mostly to locals. This is an area that time happily forgot.

1 Café Claude
The owner actually bought Le Barbizon Café in Paris and shipped it over piece by piece. That accounts for the authentic French feel of this back-alley bistro-like spot near Union Square, where francophiles rendezvous to imagine themselves on the Left Bank. The food, too, is suitably Gallic, and there's live jazz on weekends. 📍 7 Claude Lane between Grant & Kearny, Sutter & Bush • Map P4 • (415) 392-3505 • Dis. access

2 Caffè Trieste
A North Beach landmark that must be experienced if you have any interest whatsoever in this quarter's colorful history – either from the literary and artistic or the Italian points of view. It's a great place for a cup of whatever warm liquid you favor, and to sit and people-watch, or dip into one of the city's free weekly papers (see p90).

Café Claude

3 Dolores Park Café
Across the street from historic Mission Dolores, this funky neighborhood café has it all – great views of Dolores Park, filling breakfast and lunch fare, home-made smoothies, freshly baked pastries, and a cool spot to people-watch in the heart of the Mission district. Live music and spoken word performances on Friday nights. 📍 501 Dolores St • Map F5 • (415) 621-2936 • Dis. access

4 South Park Café
Overlooking the small SoMa park favored by the younger, slacker digital set, you can while away an hour or two just taking in the relaxed setting in the knowledge that you're in a certifiably hip locale. ## Top 10 San Francisco Tipples

1 Cabernet Sauvignon
 This full-bodied red, with overtones of blackcurrant, is a Bay Area favorite. Try the Robert Mondavi Winery.

2 Chardonnay
 Of the whites, this is the most popular, fermented in French oak barrels, lending it smooth vanilla tones. Try Sterling Vineyards (see p32).

3 Other Red Wines
 Pinot Noir, Merlot, and Zinfandel are giving Cabernet Sauvignon some healthy competition of late.

4 Other White Wines
 Sauvignon Blanc, White Zinfandel, Chenin Blanc, and Pinot Grigio are whites that can tempt you away from the Chardonnay grape.

5 Sparkling Wines
 Top French wine producers such as Mumm and Moët & Chandon have set up wineries in the Napa Valley (see pp32-3).

6 Cocktails
 Mojitos – white rum, ice and fresh mint – are an old standby still going strong.

7 Beers and Ales
 Local breweries abound in the Bay Area, such as Anchor Steam Beer (see p109).

8 Tea
 A huge range of infusions, springing from the healthy attitude that dominates here.

9 Coffee
 Many more ways to drink your coffee than there are in all of Europe – latte is still the blend of choice.

10 Mineral Water
 The top local brand comes and takes its name from Calistoga in the Napa Valley.

1 The Midnight Sun
This popular, posy video bar fills up quickly after office hours and stays that way until the wee hours. Mostly good-looking 20- and 30-somethings, it's more about being admired than making connections here, so it's best to go with a friend or two, have a drink, and then move on to some livelier venue. The videos are a mix of music clips and TV sitcoms.
📍 4067 18th St • Map E5 • (415) 861-4186

2 Moby Dick
This old-time Castro hangout attracts a more mature crowd. It's generally a bunch of regulars getting together for pinball or pool – or gazing at the aquarium over the bar. The windows are big, so you can keep track of what's going down on the street. The music is largely 1980s retro that sets a fun-loving tone. 📍 4049 18th St • Map E5 • www.mobydicksf.com

7 Martuni's
With its decor of glass and chrome and the regulars' penchant for singing old torch songs, this is a very retro piano bar for an older gay crowd. It's a magnet for butch guys, drag queens, and straights, too – anyone who likes a good sing-along – or who doesn't mind embarrassing themselves. ☎ 4 Valencia St at Market • Map F4 • (415) 241-0205

8 Badlands
Its old, dingy interior used to live up to its menacing name, but no more since it has gone all slick and shiny. Still, it's a big draw for the under-40 set. The Sunday afternoon beer bust (4–9pm) is, for many, the most happening event of the week. ☎ 4121 18th St • Map E5 • (415) 626-9320

9 Café Flore
Not just a daytime cruising and coffee venue, but also by night a hopping spot. Lots of gay party people meet here first before heading out for the really late-night dancing, dark-room clubbing, and what-not that goes on all around the area (see p65).

10 Lexington Club
The only full-time "girl" bar in the city, amazingly, set in a subset Mission District neighborhood that has been on the rise as a lesbian enclave. Young pierced sylphs, 40-something professionals, and even straight women frequent this fun "down-home, divey den for dykes," as one devotee dubbed it. ☎ 3464 19th St at Valencia • Map F5 • (415) 863-2052

You'd never know that this inconspicuous, windowless building houses one of the city's most elaborate disco-extravaganzas. It features big-name DJs in a huge, SoMa multi-environment space, laid out on three levels. Don't expect anything of any significance to happen until after midnight (see p111).

Ten 15 Folsom

3 Club Six
The terribly seedy southern Tenderloin/SoMa location can be a major drawback late at night, but once inside you can join the diverse crowd in dancing to some righteous DJs in the roomy downstairs area. The music tends toward house or trance, but they also mix it up with reggae or whatever gets people moving. Alternatively, you could always just head upstairs to the high-ceilinged, comfortable lounge to relax and chat. ☎ 60 6th St between Market & Mission • Map Q3 • (415) 863-1221

4 DNA Lounge
This immensely popular club features a large, pulsating dance floor and weekly theme nights such as "Death Guild," the oldest goth/industrial dance night in the country. The riotous "mashup" nights, held once a month, draw a mixed crowd of rock, indie, and hip-hop fans (see p112).

5 Harry Denton's Starlight Room
Something for the 40-plus set, or even 50-plus. Twenty-two stories above Union Square, couples can dance to cocktail jazz and the milder R&B hits, and relax in the easy sophistication of the place. It's 1930s-stylish, so consider it a chance to dress up in suits and party dresses, sip highballs, and enjoy the city's seductive lights. ☎ Sir Francis Drake Hotel, 450 Powell St at Sutter • Map P4 • (415) 395-8595

 Whether you are into swing, jazz, rock, or grunge, this San Francisco institution delivers. A retro-chic yet unpretentious music venue since 1931, this hopping bar with glittering decor and old-school feel brings in all the top acts. 📍 1025 Columbus Ave • Map K3 • (415) 474-0365

7 Supperclub
 If ultra-chic surroundings are what you are looking for, then this is the club for you – San Francisco at its trendiest. It attracts a young and sexy crowd, and the lighting and music are techno-cool. Whether it's an unusual dining experience, unique performances, or just dancing you are after, this is the place to come. The pricey cover charge is worth it. 📍 657 Harrison St • Map Q6 • (415) 348-0900

8 Milk Bar
 The only true dance club in Haight-Ashbury. Fabulous music and a great crowd. The dance floor may be a bit small, but that just adds to the atmosphere. Don't miss the 80s night on Fridays or the reggae night on Tuesdays. 📍 1840 Haight St between Shrader & Sanyan • Map D4 • (415) 387-6455

9 Punchline Comedy Club
 A perfect alternative to bar-hopping, there is no better venue for a good laugh than this hilarious comedy club. National acts (and local ones too) headline a fun evening in an intimate setting, with all the seating up close to the stage. It's best to buy tickets in advance for assured seating. 📍 444 Battery St • Map M5 • (415) 397-7573

10 The Tonga Room & Hurricane Bar
 This Nob Hill tiki bar is almost Disneyesque in its tropical effects, including indoor monsoons and a floating band. Aimed at grown-ups of every age, it delivers kitschy Polynesian dazzlement, and is often chosen as the venue for birthday celebrations. Weekday award-winning Happy Hour (5–7pm) includes an Asian buffet at nominal cost. 📍 Fairmont Hotel, 950 Mason St • Map N3 • (415) 772-5278

TOP 10 Outdoor Activities

1 Swimming

The icy waters of the Bay are an option only if you're a polar bear or an indomitable surfer. Most visitors will want to head for a pool – try the Embarcadero YMCA. ☎ Embarcadero YMCA: 169 Steuart St; (415) 957-9622 • Map H2
• www.ymca.org

2 Hiking

The Bay Area is replete with magnificent hiking trails for every type of nature-lover. Land's End offers some wild terrain to scramble over (see p117), and Mount Tamalpais is criss-crossed with trails (see p124). But just scaling the city's hills is enough hiking for most people.

3 In-line Skating

Golden Gate Park and in-line skaters make a perfect match, especially on Sundays, when the main street in the park is closed to cars. Or try the path that runs along Marina Green for smoothly paved surfaces.

4 Skateboarding

Skateboard ramps are wherever you make them in this city – along Market Street in the Financial District, in one of the dozens of parks, or on any plaza. Protection against the inevitable vagaries of flying around on wheels means you should gear up appropriately. ☎ DLX: 1831 Market St; Map F4 • FTC Skateboarding: 622 Shrader St; Map D4

5 Running

Now that Crissy Field's restoration is complete, the Golden Gate Promenade (see p97) is an inspiring run. And, of course, Golden Gate Park offers endless opportunities for jogging. If organized running is your thing, try the Bay to Breakers or the San Francisco Marathon. ☎ Bay to Breakers: 3rd Sun in May; (415) 359-2800; www.baytobreakers.com

6 Tennis

Free public tennis courts abound in the city. Contact the Recreation and Park Department for the one nearest you. Golden Gate Park has courts, for which a small fee is charged, but you can book in advance. Most public outdoor courts are open from sunrise to sunset. Indoor courts are the purview of private tennis clubs, with membership required. ☎ San Francisco Recreation and Park Department: (415) 831-2700

8 Boating

Sailing, rowing and kayaking are all great here, although far from a cakewalk on the Bay's unpredictable waters and sometimes ferocious prevailing winds. Play it nice and easy by taking a boat out on Stow Lake in Golden Gate Park (see p21).

9 Extreme Sports

Surfing here requires great fortitude and is not for beginners. The same goes for wind-surfing on the Bay. Hang-gliding can be tackled by novices under guidance. ☎ San Francisco Hang-Gliding Center • (510) 528-2300

10 Biking

Although the hills' amazing grades overwhelm all but those with legs of steel, bicycling is very big in San Francisco. Don't miss biking across the Golden Gate Bridge. Rent bikes from City Cycle. ☎ City Cycle: 3001 Steiner St • (415) 346-2242 • www.citycycle.com

Left Carnival Right St. Patrick's Day Parade

TOP 10 Festivals and Parades

1 St. Patrick's Day Parade
With its large Irish population, not to mention the 25 or so Irish pubs scattered around town, the St. Patrick's Day Parade and the revelry that follows deep into the night is one of the city's largest celebrations. The parade journeys from 5th and Market streets to the Embarcadero. ☉ Sun before Mar 17

2 Cherry Blossom Festival
Japantown (see p99) comes spectacularly to life when the cherry trees blossom. Traditional arts and crafts, taiko drumming, martial arts demonstrations, and dancing, as well as delicious Japanese food make this one of the city's favorite celebrations. There's also a colorful and impressive parade. ☉ Two weekends in Apr

3 Cinco de Mayo
Commemorating the defeat of the French army at Puebla, Mexico, in 1862, by General Ignacio Zaragoza, this is one of the Latino community's biggest annual festivals, featuring parades, fireworks, music, and dancing. In addition to the Civic Center, much of the fun happens in the Mission District. ☉ Sun before May 5

4 Carnival
Having nothing at all to do with Lent or any other traditional date, San Francisco's Carnival is staged at the time of year when the weather will most likely be at its best for the glittery event. Groups work all year long, with the help of municipal grants, to create their dazzling costumes and put together their infectious rhythmic routines, all to a samba, rumba, or salsa beat.

☉ Mission District • Last weekend in May

5 Pride Celebration Parade
More than 300,000 people attend this amazing gay event, the largest of its kind in the US, that takes over Market Street, from the Embarcadero to the Civic Center. It's up to four hours of Dykes on Bikes, drag queens in nuns' habits, leather-clad clones, gay parents, gay marching bands, muscle men, and much more. The floats – as well as the cheering throngs – are likely to be the most over-the-top, outlandish things you've ever witnessed. ☉ Sun in late Jun

Chinese New Year

6 Independence Day
This waterfront festival, held from Aquatic Park to Pier 39, involves live entertainment, food stalls, and state-of-the-art fireworks launched from several points along the Bayfront. If it's foggy, the bursts of light seem that much more romantic. ☼ Jul 4

7 Stern Grove Festival
A much loved San Franciscan tradition, this festival showcases every kind of music you can name (see p116). ☼ Sun, early Jun-late Aug

8 Exotic Erotic Ball
Just as outrageous as the title suggests, this indoor masquerade ball is reputedly the world's largest. ☼ Cow Palace: 2600 Geneva Ave, Daly City • (415) 334-6700 • Late Oct

9 Hallowe'en

4 Renaissance Pleasure Faire
This delightful event recreates Elizabethan England, with all its ribaldry and rowdiness. ☼ Late Aug-early Oct: Sat-Sun

5 Burning Man
One event that defies description. It is group performance art on a behemoth scale. ☼ 1st weekend Sep

6 Ghirardelli Square Chocolate Festival
A chocaholic's dream, with the chance to sample various nibbles. ☼ Early Sep

7 Folsom Street Fair
One of the biggest events for the gay community is SoMa's leather-and-body-hair carousel. ☼ Last Sun Sep

8 Castro Street Fair
A build-up to Hallowe'en, it focuses attention on everyday gay life. ☼ Early Oct

9 Tet Festival
A multicultural party, but mainly Vietnamese-American. ☼ Jan-Feb

10 Tribal, Folk, & Textile Arts Show
An arts and crafts fair at the Fort Mason Center, offering pottery, jewelry, textiles, and more. ☼ Early Feb

The best viewing spots for the Independence Day fireworks are Crissy Field or from Telegraph Hill – but expect large crowds.

TOP 10 Beaches

1 Bolinas Beach
This hidden-away Marin beach tends to be windy and is mostly used by dog-walkers, and kayakers. It's sandy, with a backdrop of rocky cliffs. If you walk north, you'll find warmer nooks and crannies out of the wind, where some sun-worshippers bask in the nude, although there is a rarely enforced city ordinance against it (see p124).

2 Stinson Beach
Three miles (5 km) of sand make this one of the most popular beaches in the Bay Area, coupled with the fact that Marin often has fine weather when the rest of the coast is covered in fog. As a result, it can be crowded when the sun comes out (see p124).

3 Muir and Red Rock Beaches
These two beaches, just south of Stinson, are the most famous nude beaches north of San Francisco. Both are sandy curves within their own coves, protected from wind and prying eyes by rocky cliffs. The only caveat is that you'll need sturdy walking shoes to get down the rough paths that lead to them from the parking lots. ☉ Muir Beach: off Hwy 1 on Pacific Way • Red Rock: 5.5 miles (9 km) north of Muir on Pacific Way

4 Baker Beach
This one-mile (1.5-km) stretch of sandy beach, with its perfect views of the Golden Gate Bridge, is the most popular in the city. It's great for sunbathing, dog-walking, picnicking or jogging, but signs warn off swimmers because of riptides. Sunsets here are unforgettable. ☉ Map C2

5 China Beach
Officially called James D. Phelan Beach, this is the poshest beach in San Francisco, being an adjunct to the exclusive Sea Cliff neighborhood. Despite its pedigree, however, California law requires that all coastal areas remain public, although access roads to them can be private. China Beach is small and protected from the wind, there's plenty of parking, and it's a pleasant walk down to the sand. Once there, you'll find showers and even changing rooms. ☉ Map B2

Muir Beach

☉ Map B2

Land's End

6 Land's End

Although extremely beautiful in a wild, untouched way, this tiny, rocky beach is only for the hardest nature-lovers. It's quite a hike to get here, although taking the trail up above it is quite a bit easier than going by the lower, coastal trail. Many habitués have built little sun-traps for themselves, by piling up rocks to wall-in their patches of sand (see p115). Map A3

7 Ocean Beach

Some 4 miles (6.5 km) long and quite broad, this is the city's largest beach by far, but probably the worst for entering the water safely. It starts at Cliff House and continues on beyond the city limits, turning into picturesque dunes at the southern end. Great for walking or jogging, and when the sun comes out, it's a fine place to sunbathe (see p115).

8 Half Moon Bay

About 22 miles (35 km) south of the city, the Half Moon Bay shoreline forms a long, gently curving sandy beach accessible at several points off Highway 1. A horseback riding trail runs from Dunes Beach to the bluff area of Francis Beach, and picnicking, kite-flying, surfing, and surf fishing are popular activities. Hwy 1

9 San Gregorio Beach

Part of San Gregorio Beach, 11.5 miles (18.5 km) south of Half Moon Bay, is clothing-optional, but it requires a good hike down the cliffs to get to. The entire stretch is partly state park, and includes a protected, driftwood-strewn estuary at the back of a wide, sandy beach, with grassy bluffs along the coast. All along there are protected areas and inlets. The estuary is home to many birds and small animals (see p127).

10 Pescadero Beach

This beach has a 1-mile (1.5-km) shoreline with sandy coves, rocky cliffs, tide pools, surf-fishing spots, and picnic facilities. Across the highway is Pescadero Marsh Natural Preserve, a popular area for bird-watchers and other naturalists, being a refuge for blue heron, kites, deer, raccoons, foxes and skunks. The beach is 14.5 miles (23.3 km) south of Half Moon Bay on Highway 1 (see p127).

TOP 10 Day Trips from the City*1 Wine Country

Taking at least a day to drive up into the Napa-Sonoma hill country should be on everyone's list. Not only is the countryside beautiful, but you can also sample some of the best wines in the world. Dip into the restorative volcanic hot springs, and enjoy lavish spa treatments (see pp32–5).

California wine

2 Muir Woods

At the foot of Mount Tamalpais (see p124), this 550-acre woodland is home to one of the few remaining first-growth groves of redwoods. The oldest of these giants is at least 1,000 years old, and such trees once covered the coastal area of California. The woods are named in honor of John Muir, the 19th-century conservationist (see p39). ☉ Muir Woods National Monument • Open 8am–sunset daily • Adm • (415) 388-2595 • www.nps.gov/muwo/

3 Monterey

This town is renowned for its world-class aquarium, the Monterey Jazz and Blues Festivals, and Cannery Row, made famous by author John Steinbeck, who described it as a collection of sardine canneries and warehouses. Established by the Spanish in 1770, Monterey was the first capital of California (see p36)

– some early buildings survive.

☉ Monterey Bay Aquarium • Open 9:30am–6pm daily • (831) 648-4800

• Dis. access • Adm • www.mbayaq.org

4 Big Basin State Park, Boulder Creek

Highway 9 is one of the most picturesque drives in the Bay Area, winding its way among the green Santa Cruz Mountains and through little towns where nothing much changes. Although it's minutes from Silicon Valley, life has a backwoods feel here.

5 Stanford University

Just 30 minutes south of the city, with a CalTrain depot right at the main gates, the palm-lined beauties of this campus make it worth a trip. The visual motif of sandstone and red-tile roofs has been carried forward since the Romanesque Quadrangle was built in the late 1800s. The ornate carvings that decorate the arches and pillars are extraordinarily lovely, setting off the elaborate mosaic that graces the façade of Memorial Church (see p125).

6 Carmel

Carmel-By-The-Sea was founded as an artists' colony in the early 1900s, and is now one of the most exclusive communities in the world – having boasted actor Clint Eastwood as its mayor in 1986–88. Its old Spanish mission, one of the 21 built along the coast (see p30) is considered California's most beautiful. 📍 Carmel Mission: 3080 Rio Rd • Open 9:30am–5pm Mon–Sat; 10:30am–5pm Sun • (831) 624-1271 • Adm • www.carmelmission.org

7 Coastal Beaches

At least 20 different beaches line Highway 1 south of San Francisco. Some of the best include Gray Whale Cove, Montara State Beach, Miramar Beach and El Granada Beach, Roosevelt Beach, Dunes Beach, Francis Beach, Poplar Beach, Pelican Point Beach, Cowell Ranch State Beach, Martin's Beach, San Gregorio Beach, Pescadero State Beach, Bean Hollow State Beach, and Pebble Beach.

8 Point Reyes

Some 110 sq miles (285 sq km) of pristine natural coastline make this promontory a haven for all sorts of wildlife and a thing of unforgettable, wind-swept beauty. You can watch whales and sea lions from Point Reyes Lighthouse (see p127).

9 Santa Cruz

This beach resort has always had a reputation for the vibrancy of its countercultural way of life. Along the beautiful coastline, the most prominent feature is the Boardwalk's Big Dipper Rollercoaster, which has been thrilling Santa Cruzers since 1923. The best swimming in the Bay Area is also here (see p127).

10 Saratoga and Los Gatos

Both of these towns, in the hills above Silicon Valley, have retained their frontier quality. One of the best things to do, other than drive the scenic roads, is to visit Hakone Gardens, a beautiful Japanese park (see p127).

📍 Hakone Gardens: 21000 Big Basin Way, Saratoga • (408) 741-4994 • Open 10am–5pm Mon–Fri, 11am–5pm Sat–Sun • Adm • www.hakone.com

Downtown

THE DOWNTOWN AREA IS SMALL BUT HIGHLY VARIEGATED, including some of the city's oldest and newest landmarks, as well as some of its most exotic and eccentric neighborhoods. Colorful Chinatown, exuberant North Beach, posh Nob and Russian Hills, run-down Polk Street, the bustling Financial District, the graceful Ferry Building, and the noble architecture and cultural venues of the Civic Center – all these and more are packed into San Francisco's heart. This is where you can ride the legendary cable cars on their most scenic routes (see pp10–11), and don't forget to climb up Telegraph Hill, where Coit Tower stands as one of the city's most loved landmarks, competing successfully with the Transamerica Pyramid not far away.

1 Chinatown

Since its beginnings in the 1850s, this densely populated neighborhood has held its own powerful cultural identity despite every threat and cajolery. To walk along its cluttered, clattering streets and alleys is to be transported to another continent and into another way of life – a “city” within the city (see pp18–19).

2 Grace Cathedral

Inspired by French Gothic architecture yet constructed of reinforced concrete, these contradictory qualities have given rise to one of the city’s best-loved landmarks (see pp24–5).

3 North Beach

This lively neighborhood is the city’s original “Little Italy” and is still noted for its great Italian restaurants and cafés, mostly lined up along and near Columbus Avenue. In the 1950s, it was also a magnet for the Beat writers and poets, notably Jack Kerouac and Allen Ginsberg (see pp52–3), who brought to the area a Bohemian style which it still sports today. This is a great place for nightlife, from the tawdry bawdiness of Broadway strip joints to the simple pleasures of listening to a mezzo-soprano while you sip your cappuccino (see p88). ☉ Map L4

4 Nob Hill

With the advent of the cable car, San Francisco’s highest hill was quickly peopled with the elaborate mansions of local magnates – in particular, the “Big Four” who built the Transcontinental railway (see p39) – and the name has become synonymous with wealth and power. The 1906 earthquake, however, left only one “palace” standing, now the Pacific Union Club, which still proudly dominates the center of the summit. Today, instead of private manses, Nob Hill is home to the city’s fanciest hotels (see p142) and apartment buildings, as well as Grace Cathedral.

☉ Map N3

5 Russian Hill

Another of San Francisco’s precipitous heights, one side of which is so steep you’ll find no street at all, only steps. The most famous feature of this hill is the charming Lombard Street switchback – “The World’s Crookedest Street,” – which attests to the hill’s notoriously unmanageable

inclines (see p61). As with Nob Hill, with the cable car’s advent,

Russian Hill was claimed by the wealthy, and it maintains a lofty position in

San Francisco society to this day. It supposedly took its name from the burial place of Russian fur traders,

who were among the first

Europeans to ply their trade

at this port in the early 1800s. ☉ Map M2

The Making of a City

The Bay lay undiscovered by Europeans until 1769, and for years was little more than a Spanish mission village called Yerba Buena, becoming Mexican in 1821. The first great boost came when gold was discovered at Sutter's Mill in 1848. Hundreds of thousands from all over the world came to try their luck in the Gold Rush. At the same time, the US took possession of the West Coast. The Transcontinental Railway helped to firmly establish the area's financial base.

6 Jackson Square

Renovated in the 1950s, this neighborhood right next to the Transamerica Pyramid (see p46) contains some of San Francisco's oldest buildings. In the 19th century the area was notorious for its squalor, and was nicknamed the "Barbary Coast," but brothels and drinking establishments have given way today to upscale offices and the city's most lavish antiques shops. The blocks around Jackson Street and Hotaling Place feature many original brick, cast-iron, and granite façades.  Map M5

7 Civic Center

The city's administrative center is an excellent example of grand Beaux Arts taste and illustrates San Franciscans' pride in their city (see p46). It is perhaps the most ambitious and elaborate city center complex in the US and it continues to undergo enhancements. Besides the imposing City Hall, with its vast rotunda, gold-leaf detailing, and formal gardens, the area also includes the War Memorial Opera House, the Louise M. Davies Symphony Hall, the Herbst Theater (see p56), the State Building, the New Main Library, and the monumental Old Main Library, re-inaugurated as the Asian Art Museum.

 Map R1

8 Union Square

This important square, which gets its name from the pro-Union rallies held here in the early 1860s, has a $25-million upgraded look that includes performance spaces, grassy terraces, and improved parking. It is now the center for high-end shopping. Located with the edges of the Financial District on one side and the Theater District on the other (see pp50–51), it is at its most picturesque along Powell Street, where the cable cars pass right in front of the historic St Francis Hotel (see p143). The column in the center commemorates Admiral Dewey's victory at Manila Bay during the Spanish-American War of 1898.

 Map P4

9 Financial District

Montgomery Street, now the heart of the Financial District, was once lined with small shops where miners came to weigh their gold dust. It marks roughly

First Interstate Center, Financial District

the old shoreline of shallow Yerba Buena Cove, which was filled in during the Gold Rush to create more land. Today it is lined with early 20th-century banking “temples” and modern fabrications of glass and steel. At the end of Market Street stands the renovated Ferry Building, which once handled 100,000 commuters a day before the city’s bridges were constructed, and is now a bustling meeting spot with cafés and artisan food shops. Its tower is inspired by the Moorish belfry of Seville Cathedral in Spain. 🗺 Map M5

10 Polk Street
Historically, the southern part of this street, known as “Polk Gulch,” was the city’s first openly gay district, before the rise of the Castro in the 1970s (see p107). Since then it has grown shabbier, but it still attracts younger gays to its clubs, bars, and shops. However, this stretch is best avoided after dark. At the other end, down from Russian Hill, Polk Street is one of the city’s shopping and dining lures, with many fine choices to tempt a discerning clientele. 🗺 Map Q1

A Walk Around North Beach

Morning

 Start at the top of North Beach, on Telegraph Hill (see p88), admire the famous views, and visit Coit Tower (see p46), making sure to take in the murals. Next, walk down to Filbert Street (see p88) and go right a couple of blocks until you get to lovely Washington Square, where, at Saints Peter and Paul Catholic Church, Marilyn Monroe and local baseball great Joe DiMaggio had their wedding pictures taken (see p88). Continue on along Columbus Avenue to the left and pay a visit at colorful Caffè Roma (see p90), where you can indulge in a bit of sidewalk ogling. Or, across the street, pay homage to the time-honored US Restaurant (see p91) which serves some of the best pasta in town.

Afternoon

After lunch, take a left on Green Street and go over one block to Upper Grant (see p88), with its funky shops and bars, a regular hangout since the 1950s. Turn right on to Vallejo Street, where a visit to the famous Caffè Trieste (see p90) for a coffee and the authentic Bohemian atmosphere is a must. Continue on down Columbus to William Saroyan Place and at No. 12 you’ll find Specs’, an exuberant bar filled with Beat memorabilia. Finally, just across Columbus at No. 261 is the immortal City Lights Bookstore (see p88), where you can browse the Beat poetry written by owner Lawrence Ferlinghetti and friends.

The panoramic views from both the hill and the top of the Coit Tower are justly celebrated. The wide arc sweeping from the East Bay and the Bay Bridge to Alcatraz and the Golden Gate Bridge is breathtaking.

The North Shoreline

AS ITS NAME SUGGESTS, the Bayshore area spreads out along the Bay at the northern edge of the city, faces the islands, and enjoys unforgettable views of both the Bay and Golden Gate Bridges. Historically, the city began its life here, when the Spanish set up a military outpost at the Presidio in 1776. More history can be found at the piers of the northern Embarcadero, including now heavily commercialized Pier 39 and Fisherman's Wharf, where San Francisco's fishing industry began in the 19th century. But also part of the area is the smart Marina District, with its swanky homes and two yacht clubs. Some of the finest parks are found here too, most notably the Presidio, Crissy Field, the Marina Green, and the Great Meadow above the Fort Mason Center. A particularly stylish remnant of the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition is also found here – the Neo-Classical Palace of Fine Arts – with its hands-on science museum annex, the Exploratorium.

1 Golden Gate Bridge

This world-famous engineering masterpiece sets off the entrance to San Francisco Bay in the most spectacular way, and never fails to elicit gasps of awe from first-time visitors and old-timers alike (see pp8–9).

2 Fisherman’s Wharf

Although now largely tourist-oriented, there are still authentic sights to see, aromas to savor, and salt air to breathe among these piers (see pp12–13).

3 Alcatraz

America’s “Devil’s Island” didn’t operate as a prison for very long, but the cell blocks and control room can still evoke a chill (see pp14–17).

4 Angel, Treasure, and Yerba Buena Islands

A trip out to Angel Island, now a state park, can make for a very pleasant day of picnicking, biking, hiking, kayaking, and swimming. But in the early 1900s it was the “Ellis Island of the West,” where would-be immigrants, mostly Chinese, could be detained for months. During World War II, it served as a prisoner of war camp and later as a missile base. Treasure Island was built in 1939 for the Golden Gate International Exposition and was a US Navy base during World War II; it is now once again owned by the city and has become one of San Francisco’s suburbs. Yerba Buena Island is a Coast Guard station and is mostly closed to visitors.

📍 Ferries from Pier 41

5 The Embarcadero

The Embarcadero starts at Aquatic Park and curves all the way around to Hunters Point at the southeastern edge of the city. Since the Port of Oakland handles the Bay’s shipping needs, the old piers are used for any number of purposes these days, and the parallel road has become a park promenade (see p49). Pier 39 is the most famous since it was turned into an amusement attraction in the 1980s, while other piers house concerts, festivals, antiques fairs, and restaurants. When looking for a particular pier, note that those to the north of the Ferry Building have odd numbers and those to the south, even.

Earthquake! The Landfill Problem

Most of the Marina area, as well as most of the Financial District, was built on landfill. As time has proven, this was not such a good idea in a seismically active zone.

When the Loma Prieta earthquake struck at 5:04pm on October 17, 1989, all such landfill liquefied, gas mains fractured, and several Marina homes slid off their foundations. Buildings that withstand best are those built on bedrock, which includes most of the inland areas of the city.

6 Fort Mason Center

Formerly a military base established during the Civil War, some of the army buildings have been devoted to cultural programs of all kinds since 1976. Some 50 organizations now call it home, including museums, art galleries, theaters, shops, festivals, fairs, and performance spaces, as well as libraries and various institutes. Some of the most prominent are the Museum of Craft and Folk Art and the Museo Italo-American (see p42), the San Francisco African-American Historical and Cultural Society, the Children's Art Theater, the Magic Theater (see p57), and Herbst Pavilion. The city's finest vegetarian restaurant, Greens, is also located here, enjoying unique views of the Bay and Golden Gate (see p97). ☎ Map F1

7 Marina District

This is a pleasant, upmarket zone, featuring bars and trendy boutiques along Chestnut Street. Marina Green is a vast lawn where locals love to jog, skate, fly kites, picnic, or walk their dogs. At the tip of the break-water that protects the Marina, you can tune in to the bizarre

View of the Marina District

sounds of the Wave Organ, an instrumental structure of underwater pipes through which the tides slosh in a vaguely musical fashion. ☎ Map E1

8 Palace of Fine Arts and the Exploratorium

The sole survivor – with a lot of help from restorers – of the many fantasy monuments built for the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition, the Neo-Classical Palace was an Expo' centerpiece. The dome of the rotunda is supported by a classical frieze and an octagonal arcade, which is set off by a landscaped lagoon and flanked by an open peristyle of Corinthian columns (see p46). Behind it is the Exploratorium, one of the world's first hands-on science museums. It boasts over 650 exhibits, divided into a dozen subject areas, such as Motion, Climate, Vision, Color and Light, and Sound (see p58). ☎ 3601 Lyon St • Map E1 • (415) EXP-LORE; general info. (415) 561-0360 • Open 10am–5pm Tue–Sun • Adm • www.exploratorium.edu

9 Crissy Field

Originally marshland and dunes, the field was filled in for the 1915 Pan-Pacific Exposition and paved over entirely for use as an airfield by the army from 1919–36. With the establishment of the Presidio as a national park under the supervision of the city, a massive restoration project has now returned part of Crissy Field to wetlands and the rest to lawns, pathways, and picnic areas. The city's 100-acre "Front Yard" is one of the prime viewing sites for the July 4 fireworks displays, while the Golden Gate Promenade is a 3-mile (5-km) paved pathway that runs through this district from Aquatic Park to Fort Point. 🗺️ Map D1

10 The Presidio

This beautiful wooded corner of the city has stunning views over the Golden Gate, but from 1776 until 1994 it was owned and occupied by first the Spanish, then the Mexican, and finally, the US armies, and almost entirely off-limits to anyone else. It is now a major part of the Golden Gate National Recreational Area. It is a spectacular park, full of nature trails, streams, forests, drives, and historic structures. In 2005 filmmaker George Lucas installed his production company, LucasFilm, here, creating a $350-million headquarters. Also here is the Walt Disney Family Museum, which provides insight into the life of Walt Disney through photographs, animation, and an impressive range of interactive exhibits (see p48). 🗺️ Map D2

Presidio Officers' Club, The Presidio

A Bike Ride through the Presidio

Beginning at the Visitor Information Center, where you can pick up an excellent map, first explore the Main Post. Here you can ride around the Parade Ground, see the Presidio's earliest surviving buildings, dating from the 1860s, as well as 18th-century Spanish adobe wall fragments in the former Officers' Club.

Exit the area on Sheridan, which takes you past the Spanish Colonial Revival-style Golden Gate Club, and turn left onto Lincoln, which winds around the National Military Cemetery. Turn right on McDowell; on the left you see the Colonial Revival Cavalry Barracks. The African-American "Buffalo Soldiers" were stationed here from 1902 to 1904.

Now go past the five brick Stables, off to both the left and the right, and stop at the quirky Pet Cemetery on the left, where post guard dogs are buried, and also family pets. Next, head under Highway 101 to encounter Stilwell Hall, built in 1921 as enlisted barracks and a mess hall for the airmen; turn left to take in the metal Aero-drome Hangars from the same era; then proceed on and pause at Crissy Field to admire the views.

Double back at this point, take the next left down toward the Bay and join the Golden Gate Promenade all the way out to Fort Point where you can experience the Golden Gate Bridge (see pp8–9) and the crashing waves of the Pacific up close and personal.

For bike rentals See p134. The Presidio visitor center is currently located in Presidio Officers' Club, 50 Moraga Ave at Arguello Blvd.

Central Neighborhoods

AS WITH EVERY QUADRANT OF SAN FRANCISCO, diversity is the keynote here. This area encompasses the oldest money and the highest society of the city's founding families, as well as some of the poorest of citizens. It takes in the staunchest pillars of the politically savvy – though true conservatives are a rarity in this progressive city – as well as the wildest let-it-all-hang-out free-thinkers. Then, too, there's a considerable swathe of the comfortably middle-class who, like all San Franciscans, are simply intent on enjoying the beauties and pleasures of their great city.

1 Golden Gate Park

One of the largest, finest parks-cum-cultural centers in world. No visit to the city is complete without taking in some of its wonders (see pp20–23).

2 Union Street

A neighborhood shopping street loaded with tradition, Union Street is noted for its sidewalk cafés, bookstores, and designer boutiques, housed in converted Victorian charmers. The street is at the heart of the Cow Hollow neighborhood, whose name invokes its antecedent as a dairy pasture (see p51). Map E2

3 Pacific Heights

A grander, more exclusive residential area is hard to imagine. Commanding as it does heights up to 300 ft (100 m) overlooking the magnificent Bay, everything about it proclaims power and wealth. The blocks between Alta Plaza and Lafayette Park are the very heart of the area, but the grandeur extends from Gough to Divisadero and beyond. On a sunny day, there's nothing more exhilarating than scaling its hills and taking in the perfectly manicured streets, the

Typical house, Pacific Heights

to-die-for views, and the palatial dwellings. The Spreckels Mansion, a limestone palace in the Beaux-Arts tradition, on Washington and Octavia streets, is the brightest gem of the lot, now owned by novelist Danielle Steele (see p53). Map E2

4 Japantown

The Japan Center was built as part of an ambitious 1960s plan to revitalize the Fillmore District. Blocks of aging Victorians were demolished and replaced by the Geary Expressway and this Japanese-style shopping complex, with a five-tiered, 75-ft (22-m) Peace Pagoda at its heart. Taiko drummers perform here during the Cherry Blossom Festival each April (see p74). The extensive malls are lined with authentic Japanese shops and restaurants, plus an eight-screen cinema, and the Kabuki Springs and Spa. More shops and restaurants are found along the outdoor mall across Post Street. This neighborhood has been the focus of the Japanese community for some 75 years. Map F3

Positively Haight Street, Haight-Ashbury

5 Haight-Ashbury This anarchic quarter is one of the most scintillating and unconventional in the city, resting firmly on its laurels as ground zero for the worldwide Flower-Power explosion of the 1960s (see p55). Admire the beautiful old Queen Anne-style houses, a few of them still painted in the psychedelic pigments of that hippie era. There are still some tripping freaks and neo-Flower Children here, along with far-out shops and the venerable Haight Ashbury Free Clinic. Groove along the street and recreate your own “Summer of Love.” The Lower Haight is noted for its edgy clubs and bars. 📍 Map D4

Flower Power

In 1967 San Francisco witnessed the Summer of Love, including a 75,000-strong Human Be-In at Golden Gate Park. People were drawn here – many with flowers in their hair – by the acid-driven melodies of Jefferson Airplane, Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, and The Doors. Love was free, concerts were free, drugs were free, even food and healthcare were free. Soon, however, public alarm, and too many bad trips, caused the bubble to burst.

6 Hayes Valley Rising like a phoenix from the ashes of racial unrest in what used to be a very rundown African-American slum, this small area has now become one of San Francisco’s hipper shopping and dining districts. The dismantling of an ugly freeway overpass following the 1989 earthquake helped turn the tide, and the welcome result is a chic area that hasn’t lost its edge. Hayes Valley festivals take place at midsummer, when the area’s streets are thronged with revelers. 📍 Map F4

7 Geary Boulevard One of the city’s main traffic arteries, sweeping from Van Ness all the way out to Cliff House, is a typically unprepossessing urban thoroughfare, but functional. It begins its journey at Market Street, sweeps past Union Square, and then forms the heart of the Theater District, before venturing into the notorious Tenderloin, home to seedy clubs and sex-workers. After it crosses Van Ness, it zips past Japantown and the funky Fillmore District. Soon you’re in the Richmond District and before you know it, there’s the Pacific Ocean. 📍 Map F3

8 Presidio Heights Originally part of the “Great Sand Waste” to the west, this neighborhood is now one of the most elite. The zone centers on Sacramento Street as its discreet shopping area. It’s worth a stroll, primarily for the architecture. Of interest are the Swedenborgian Church at 2107 Lyon Street, the Roos House at 3500 Jackson Street, and Temple Emanu-El at 2 Lake Street. 📍 Map D3

9 Western Addition

This area, too, was once sandy waste, but after World War II the district became populated by Southern African-Americans who came west for work. For a short time, it was famous for jazz and blues clubs, as embodied, until his death in 2001, by John Lee Hooker and his Boom Boom Room. Today, it is still largely African-American in character and rather rundown, although it does comprise architecturally odd St Mary's Cathedral (see p44) and photogenic Alamo Square (see p49).  Map E3

10 The Richmond District

This flat district of row houses begins at Masonic Street, sandwiched between Golden Gate Park and California Street. It ultimately extends all the way to the Pacific Ocean, being more and more prone to stay fog-bound the farther west you go. The district is very ethnically diverse and generally middle class. Over the decades, it has been settled by White Russians, East European Jews, and latterly Chinese-Americans and another wave of Russians.

A Hippie Tour of Haight-Ashbury

 Begin at Alamo Square (see p49), with the Westerfield House at 1998 Fulton at Scott, former residence of Ken Kesey, the writer and visionary who arguably got the whole 1960s movement going. Walk up Scott, turn right on Page and go to No. 1090, where Big Brother and the Holding Company got their start. A block and a half farther on, go right on Lyon to No. 112, where Janis Joplin lived for most of 1967 (see p55).

Continue on to the Panhandle, an extension of Golden Gate Park, where in June 1967 the Jimi Hendrix Experience gave a free concert. Now turn left on Central and head up to steep Buena Vista Park (see p49), site of public Love-Ins in the 1960s and 1970s. Turn Right on Haight and check out Positively Haight Street, 1400 Haight Street at Masonic, one of the fanciest hippie shops.

 Continue on to the famous Haight-Ashbury intersection and walk along Haight to Clayton; at No. 558 is the much-loved Haight Ashbury Free Clinic, still imbued with the spirit of the 1960s. Savor a well-earned cappuccino and snack at the People's Cafe (see p105).

 Refreshed, walk towards the park, turn Right on Stanyan all the way to Fulton. At 2400 Fulton stands the former Jefferson Airplane Mansion, which used to be painted black. Finally, head back to Golden Gate Park (see pp20–23) and make your way to Hippie Hill to groove to the tribal drums.

Southern Neighborhoods

THE SOUTHERN PART OF THE CITY comprises some of the liveliest, most authentic parts of town – the clubs of SoMa, the gay world of the Castro, and the Latino Mission District. There are also some up-and-coming neighborhoods such as Bernal Heights and Glen Park, as the more central areas have priced creative types out toward the southern borders. Laid-back Noe Valley was the first such choice for high-rent refugees, but it, too, has gone gentrified and pushed people farther south.

1 San Francisco Museum of Modern Art

San Francisco's home for its extensive modern art collection is as impressive outside as it is adaptable and awe-inspiring inside. Don't miss the top floors, featuring the latest media, art, and digital installations, and the large-scale sculpture in the rooftop garden, which opened in May 2009 (see pp26–9).

2 Mission Dolores

The original Spanish Misión San Francisco de Asós, from which the city takes its name, is a marvel of preservation and atmospheric charm. It was founded in 1776, just a few weeks before the Declaration of Independence (see pp30–31).

3 Castro District

This hilly neighborhood around Castro Street is the center of San Francisco's high-profile gay community. The intersection of Castro and 18th Streets is the self-proclaimed "Gayest Four Corners of the World," and this openly homosexual nexus emerged in the 1970s as the place of pilgrimage for gays and lesbians from all over the country and the world. Unlike other cities, where homosexuals once hid themselves away in dark corners of anonymous bars, the establishments here have full-picture windows right on the street and are busy at all hours. Castro Street is closed off every Hallowe'en for the famous gay costume party and parade that most agree is one of the city's best, second only perhaps to the Gay Pride Parade (see p75). Map E5

4 Twin Peaks

These two hills were first known in Spanish as El Pecho de la Chola, or "The Bosom of the Indian Girl." At the top, there is an area of parkland with steep and grassy slopes from which you can enjoy incomparable views of the whole of San Francisco. Twin Peaks Boulevard circles both hills near their summits, and there is plenty of parking near the viewing point. If you're up to the climb, take the footpath to the top, above the main viewing area, to get a 360-degree panorama. The residential districts on the slopes lower down have curving streets that follow the contours of the hills, rather than the formal grid pattern that predominates in most of the city (see p60). Map E6

Castro Theater, Castro District

5 Noe Valley Once a simple working-class neighborhood, the 1970s brought hippies, gays, artists, and other Bohemian types to its slopes and it soon became an attractive alternative to other, more established quarters. In its heyday it was known as both “Nowhere Valley” for its relative remoteness, and as “Granola Valley” for its nature-loving denizens. Lately, it has been taken over by middle-class professionals, who value the area for its orderliness, but 24th Street still hums with activity and is lined with cafés, bookstores, and the occasional oddball shop. 📍 Map E6

6 Mission District The teeming Hispanic world, with all the accompanying noise and confusion, constitutes the Mission, home to San Francisco’s many Latinos. They have brought their culture with them – bustling taquerias, salsa clubs, Santeria shops, lively murals, and Spanish everywhere you look and listen. It’s a loud, odoriferous place, with edgy crowds dodging each other along the main drags, Mission and Valencia streets and their connecting streets from Market to Cesar Chavez (Army). Its folklórico festivals are not to be missed, especially the Carnaval (see p74). 📍 Map F5

A Gay City

After the free-love movement of the 1960s (see p100), homosexuals realized that they, too, had rights to stand up for, and started moving into the Castro in the 1970s. In no time the neighborhood was a non-stop – and unstoppable – party of freewheeling sexual excess. Suddenly gays were “out” in legions, which brought with it political clout. Despite the AIDS plague, the city is still one of the easiest places in the world to live out an openly gay identity.

7 South of Market The city’s erstwhile rough-and-tumble warehouse district has been on the rise for the last few decades and continues to attract arty types as well as a whole range of clubs and cool cafés. Plans are afoot for more major transformations in the wake of the building of AT&T Park (see p29). 📍 Map R4

8 Yerba Buena Center This area is fast becoming one of San Francisco’s leading cultural centers for the performing arts, as well as a growing number of museums representing the city’s ethnic diversity. Every year sees some new addition to the airy complex (see pp28–9).

9 China Basin This old shipping port has not been exempt from the upsurge of interest in the previously neglected industrial area. The main change has been wrought by the building of the AT&T Park, home to the city’s major league baseball team, the San Francisco Giants, and developers have already put forth ideas of how the zone can be put to use. A number of restaurants, bars, and clubs, many with port views, have opened up here or have been refurbished and gentrified.

📍 Map H4

10 Potrero Hill

At one time this usually sunny SoMa hill was set to become the next big thing. But somehow its isolation kept that from ever happening, cut off from the rest of the city, as it is, by freeways on three sides and its own precipitous inclines. Consequently, it has remained the quiet, pleasant neighborhood it always has been, with spectacular views. To be sure, a few more upmarket concerns are located here than before, and there are more restaurants and bars, but mostly it's thoroughly residential. One tourist sight of note here is the Anchor Brewing Company. It's worth a visit, especially as the 45-minute walking tour and tasting session are free. There are only two tours each weekday; you must phone to book. 📍 Map H5 • Anchor Brewing Co.: 1705 Mariposa St; Map H5 • (415) 863-8350 • www.anchorbrewing.com

A Walk Around the Castro District

📍 Begin at the city's gay mecca, the Church Street Muni Station on Upper Market. Decades ago, this corner developed a gay identity as the beginning point of the Castro neighborhood, but it is on the next block, between Sanchez and Noe, that the gay shops and venues really begin to proliferate.

📍 The Café Flore (see p65) stands out as one of the premier gay hotspots for a drink, a meal, or just a gaze at the constant flow of fascinating clientele. Towards the corner of Castro is The Cafe at 2367 Market, offering a range of strong drinks accompanied by top 40 mixes to a trendy gay crowd.

Continuing on to Castro Street, take in Harvey Milk Plaza, with its huge rainbow flag, named after the slain gay leader (see p39). On the opposite corner, check out Twin Peaks (see p68) at 401 Castro, the oldest totally "out" gay bar, notable for its picture windows affording a full view of goings on, both inside and on the street.

Pushing on to No. 429, allow the Castro Theater to capture your attention, one of the city's most ornate cinema palaces, home to innumerable premieres of gay-themed films. Farther along at No. 489, A Different Light Bookstore (see p110) offers virtually every gay-themed book, magazine, and newspaper in the world.

📍 Finally, just up 18th Street at No. 4121 is Badlands (see p69), a cruisy pickup scene that packs them in, especially after 10pm.

Oceanfront

AS WITH EVERY SEGMENT OF THIS CITY, the area that faces the Pacific Ocean is a study in contrasts. Surprisingly to many, it contains terrains of natural beauty that are just as untamed and craggy as they always have been, particularly the rocky, windswept micro-climates that make up the cliffs and hidden ravines of Land's End. This has been the scene of innumerable shipwrecks throughout the city's history. Yet, just a few blocks away is Sea Cliff, one of the most exclusive residential neighborhoods in town. All up and down the area, beside blocks and blocks of tract homes, there are numerous parks and recreational possibilities, including, of course, surfing, if you're skilled and brave enough to face the unpredictable, freezing waters of the Pacific. Of all San Francisco's areas, this is the place where you're almost certain to encounter the city's infamous fog, but if the weather is clear there are great views of the offshore Seal Rocks and even the Farallon Islands. Further south, more activities can be enjoyed at Lake Merced.

1 Cliff House

Built in 1909, the present structure is the third on this site and was renovated in 2004. Its predecessor, a massively elaborate eight-story Victorian-Gothic castle that burned down in 1907, was built by the flamboyant entrepreneur Adolph Sutro (his estate overlooking Cliff House is now Sutro Heights Park). Cliff House has restaurants on the upper levels, observation decks overlooking the Pacific Ocean, a wing containing two bars, a visitors' center, and the Camera Obscura which gives a close-up view of Seal Rocks. ## 2 Ocean Beach

Most of San Francisco's western boundary is defined by this broad sweep of sand. Although sublime when viewed from Cliff House or Sutro Heights, the beach is dangerous for swimming due to its icy waters, rough shore breakers, and, most of all, rip currents that are powerful enough to drag even strong swimmers out to sea. Nevertheless, hardy surfers in thick wetsuits are a common sight, and in fine weather sunbathers and picnickers materialize. The Great Hwy • Map A4

3 Legion of Honor

The creation of Alma Bretteville Spreckels, heiress to the Spreckels sugar fortune, this museum is a replica of the Palais de la Légion d'Honneur in Paris. The original temporary structure was built for the 1915 Pan-Pacific Exposition to house French art, but Mrs Spreckels wanted to build a permanent version and employed the same architect

she commissioned to build her mansion in Pacific Heights (see p99). It opened in 1924 and features a collection of medieval to 20th-century European art, with paintings by Monet and Rembrandt. Also hosts excellent traveling exhibitions. Lincoln Park, 34th Ave & Clement St • www.thinker.org

4 Oceanfront Parks

Lincoln Park, Land's End, and Sutro Heights Park are large green areas that overlook and hug the coast all along this northwestern corner of the peninsula. Stupendous Lincoln Park is the work of the indefatigable John McClaren (see p21), and features coastal trails affording some of the best views of the Golden Gate Bridge. Land's End is a surprisingly rugged and wild stretch along the coastal cliffs that features a stony, picturesque cove, stretches of broad sand, and truly spectacular hiking. Gardens, statuary, and walls of the old Sutro estate still decorate Sutro Heights Park, dominating the entire coastal scene from its dramatic vantage point. Map A3

Land's End

Seal Rocks

5 Seal Rocks The westernmost promontory on this tip of the peninsula is Point Lobos, the projection that forms Land’s End’s rocky cove. Along to the south from here down to Cliff House is a scattering of small, rocky islands frequented by seals – hence the name. Bring binoculars to spy on the seals and birds in their natural habitat. At night, from the beach or Cliff House promenade, the barking of the sea lions – like the keening of the foghorns – is both reassuring and eerie, and so very “San Francisco.” On a clear day, 32 miles (50 km) off the coast, you can see the Farallon Islands, also inhabited by sea lions and with a state-protected rookery. 📍 Map A3

Cliff House and the Sutro Baths

Adolph Sutro came to San Francisco from Prussia in 1851, aged 21 and looking for gold. Instead, he became the Silver King of the Comstock Lode (Nevada), and brought his riches back to the city to invest them in land. His projects included building the first Cliff House, the popular Sutro Baths, and his own lavish estate. In the process, he transformed the Ocean Beach area into a recreational gem. The legacy lives on, despite the disappearance of all three of the famous buildings he constructed.

6 San Francisco Zoo San Francisco Zoo is at the far southwest corner of the city, between the Pacific Ocean and Lake Merced. The complex is home to more than 1,000 species of birds, mammals, and insects, among which 20 are considered to be endangered – most notably the snow leopard, Bengal tiger, and jaguar. Gorilla World, Koala Crossing, and Children’s Zoo are particular hits, as are the feeding times for the grizzly bears (11am daily) and the penguins (2:30pm daily). Summer brings a busy program of extra activities in the Children’s Zoo. 📍 Sloat Blvd at Pacific Ocean • www.sfzoo.org • Buses 18 & 23 • Open 10am–5pm daily • (415) 753-7080 • Dis. access • Adm

7 Sigmund Stern Grove This 63-acre ravine in the southern Sunset District is the site of the nation’s original free summer arts festival, endowed in 1938 and still in operation. The Sunday programs may include classical music performed by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, opera, jazz, popular music, or productions by the San Francisco Ballet. The natural amphitheater is in a eucalyptus and redwood grove. 📍 Sloat Blvd at 19th Ave, Sunset • (415) 252-6252

8 Sea Cliff Actor Robin Williams, a San Francisco native, has a home in this elite residential enclave, which stands in stark contrast to the natural coastal area all around it. Most of the luxurious homes are Mediterranean in style and date from the 1920s. Just below the neighborhood, China Beach – named after poor Chinese fishermen who used to camp here – is one of the safest beaches in the city for swimming and is equipped with showers and other facilities. Baker Beach, just to the north, is another popular beach (see p76). Map C2

9 Sunset District

Like its counterpart, the Richmond District (see p101), this neighborhood was part of the Outer Lands and is purely residential, consisting of row upon row of neat, look-alike houses. Yet, like the entire area along the ocean, this district is subject to a great deal of gray weather. Its one claim to fame is Sutro Tower, the pronged red-and-white television antenna that resembles something out of a science fiction movie. Between Sloat Blvd & Golden Gate Park and Stryan St & the Pacific Ocean • Map C5

10 Lake Merced

Located at the beginning of scenic Skyline Boulevard, this attractive lake, set amid verdant hills, extends across the southern end of the Sunset District. Relatively undeveloped and certainly under-used, it nevertheless gets its share of recreation enthusiasts. They come for the municipal Harding Park 18-hole Golf Course, and the biking and running trails that circle the lake's green shoreline. Hwy 35

A Two-Hour Hike Around Land's End

This section of the coast is amazingly wild, especially considering that it is actually within the city limits. Note that portions of the hike are very rugged, so dress accordingly, with good footwear.

Begin at the far end of the Merrie Way parking lot and take the steps down. Follow the trail that passes by the Sutro Baths ruins (see p39), to your left as you descend. Continue on along to the Overlook, from which you can take in Seal Rocks and much of the Pacific panorama.

Now double back a bit to pick up the trail that continues along the coast. You will see the remains of concrete military bunkers, which have been broken and tilted by the unstable land, and now decorated with graffiti. Soon you come to a beach below rocky cliffs; note that the surging water is very unpredictable here, so be very attentive. Continue walking and you will arrive at Land's End Cove, where a makeshift beach, using rock walls as windbreakers, is popular with nudists.

Next, climb up one of the sets of wooden steps to join the path up above and continue on around the bend, where you will be greeted with a stunning view of the Golden Gate Bridge (see pp8–9). Keep going all the way to Eagle's Point and return by way of the higher trail that winds through Lincoln Park (see p73).

For a meal after your hike visit Cliff House (see p121).

The Bay Area

IN LOCAL PARLANCE, THE BAY AREA breaks down into The City, the East Bay, Marin, the Peninsula, and the South Bay. Although technically Santa Clara and San Jose – and certainly Santa Cruz and Capitola – do not touch the waters of the Bay, psychologically they still embody the same liberal, open-minded ethos that so defines this area. This is probably because the dominant mentality of this swatch of Northern California is so definably different from those of Southern California and the Central Valley. In towns such as Berkeley, Mill Valley, and Stanford the emphasis is on progressive thinking; smaller enclaves such as Bolinas are determined to live life in harmony with the breathtaking nature all around them.

1 Berkeley

Its days as “Berzerkly,” when student protesters and tear-gas clouds filled the streets in the 1960s, are only a fading memory now, although Telegraph Avenue still keeps some of the counter-cultural traditions alive. A great university, “Cal’s” faculty boasts some dozen Nobel Laureates, while beautiful parks, tree-lined streets, and unique shops typify this East Bay enclave. Berkeley continues to give more “power to the people” than any other US city, with a host of public services that puts other communities to shame. 📍 BART Berkeley

2 Oakland

Gertrude Stein’s famous dictum about her home town, that “there is no there there,” was challenged by a very proactive mayor, Jerry Brown, from 1997 to 2007 (see p39). Oakland’s image, notorious for racial unrest and crime in the past, is being cleaned up to present a more visitor-friendly face, and there has been an influx of creative types who have moved here to flee the high rents of San Francisco. Oakland’s attractions include huge Lake Merritt, which offers a range of recreational possibilities, a beautiful Mormon temple, and its Museum of California (see p126). 📍 BART 12th St

3 Marin County Headlands

To visit these raw, wild hills with astonishingly beautiful views is to enter another world; yet it’s only half an hour’s drive away, by way of the Golden Gate Bridge. The scale of the rolling terrain is immense, and the precipitous drops into the ocean dramatic. This is an unspoiled area of windswept ridges, sheltered valleys, and deserted beaches (see p76). 📍 Muni Bus 76

4 Sausalito

A former fishing community and now an upscale commuter area and tourist haven, this small town offers spectacular views of the city from its Bridgeway Avenue promenade. Historically, it has been an artists’ town, with an eccentric mix of residents (see p54). Bungalows cling to the hillsides and boats fill the picturesque marinas, many of them houseboats that locals live in year-round. Excellent restaurants, accommodations, and some unique shopping possibilities, too. 📍 US 101

Marina, Sausalito

From Sausalito, the Call of the Sea is a tall-ship that sails on the Bay. Call (415) 331-3214 or look at www.callofthesea.org for details.

Great Bay Area Universities

Palo Alto's Stanford University is the Bay Area's most famous private institution of higher learning, inaugurated in 1891. However, in terms of intellectual clout, the University of California at Berkeley, the oldest campus in the California system, stands shoulder to shoulder, considering the number of Nobel Laureates on the faculty and its international importance. Stanford is known for business, law, and medicine, Berkeley for law, engineering, and nuclear physics. Both universities are among the most selective in the country.

5 Mill Valley

Home to a well-known film festival, but perhaps more famous as the quintessential Marin hometown. It's wealthy, relaxed, and beautiful, and the well-educated populace is given to progressively liberal views on just about every topic. The old part of town is flanked by wonderful stands of redwoods, lined with old buildings that house restaurants and unusual shops, and the whole centers around an eternally pleasant public square where people come to hang out. 📍 Off Hwy 101

6 Mount Tamalpais

No more breathtaking view exists than that from the summit of mystic "Mount Tam," sacred to the Native Americans who once lived here. At 2,570 ft (785-m) high, those who hike up to the summit can take in practically the entire Bay Area at a glance. The area all around is a state park, a wilderness nature preserve with more than 200 miles (320 km) of trails that wind through redwood groves and alongside creeks. There are picnic areas, campsites, and meadows for kite flying. The steep, rough tracks here gave rise to the invention of the mountain bike. 📍 Hwy 1

Greek Theater, Mount Tamalpais

7 Stinson Beach

Since the early days of the 20th century, this has been a popular vacation spot; the first visitors came on ferries from San Francisco and were met by horse-drawn carriages. Stinson remains the preferred swimming beach for the whole area (see p76), and nearby Seadrift is an upscale community of second or third homes of the wealthy. The stretch of soft sand here and the spectacular sunsets set off the quaint village, with its good restaurants and interesting shops. You can reach it via the coast route, but the drive up and over Highway 1 provides the most dramatic arrival, affording inspiring views as you exit the forest onto the bare headlands. 📍 Hwy 1

8 Bolinas

The next community up from Stinson is a hippie artists' village that time forgot. Intensely private, the citizens regularly take down all road signs indicating the way to their special place to keep visitors from finding them. Potters and other craftspeople sell their wares in the funky gallery, organic produce and vegetarianism are the rule, and 1960s idealism still predominates. 📍 Hwy 1

9 Palo Alto and Stanford
An erstwhile sleepy university town, Palo Alto has most recently experienced a boom as the hub of Silicon Valley, and driving force of the “New Economy.” Although a lot of the gilding has lately fallen off the lily, this town has been left with a considerably dressed-up appearance, as well as many fancy restaurants, hotels, and shops. The town is home to prestigious Stanford University, with its beautiful, well-tended campus (see p79). 📍 Hwys 101 & 82

10 Tiburon
Possibly Marin County’s smartest community, it stands as a less hectic alternative to Sausalito for its views and restaurants. Here, 100-year-old houseboats (“arks”) have been pulled ashore, lined up, and refurbished, forming what is called “Ark Row,” where you’ll find shops, restaurants, and sunny cafés that enhance the charm of this waterfront village. Tiburon also offers scenic parks along the shore, facing Angel Island and the city. 📍 Hwy 131

A Morning Walk Around Berkeley

📍 Begin at the University Visitor Center on Oxford St at the end of University Avenue, where you can pick up information and maps. Follow around to University Drive and on to the university campus, passing Romanesque Wellman Hall, then take a left on Cross Campus Road. Straight ahead is the main campus landmark, the 307-ft (94-m) Sather Tower, also known simply as the Campanile, based on the famous belltower in Venice’s Piazza San Marco.

Now continue on to rejoin University Drive and go around to the Hearst Greek Theater, venue for excellent concerts of all sorts. Next, head for handsome Sather Gate, which leads into Sproul Plaza, epicenter of the student Free Speech Movement protests that erupted into almost non-stop socio-political unrest in the 1960s and 1970s.

Exit the campus onto Telegraph Avenue, a kind of Haight-Ashbury East-Bay with radical vibes all its own. Cody’s, at the corner of Haste Street, is Berkeley’s most famous bookstore, and one block over is idealistic People’s Park. Continue on back to Bancroft Way to pay a visit to the excellent University Art Museum and the Pacific Film Archive.

TOP 10 Oakland Museum of CA Features

1 The Building

The museum building is an outstanding example of modern design. Opened in 1969, it is composed of reinforced concrete and consists of three levels of tiered terraces. To soften the angularity, roof gardens have been planted, accented with sculpture.

2 California Ecosystems

The Natural Science Gallery is located on the first level. It features "A Walk Across California," including a diorama of a Sacramento delta marsh showing fish, bird, and insect life, and another of a mountain lion and its prey, demonstrating nature's food chain.

3 The Earliest Californians

The Cowell Hall of California History on the second level traces early human history in the state, documented by basketry, stone tools, clothing, and rituals.

4 Mission-era Artifacts

An 18th-century icon of St Jerome is just one remnant of the Spanish Mission years. You'll also find early colonial tools, and a section of adobe wall.

5 Gold Rush Artifacts

"Immigrants and Settlers" and "Adventurers and Gold-seekers" chronicle the lives of those who came to California from all over the world in the 19th century, hoping to strike it rich. You'll see gold prospecting tools.

6 Earthquake Artifacts

A collection of objects that pertain to the 1906 earthquake are on display here, including porcelain cups and saucers fused by the heat of the fire that destroyed so much of the city.

7 Dream on Wheels

"Seekers, Innovators and Achievers" celebrates the "California Dream," in which the automobile played so large a part in the postwar boom. A drive-in restaurant sign, jukebox, and gleaming hot-rod capture the feel of the 1950s.

8 Art Gallery

The third level is devoted to the Gallery of California Art, featuring works by artists who have studied, lived, and worked here. Included are works by California Impressionists and members of the Bay Area Figurative movement. Check the website for details of the Art and History Galleries' opening times.

9 Photography Gallery

The Gallery of California Art also has a fine collection of the work of California photographers, including Ansel Adams, Edward Weston, and Dorothea Large.

10 California Crafts

The largest collection of decorative work, including murals and furniture, by California Arts and Crafts practitioners Arthur and Lucia Kleinhaus Mathews.

TOP 10 Planning Your Trip

1 Tourist Offices

Plenty of websites, representing the principal tourist agencies, tell you how to tackle the practical aspects of organizing a visit to San Francisco. Or they will send you materials by standard mail (see box).

2 Media

The city's daily and weekly newspapers – the weekly ones are free and super-abundant – are loaded with information about all the things going on in town. Perusing their websites will give you a head start on planning your trip.

☎ San Francisco Chronicle (daily): www.sfgate.com
 • San Francisco Bay Guardian (weekly): www.sfbg.com
 • SF Weekly: www.sfweekly.com • Bay Area Reporter (gay): www.ebar.com • San Francisco Frontiers (gay): www.frontiersweb.com

3 Internet

Any search for places, people, or events to do with San Francisco will turn up a plethora of finds, but two sites give a good overview and guidance. These are: www.sanfranciscocitysearch.com and www.baycityguide.com

4 Maps

San Francisco is very easy to find your way around, but study the general layout in advance. Free maps are available from tourist offices.

5 Visas

All travelers to the US need a valid passport, including returning US citizens. Most European citizens, as well as Japanese and a few others, need a non-refundable return ticket from outside the US to qualify for a 90-day visa. Travelers visiting under the Visa Waiver Program must register and pay a fee at <https://esta.cbp.dhs.gov>. Other nationalities must secure a visa, before traveling, from a US consulate or embassy.

6 Insurance

Buy a good travel insurance policy to cover lost baggage, canceled flights, and minor medical bills. The US generally does not have public healthcare so international health coverage is the wisest way to go.

7 US Embassies and Consulates

US diplomatic missions are found in virtually every country's capital. They can provide you with information about San Francisco, as well as answer questions about visa requirements.

☎ Australia: www.dfat.gov.au/missions • Canada: www.usembassycanada.gov • France: www.ambusa.fr • Germany: www.usembassy.de • Ireland: <http://dublin.usembassy.gov/> • New Zealand: <http://wellington.usembassy.gov/> • UK: www.usembassy.org.uk

8 When to Go

The nicest months are September and October. In summer, however, the coastal areas and the city tend to be blanketed in fog and points inland are blazing hot and dusty.

9 What to Take

Generally, San Franciscans dress casually. The best rule of thumb is to travel with as little as possible – if you're missing something, you can buy it.

10 How Long to Stay

Unless you are very unusual, you will fall in love with this city and want to stay as long as possible. A week should allow you to take in all the major sights; two weeks will leave enough time to explore the coast and the Wine Country.

TOP 10 Getting to San Francisco

1 San Francisco International Airport

Fifteen miles (24 km) south of the city and linked by two freeways and a host of inexpensive public transport options, including BART, and private shuttles, as well as taxis and limos, SFO is very conveniently located and efficiently run. The airport has three terminals, and the largest international terminal in the US. Information booths are located downstairs and are open from 8am to 1:30am.
 ☎ SFO: (650) 876-7809
 • www.flysfo.com

2 Oakland International Airport

The East Bay's major airport is only a bit farther away from the city, so it can be a handy alternative. There are fewer crowds and a choice of transport to get you back and forth.
 ☎ Oakland International Airport: (510) 577-4000
 • www.oaklandairport.com

3 San Jose International Airport

If your destination is more Silicon Valley than San Francisco, you've come to the right airport. It's 50 miles (80 km) south of the city but only 20 miles (32 km) south of Palo Alto. ☎ San Jose International Airport: (408) 277-4759 • www.sjc.org

4 Customs

You're allowed to bring in 1 liter of liquor and 200 cigarettes duty-free, and $100 worth of gifts. If you're carrying more than $10,000 in anything negotiable, you must declare the excess.

5 Left Luggage

SF International has lockers in all boarding areas that you can secure for up to 24 hours. For anything bigger or that you want to store for a longer time, go to the Luggage Storage in the upper-level passageway between the South and International Terminals.

6 Lost Property

Each airport has a Lost Property service. If you leave something on public transport, there are numbers for each system, and taxi companies will also try to locate your possessions.
 ☎ SF Property Control: 850 Bryant St; (415) 553-1377
 • Muni (415) 923-6164
 • BART (510) 464-7090

7 Greyhound

There are 10–12 buses every 24 hours from Los Angeles to San Francisco and vice versa. It takes 8–12 hours but is the cheapest option. Greyhounds also go all over the US, but, although low in dollars, you pay in time and discomfort.
 ☎ Transbay Terminal • 425 Mission St • (415) 495-1575
 • www.greyhound.com

8 Amtrak

The main Bay Area terminal for the US national railway system is in Oakland, offering a free shuttle bus to the city, stopping at the CalTrain station in the South of Market district and at the Ferry Building. The Coast Starlight route runs from Seattle down to Los Angeles daily, and vice versa. ☎ Amtrak: 1-800-872-7245
 • www.amtrak.com

9 Shuttles

One of the best ways to get from and to the airport is to use the shuttle services, some of which are door-to-door. You can pick them up on the upper level at SFO. When making the return trip, however, you'll need to book the door-to-door type. Others leave regularly from major hotels and pick-up spots.
 ☎ SFO Airporter: (415) 558-8500; www.supershuttle.com • Bayporter Express: 1-877-467-1800 or (415) 467-1800; www.bayporter.com

10 Taxis and Limousines

Taxis can be taken from the lower level of SFO, and a typical journey into the city will cost roughly $40, plus a standard 10 percent tip, and including a $2 surcharge for trips from the airport. Limousines are more costly and you will have to book in advance.

1 Cable Cars

Pure tourism, of course, but also one of the most enjoyable ways of getting around Downtown and Fisherman's Wharf. Pricy at $5 per ride, it becomes a bargain if you buy the CityPass ($64), which also gets you into many sights and is good for unlimited travel on the Muni transport system for a week from the time of first use. The Muni Passport can be used on the entire Muni system including cable cars.

2 Streetcars

The Muni Metro trams mostly run under Market Street and then make their way into the western neighborhoods. One line, the F, consists of vintage streetcars from around the world that decoratively traverse the Market Street circuit above ground.

3 Buses

To use Muni, you can either get the CityPass, or you can purchase Muni Passports for 1 day or 1 month, and for special events. The bus system is simple to use and will get you around this compact metropolis in good time, though rarely on schedule. Many bus stops have local bus route maps, as well as maps of the system as a whole. ☎ (415) 673-6864
• www.sfmta.com/cms/home/sfmta.sfmta

4 BART

The Bay Area Rapid Transit system (BART) serves a large arc of San Francisco and connects it very efficiently with the East Bay. A convenient line also runs non-stop to San Francisco International Airport (see p133). BART stations are underground and many are shared with Muni Metro stops. ☎ (415) 989-2278 • www.bart.gov

5 CalTrain

Since Peninsula residents voted against extending BART down south, this commuter train provides the most efficient public service to places such as Palo Alto and Stanford University (see p125). It is comfortable, punctual, and cheap. ☎ CalTrain Terminal: 4th St between Townsend & King • 1-800-660-4287
• www.caltrain.com

6 Ferries

The ferries provide wonderful, inexpensive excursions. The Blue & Gold Fleet serves Angel Island and Sausalito from Pier 41, and the East Bay and Tiburon from the Ferry Building. Alcatraz Cruises serves Alcatraz from Pier 33. Golden Gate Transit serves Sausalito and Larkspur from the Ferry Building. ☎ Blue & Gold Fleet: (415) 773-1188; www.blueandgoldfleet.com
• www.alcatrazcruises.com
• Golden Gate Transit Ferry Service: (415) 923-2000; www.goldengate.org

7 Taxis

Due to a very tight licensing system, San Francisco does not have enough taxis, despite the poor car-to-parking-spot ratio. You can usually snag one by lining up at a major hotel.

8 Car

Rent a car only if you want to head outside the city. Driving here can be challenging to the uninitiated, and it isn't necessary for getting around, given the decent public transportation. ☎ American Automobile Association: 150 Van Ness Ave; (415) 565-2711

9 Motorbike

Zippering up and down San Francisco's hills on a motorcycle or scooter can be great fun. It's also a fast, efficient way to get around town. The same driving and parking rules apply to motorbikes as to cars. ☎ Dubbelju Motorcycle Rentals: 271 Clara St, between 5th & 6th • (415) 495-2774
• www.dubbelju.com

10 Bicycle

Scenic routes have been designated. It's a great, healthy way to take in the wonderful sights and parks, and convenient given the city's small size. ☎ Bicycle Information Line: (415) 585-2453 • Blazing Saddles: Fisherman's Wharf; (415) 202-8888; www.blazingsaddles.com

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Don't Call it "Frisco"

Either say it all – "San Francisco" – or call it simply "The City." It's the name of a saint, after all, of whom San Franciscans are every bit as proud as they are of their city.

2 Driving Challenges

When you parallel park pointing up the hill, turn your wheels toward the center of the street; when pointing downhill, turn your wheels toward the sidewalk. That's the way to prevent runaway cars. If you are driving a manual shift rather than an automatic car, use your emergency brake when trying to start from a dead stop going up a steep hill – your mastery of the clutch under these extreme conditions may not be up to the job. The speed limit everywhere is 25mph (40kmph) or less, and all passengers must wear seat belts.

3 Underdressing

No matter how sunny it is when you go out in the morning, always take a jacket or a windbreaker. City weather is very variable and it will doubtless be cool, if not cold, damp or wet, by the time you return in the evening.

4 Unsafe Sex

For all its true sexual liberation, unsafe sex is always a no-no in this city that has seen all too clearly what can happen. AIDS and other STDs have been epidemic here. Use a condom.

5 Political Incorrectness

San Francisco is a city where diversity is embraced wholeheartedly, and supporting it is public policy. San Franciscans generally applaud differences of ethnicity, race, age, belief, gender, sexual orientation, and ability. Anyone who mocks or denigrates anyone else for any of these reasons has not understood what makes this city tick.

6 Smoking

California law makes smoking in any enclosed public place illegal – and that includes bars. Smelling cigarette smoke or even seeing someone smoking here is so rare as to be almost nonexistent. If you must light up, there are back patios at some clubs where smoking is allowed, and some hotels offer smoking rooms.

7 Panhandlers, Petty Crime and Mugging

San Francisco does have more than its share of homeless people, and many of them do resort to begging. For the most part, they are merely annoying, not dangerous. However, pick-pocketing and purse- and camera-snatching do exist, and it's also true that certain areas should be avoided after dark. However, normal attentiveness should be sufficient.

8 Bad Neighborhoods

Even the seediest neighborhoods are pretty safe in broad daylight, but they, and parks, should be sidestepped at night, when muggings are most likely. That said, there are very few areas that are really perilous within the city, and virtually none in areas that a tourist is likely to frequent.

9 Forgetting to Tip

Restaurant waiting staff depend on their tips to make a living – the salary paid is barely a tenth of what is needed to make ends meet. The usual gratuity is 15 percent, though you can reduce it to 10 percent if the service was not to your liking. Taxi drivers should be tipped about 15 percent, and hotel staff should receive $1 whenever they provide any sort of service.

10 Age Restrictions and ID

If you're over 21 but look younger, carry an ID with you showing your age if you want to try out some of the bars and clubs in town or want to drink alcohol in a restaurant or a shop. You must be over 18 to buy cigarettes.

Curbing your wheels when parking in the city is law-enforced – you will receive a fine if you fail to follow the practice.

TOP 10 Budget Tips

1 Discount Air Tickets

In these days of deregulation and airlines squeezing out travel agencies, finding bargain flights is anybody's game. Most people find that the best bet is the Internet, but don't fail to contact local and national discount shops, too.

2 Hotel Deals

Again, trawl the Internet and sound out your local agencies to see what sort of promotions might be out there. Many hotels offer some fantastic bargains at certain times of the year.

3 Fly-Drive Packages

This sort of offer is somewhat superfluous if your main purpose is to get to know the city and little else outside it. However, if you want to dive into the fruit of the vine in the Wine Country (see pp32-5) or into the waves of the blue Pacific Ocean in Santa Cruz, Monterey, and Carmel (see pp78-9), a car is a necessity. You may be able to negotiate a lower rate if you rent the car for only part of your stay.

4 Discount Coupons

The best discount coupon of them all is the CityPass (see p134), which saves you a bundle, especially on public transportation, if your stay is for about a week. It currently incorporates nine additional attractions, including admission to the Exploratorium (see p94), SFMOMA (see pp26-9), the California Academy of Sciences (see pp22-3), and more.

☎ www.citypass.com

5 Cheaper Sleeps

Hostels, regardless of your age, are an excellent alternative in San Francisco. There are two locations run by Hostel International, one in Downtown and the other between Fisherman's Wharf and the Marina. For budget beds also check www.airbnb.com (see also p148). ☎ American Youth Hostels: (415) 863-1444

• www.norcalhostels.org

6 Cheaper Eateries

San Francisco has an amazing number of low-priced joints that often serve wonderful food. At some of the Mexican places in the Mission, for example, you can still fill up on delicious burritos, tacos, and the like, for under $5. Chinese restaurants are also usually good value.

7 Picnics

With so many clean, beautiful parks, having a picnic lunch is always a delightful option. There are plenty of deli-supermarkets, such as the Real Food Company and the California

Harvest Ranch Market, which carry a fantastic selection of gourmet delectables. ☎ Real Food Company: 3939 24th St, 1001 Stanyan St, 2140 Polk St & 3060 Fillmore St

• California Harvest Ranch Market: 2285 Market St between Sanchez & Noe

8 Public Transport Passes

Muni offers 1-day, 1-month, and special event passes, all at great savings compared to paying $1.50 per ride on the buses and streetcars and $5 per ride on the cable cars (see p134).

9 Communications

Many services provide toll-free numbers when calling within the US from any phone – most of them begin with 800, 877, or 888. Buying phone cards to use for making toll calls can mean great savings. Internet access is free at the New Main Library and at CompUSA. ☎ New Main Library: 100 Larkin St; (415) 557-4400; www.sfpulib.ca.us • CompUSA: 750 Market St; (415) 391-9778

10 Laundromats

Since so many San Franciscans are apartment dwellers, nearly every block has a cheap laundromat handy. Wash cycles run about 15-20 minutes and dryers 20-30 minutes. Watch your things, however, since theft is not unknown.

TOP 10 Special Needs Tips

1 Unlimited Free Parking

Nowhere provides more advanced facilities for the disabled than San Francisco. There are specially marked reserved spots for disabled parking, usually with a blue-and-white wheelchair sign and a blue curb. Often there's a blue-and-white wheelchair stenciled on the pavement, too. There's no charge for parking, either in these spaces or any other, as long as you display a disabled placard. ☎ Department of Motor Vehicles • 1377 Fell Street • (800) 777-0133

2 Special Prices

In addition to free parking for the disabled, all Bay Area transit companies offer discounted fares for disabled passengers, including BART, Muni, AC Transit, and Golden Gate Transit. National parks issue special passes for the disabled that entitle them and passengers in the same vehicle to enter free. In addition, many attractions offer reduced entrance fees to the disabled. ☎ BART Passes Office • (510) 464-7133

3 Required Accessibility

The San Francisco Convention and Visitors Bureau (see p132) publishes a free guide that indicates which hotels comply with the American Disabilities Act.

However, if you want to know the specifics, you should call in advance and ask a few pointed questions. In general, the newer the hotel, the more it is geared up to meet special needs.

4 "Kneeling" Buses

Only some of the Muni city buses have this feature, whereby the bus can be hydraulically lowered, allowing wheelchair-bound people to board, and then be secured in a special part of the bus. The "Muni Access Guide" will give you pointers on how to make the most of the system, and it is free from Muni Accessible Services.

5 Ramped Curbs

Wherever you go, all over town you will find that all the sidewalks have been provided with ramped access, at least at intersections, if not for every driveway as well. Ramped access is also standard for every major public building, including museums, concert halls, big hotels, government buildings, even ferries.

6 Accessible Toilets

Disabled-accessible toilets are provided in many places, including hotels and restaurants, attractions, and municipal areas. Some are inside the buildings, but there are also a number on the street – they are the green kiosks that you can find at Pier 39, at Castro and Market Streets, and at the Civic Center, for example.

7 Independent Living Resource Center

This organization can provide every sort of information you might need about services for travelers with mobility problems, as well as for those with developmental disabilities. ☎ 649 Mission St • (415) 543-6222 • www.ilrcsf.org

8 Braille Institute

This volunteer organization provides information about accommodations, museums, and other attractions that offer Braille placards and postings. ☎ 1-800-272-4553 • www.brailleinstitute.org

9 Crisis Line for the Handicapped

A 24-hour hotline for persons who have disabilities or their helpers. It provides on-the-spot advice on any subject that might come up during a visit to the city. ☎ 1-800-426-4263

10 Muni Accessible Services

If you have any questions about public transportation in the city, this is the number to call. This is also the place to obtain your disabled discount card. ☎ (415) 923-6142 • www.sfmuni.com

TOP 10 Banking and Communications

1 Exchange

Exchange offices are found at San Francisco International Airport (see p133), in some Downtown banks, and at American Express and Thomas Cook agencies. However, fees and bad rates of exchange are the norm. It's better to avoid the problem altogether by using ATM machines.

2 ATM Machines

For virtually all travel purposes, this is by far the best way to get cash, either through your home checking account or by securing a PIN number to use with your credit card. The rate of exchange is generally the best for that day, and the small fees charged by the banks are less than those charged by exchange offices. Best of all, you don't have to wait in long lines or carry ID.

3 Credit Cards

Paying with plastic is a way of life in the US. Use cash for small items, but pay for everything else with a credit card, if possible. Most hotels require a credit card number to book a room, and an imprint of one upon checking in. And you will not be able to rent a car without one. If your card is lost or stolen, call the toll-free number of your company and you will not be responsible for any further charges made.

4 Travelers' Checks

Nowadays these are more of a nuisance than a convenience. Cashing them in banks and exchange offices can be a time-consuming hassle. However, if you buy them in dollars, they're the same as cash and can be used for goods and services of any sort – but you may need photo ID.

5 US Currency

US banknotes can be confusing because they're all the same size and color. They come in denominations of $1, $5, $20, $50, and $100, each with a different Founding Father or US president pictured. The coins are easier, being different from each other. The 1-cent coin (or penny) is copper-colored; the 5-cent coin (nickel) is nickel-colored; the 10-cent coin (dime) and the larger 25-cent coin (quarter) are silver-colored.

6 Post Offices

Most US post offices are open from 9am to 5:30pm Monday to Friday and 9am to 2pm on Saturdays. Stamps can be purchased here, from some hotels, and from vending machines. If you need to mail something other than postcards and letters, wait in line at the nearest post office. Otherwise, drop your stamped mail off at the hotel desk or in any street mailbox.

7 Telephones

San Francisco's area code is 415, but neighboring localities have other codes. If you are calling from within the same area, you do not dial the area code; conversely, if you are calling from outside the area, you must dial the area code and precede it with a "1." From pay phones, calls cost 50 cents and up. Toll-free numbers start with 800, 877, 888, or several new similar prefixes. For directory information, dial 411. International calls should be preceded by 011.

8 Voice Mail

The use of this service has reached epidemic proportions in the US, and you may find that you rarely, or never, rouse an actual person on the other end of many calls. Leave a message, with a call-back number, then hope for the best.

9 Internet

There are many cafés that offer internet services around town, usually from about $10 per hour.

10 Courier Services

FedEx, UPS, and DHL serve international needs, but you should also be aware that the US Post Office offers overnight delivery, both to major cities within the US and to selected cities abroad, and at much more reasonable costs.

TOP 10 Security and Health

1 Earthquake Procedures

Should an earthquake strike, stay calm. If you are indoors, a good spot to stand is under a doorframe. If driving, stay in your car and park in an open place, not under a bridge or viaduct. If outside, try to get to an open area. Major quakes are rare, but minor ones happen all the time and are mostly harmless.

2 Consulates

Most major countries have consulates in the city. If anything untoward occurs, contact your national representative.

3 Petty Crime

This sort of thing does exist, so it's best to avert the danger before it arrives by being aware of your surroundings. Don't walk into less than salubrious areas, especially after dark, unless you're sure of where you're going or you're in a group.

4 911

Dial this number whenever an emergency of any sort comes up. It's a free call from any phone. Be sure to have all the information ready – where you are and what has happened – so they know which service to send out to you.

5 AIDS

This virus is still very much a public health problem. Throughout the Bay Area there are ample free public health responses with a range of services, including free check-ups. Your part is not to take risks – use a condom. ☎ AIDS-HIV Nightline: (415) 434-2437 (English only) • California AIDS Foundation Hotline: 1-800-367-2437 or (415) 863-2437 (multilingual)

6 Helplines

7 Police Reports

If you are the victim of a crime of any sort, you should report it at your nearest police department. Especially if it involves the loss of money or any valuables, including credit cards, as you will need a copy of the police report in order to make a claim against your insurance.

8 Clinics

TOP 10 Shopping Tips

1 Department Stores

The big guns are all well represented in this city that loves looking good. Most of them are clustered around Union Square. The more upscale the department store, the more it feels like the exclusive parlor of some deluxe hotel, where you are the pampered guest. A very comfortable way to shop (see pp50–51).

2 Boutiques

The smaller shops generally feature more interesting and quirky merchandise – not counting all the international boutiques that also circle Union Square. Some of the more offbeat neighborhoods, such as Hayes Valley (see p100) and the Mission District, offer original designs, often by local or regional talents.

3 Malls

There are no real American-style malls in San Francisco. The ones that come closest are the San Francisco Shopping Center (see p51), the Westfield Shopping Center (see p51), and Stonestown Galleria (see p120). Others are in historic structures such as Ghirardelli and The Cannery (see pp12–13), or have architectural originality, such as the Embarcadero Center (see p50) and the Japan Center (see p99).

4 Flea Markets and Thrift Shops

This sort of shopping can net you some real treasures and keep your bank account intact, too. One of the most central flea markets is in Bernal Heights. Thrift shops are all over town – two of the best are located in the Mission, the Goodwill Store and the Salvation Army Thrift Store. Both offer everything from vintage clothing to miscellaneous junk.

☎ Alemany Flea Market: 100 Alemany Blvd at US 101, Bernal Heights
 • Goodwill Store: 1580 Mission St • Salvation Army Thrift Store: 1500 Valencia St

5 Garage and Sidewalk Sales

A thoroughly enjoyable custom that can unearth some surprising plunder in a city with so much style. To find a good garage sale, keep an eye out for announcements tacked to telephone poles, or take a weekend stroll in one of the likelier neighborhoods – such as the Haight, the Castro, and the Mission.

6 Bargaining

In established outlets bargaining is generally out of the question. However, in flea markets, garage sales, and some of the funkier ethnic stores, it is acceptable. Make a counter offer and haggle it down to a mutually satisfactory sum.

7 Sales Tax

In the US sales tax is added to your total bill, rather than included in the listed price, apart from groceries. In San Francisco, the sales tax is currently 8.5 percent, and hotel tax is 14 percent. However, tax varies from state to state.

8 Corner Stores

Every two blocks or so all around the city, except in the most exclusive neighborhoods, there are corner stores that sell a little bit of everything – some fresh produce, maybe some deli items, a few toiletry necessities, and general groceries. Just be aware that you may pay as much as 50 percent more for everything you buy in a corner store.

9 Refunds

If you have second thoughts about something you bought, you have a right to return it for a refund. If it is defective, you are entitled to a replacement or a refund.

TOP 10 Eating and Accommodation Tips

1 California Cuisine

With over 5,000 places to dine and/or drink in the city, you know that food is important to San Franciscans. It's a moot point whether so-called "fusion" cuisine got its start in the city some decades ago but it has certainly reached its apotheosis here – with all the international influences, it was inevitable that chefs would begin borrowing and melding ingredients, flavors, and methods from a broad mélange of international styles. The result is California Cuisine.

2 Other Cuisines

It would be difficult to think of an authentic national cuisine that is not represented by at least one restaurant in the city. That includes Tibetan, Eritrean, Afghan, Kurdish, and Bolivian, as well as the more standard Thai, Vietnamese, Russian, and most European countries.

3 Reservations

If you're hankering after a fancy meal in one of the more famous restaurants, you'd do best to call in advance, sometimes up to two months ahead in the case of one or two of the top Bay Area draws. For the middling places, making a reservation a day or two before should suffice, unless you choose a weekend night.

4 Drinks

Good restaurants have sommeliers, so you can usually depend on their wine choices to go with what you have ordered. If you choose your own wine, remember that California wines are identified by grape rather than by region. If beer is more your thing, there are excellent local brews that compete very well with the best European products. And don't forget to try the local mineral waters (see p67).

5 Tax and Tipping

Sales tax applies to restaurants, so 8.5 percent will be added to your total check. You should leave at least a 15 percent tip (see p135). You may add the tip to your credit card slip, or leave it in cash on the table.

6 Choosing Hotel Locations

Do you want to be right in the heart of the action? Do you want a view of the Bay? Do you want to experience one of the unique neighborhoods? Once you've decided, you can zero in on the right price-range (see pp142–9).

7 Hotel Gradings

Accommodations of every sort are to be found in the city and its environs. There is a star-based grading system, which pertains to certain amenities, such as telephone, TV, frigobar, etc.

8 Making Hotel Reservations

San Francisco generally fills up quickly in almost every price category, so don't waste a moment securing a reservation. Telephone bookings are accepted with a valid credit card, although some may require a fax before confirming.

9 Extra Costs and Tipping

Parking at Downtown Hotels is almost always extra, paid on a per night basis, and a flat fee of up to $1 (sometimes more) is charged for each phone call made from the room, even if it is a toll-free number. Anything you take from a frigobar will be surcharged. You will receive an itemized bill when you check out. Tipping is important for any service provided (see p135).

10 Traveling with Kids

Many hotels levy no extra charge for children under 12 staying in their parents' room, and some raise the age as high as 18 – ask in advance. However, some charge an extra $10–$45 for a roll-away bed and charge for a child of any age. Some of the best family-friendly accommodations are found among the motels along the Marina and in the Fisherman's Wharf area, where parking is usually included too.

TOP 10 Budget Hotels and Hostels

1 Coventry Motor Inn

A good, basic motel, offering large pleasant rooms with bay windows, located on the Marina's "Motel Row." It isn't beautiful, but it's functional and reliable. All rooms are no-smoking, and parking is complimentary. A minimum stay may apply on some weekends. ☎ 1901 Lombard St • Map F2 • (415) 567-1200 • www.coventrymotorinn.com • Dis. access • $

2 Beck's Motor Lodge

Handy for the Castro, the Lower Haight, and the Mission, this is one of those no-frills, what-you-see-is-what-you-get places, simple and very serviceable, and quiet, given its prime location. Free parking is a plus, and cable TV, too. ☎ 2222 Market St • Map F4 • (415) 621-8212 • www.becks-motorlodges.com • No air conditioning • $

3 Chelsea Motor Inn

Vaguely English Tudor in style, with a slate roof, the rooms are comfortable and fairly large, and a few have bay windows. The location is convenient to the Marina and Pacific Heights. Free parking, cable TV, and in-room coffee maker. All no-smoking. ☎ 2095 Lombard St • Map E2 • (415) 563-5600 • www.chelseamotorinn.com • Dis. access • $
